This Sunday is homecoming at Pleasant Grove Methodist Church. Also Clanton Circuit of Methodist Churches Singing Convention will hold its fourth singing at this church at 2:00 p.m. Mr. Audie Brown will be the chairman. We had a very successful singing last Sunday at Cedar Grove.

Attend R.A. Congress

Royal Ambassadors from 22 states were the guests of Atlanta, Georgia, last week when 6,000 boys, "Ambassadors for Christ," enjoyed a three-day Congress, the largest assembly of Baptist boys in history. These three days were filled with inspiration as they listened to inspiring talks and song service from J. D. Grey, J. I. Bishop, Jack Hamm, Frank Braggs and others.

Enjoying this convention from the First Baptist Church of Clanton were six boys from the Intermediate R.A.: Harold Henderson, Terry Jones, Edwin Mullins, Johnnie Mac Taylor, Jerry Wright, Charles Cobern and their leader, Hoover Moatts.

Americans don't see America first, or any other time. Nor do they know much about their past. Which is to say they don't know where they are, nor where they've been. That's even truer of Alabamians. — Montgomery Advertiser.

Worse than that they don't know where they're going.

THE STORY ABOUT CASEY JONES

On the very spot where in 1900 his train rammed into the rear end of a long freight, Casey Jones was honored recently. The occasion took place near Vaughan, Mississippi, where fifty-three years ago the Illinois Central Cannonball Express piled up into that long freight train.

At the recent occasion, the fireman who jumped from the engine Jones operated, his 81-year-old widow, and many other close associates were present. The fireman, Sim T. Webb, told reporters Casey's last words were: "Jump, Sim, jump!"

Webb also recalled the last hours of the famous railroader, who now has become a part of the country's railroad legend. It seems that Casey and Webb had pulled into Memphis, Tenn., April 28th, 1900, expecting to get off duty. However, another of the line's engineers was ill and Casey Jones was substituted. Webb went along as fireman.

The fireman also recalls that Casey was an hour and a half late when he started out and very tired. Nevertheless, the Cannonball made up time steadily under the driving hand of the famed engineer. As the Cannonball approached Vaughan, Miss., it had made up the lost time. It was about 3:30 a.m. in the Mississippi city, 200 miles south of Memphis.

Jones saw the long freight ahead of him on the track and knew he had no chance to stop his engine in time to prevent a disastrous collision. He turned to his engineer, Webb, and yelled: "Jump, Sim, jump!" The fireman jumped and saved his life. Casey Jones and the Cannonball ploughed into the long freight and Casey died at the throttle in the shattering wreck which ensued.

To commemorate that famous wreck, and the life of a hero of American folklore, a marker was dedicated near Vaughan to the memory of Casey Jones. The engineer most certainly never dreamed he would be so well known in these United States, and yet there is hardly a boy in the country who has not sung the words to "Casey Jones" or heard the tale of the brave engineer, who is now one of the major characters in American folklore.

OES Women Contribute Money To Masonic Haven Of Rest

Montgomery, Ala. — Thousands of Alabama Women, generous and kind-hearted members of the Order of the Eastern Star, have contributed much money and effort through the years in creating hospital facilities at the Alabama Masonic Home near this Capitol City. The Order of the Eastern Star's latest accomplishment in this respect was the equipping and furnishing of the Haven of Rest hospital, a modern one-story fire proof building with accommodations for 60 men and women. The members of this outstanding Masonic body spent $10,000 on this project. The Haven of Rest hospital was constructed with funds from the Grand Lodge, F. & A. M., of Alabama.

The Haven of Rest has spacious single and twin bedrooms, all with connecting baths. The rooms are painted in bright and cheerful colors and the furnishings are modern and comfortable, resembling those of a luxurious private home, rather than the uninviting appearance of the old-time hospital. Master Masons who are now endeavoring to raise a Million Dollar Endowment Fund for the permanent maintenance of the Alabama Masonic Home and farm through Grand Master Joseph S. Southall, express their deep appreciation to the Order of the Eastern Star for it's generosity.

The O.E.S., has always helped the Alabama Masonic Home. The Eastern Star Hospital, which has served guests of the Masonic Home for a number of years, was dedicated on December 2, 1914.

Master Masons are urged by Grand Master Southall to contribute to the Masonic Home Endowment Fund in order that elderly brethren, their widows and orphans may enjoy security during future years.

"I REMEMBER" BY THE OLD TIMERS

From Mrs. William Watson, Berwick, Illinois: I remember well the late spring ritual of straw mattresses being emptied and refilled with clean and sweet straw after oats harvesting. It was a tedious process because my mother was particular that only the finest straw was used.

The "spare" bed, of course, had a fine goose feather mattress on top of the straw, as did one or two of the other beds. One was from geese she had plucked.

I remember, also, how we enjoyed fresh ground coffee for breakfast, ground by our two-hand grinders. And our small red and white fringed napkins.

I remember, too, my grandfather's big, hollowed-out log that grandmother used for storing her lard during the first years of her married life, as well as many of the other household items she had.

From Harmon C. Hall, Baton Rouge, Louisiana: I remember when I was a child that ox teams were used altogether to supply logs to the saw mills and that men would walk as far as two miles to work on a farm, go to work before daylight and work all day for 50 cents.

From J. C. Galloway, Punta Gorda, Fla.: I remember when a plug tobacco chopper stood on every grocery counter, and barrels of coffee and sugar stood open in the back room. Small boys would look longingly at the sugar and hope the grocer would invite them to have a lump, which he rarely did.

DALE CARNEGIE

AUTHOR OF "HOW TO STOP WORRYING AND START LIVING"

OLIN A. PALMER, JR., 5109 Ardmore Way, Baltimore, Maryland, lost his right eye twelve years ago. Dejected? He says unless you have gone through a similar experience, you have no way of knowing the dejection he felt. He was only sixteen, and it was like losing half of his life. It meant that unless he could overcome his handicap he was destined to be a failure.

One day in a book about worrying he read "evergreen forests know how to bend, how to bow down their branches, how to cooperate with the inevitable." These words stuck in his memory, and he followed that philosophy. Instead of worrying about his loss, he told himself how fortunate he was to have one good eye. Rather than feel bad because he had lost half his sight, he realized how fortunate he was that he wasn't totally blind. In other words, he "cooperated with the inevitable."

CARNEGIE

Since that fatal day he has served three and one-half years in the army, traveling all over the country. He is a graduate of the University of Denver, from which he received an A.B. degree, and a graduate of the Southwest Photo-Arts Institute, and he says he is going right ahead bettering himself month by month.

CONGRESSIONAL Quiz

Q—If the U. S. should enter a Pacific alliance modeled after the North Atlantic Treaty Organization (NATO), would we have to send troops to fight in French Indo-China?

A—As Sen. H. Alexander Smith (R.-N. J.) pointed out recently, the NATO treaty provides that an attack on any member will be considered an attack on all. If France and the U. S. agree to a similar pact in Asia, the Communist Viet Minh forces theoretically would be attacking us, and we probably would be obligated to send armed forces in addition to the aid we now give. Smith agreed with Sen. Robert A. Taft (R.-Ohio) that a NATO-type set-up in Asia would be a good thing, but said he didn't think we would have to promise as much as we do on the other side of the world.

A—No. Until Eisenhower had already won, Knowland stood by Gov. Earl Warren (R.-Calif.)

Q—Can Congress order the UN Secretary-General not to hire an American leftist?

A—Not theoretically. The UN Charter forbids the Secretary-General to accept direction from any national government. However, on June 8 the Senate passed a bill to punish Americans who accept UN jobs without FBI security clearance.

Spangler recently completed his 60 holes of golf to celebrate his 68th birthday. The professor, who usually shoots in the low 80's, made a birdie 3 on the 69th hole.

A BLACK DAY

Harpenden, England — Taking the family for a ride, a father asked his son to take the pet dog for a walk while he fixed the car, which had broken down. While the boy was away, the auto, still in gear, shot forward and wrecked a gas lamp on the country road. The father took one whiff of the escaping gas and collapsed. The car overturned, and the mother received a black eye from the jolt. When the boy returned and saw the scene, he fainted. The dog howled and ran away.

IN MEMORY

In memory of my dear husband, Rev. B. S. Sanders, who departed this life August 7, 1951:

Rev. Sanders, Oh, Rev. Sanders,
How I do mourn;
Since the angels came and carried you Home.
Your footsteps I do not hear,
And your tender smiles bring no more cheer.
My heart is burdened as I wait humbly here,
I hope to meet you some day
Which will be forever to stay.
Yes, with your words of cheer I still press on,
Forward, upward I go, I sing the song,
As God is, I am; I love, I know.
Some day I will rest on Heaven's peaceful Shore.

Signed, Wife,
MRS. ROXIE SANDERS.

BOTTOMS UP!

A Last Drink — A Last Drive

The party's over—Bottoms Up! Let's get going!

For thousands of men and women—children and pedestrians, too—that has been the beginning of the end. On the highway at night, where the road curved and the hazy driver drove straight ahead, there was another "Bottoms Up!" and the end of the last drive.

It's hard to convince a person who has had a few drinks that he shouldn't drive. Alcoholic stimulation engenders a false confidence in his ability. In reality, his reactions have slowed down, his perception and judgment lowered—driving alertness gone. In a later stage the road blurs, lights blind as he fights drowsiness, loses control.

Seldom is he endangering his life alone. He is also endangering the lives of those traveling with him and others on the streets and highways. In 35 states 166,179 drivers lost their licenses in 1952 for drinking and driving. Thirty-five per cent of all revocations are brought against drinking drivers.

If you have been drinking, either let someone else drive, leave your car and call a taxi, or stay where you are until your senses clear. Stay off the road!

Don't kid yourself into a "Bottoms Up" drive—it can be fatal!

SLOW DOWN—LIVES ARE IN YOUR HANDS!

The Service 11:00.
Sunday School 10:00.
Everybody welcome.

"For I am not ashamed of the Gospel of Christ; for it is the power of God unto salvation to everyone that believeth; to the Jew first, and also the Greek." Romans 1:16.

These words should strike a ready response in the heart of every Christian because they were spoken by one of Christianity's most ardent and dynamic preachers, the Apostle Paul. He knew full well the personal cost of being a servant of Christ, but he was more than willing to pay the price in order that the gospel of life may be spread among men.

Unfortunately there is a common fallacy held by too many church members that the minister is the only one who is to witness for Christ to the unsaved. Actually, however, the mandate to proclaim the gospel is intended for all presume to call themselves Christians. While it is true that God does not call everyone to the ministry or mission field, nevertheless, your baptism and church membership carry with them obligations to your Lord and your church to help win souls.

It should be needless to say, therefore, that the pastors cannot do the work of evangelism alone. The field is too vast and the harvest too great for a small group of men to handle effectively; we must have help — your help.

So, awake, Christian laymen, to the challenge of the hour, and be ready to give a testimony for your Christian faith. Let us arise and be busy about the Master's business ere the day of grace be ended.

Thorsby Institute News—

In the beautiful Berkshire Hills, at North Adams, Mass., not far from Cheshire, where Miss Jenkins is this summer is the State Teachers' College. Its President is Dr. Grover C. Bowman. At the Commencement Exercises of the summer session, held August 15th in Pittsfield, Dr. Bowman gave the address from which this quotation is taken: "It is high time in education when we in the field of education should bend every effort to preserve our culture, which is being attacked from within and without the country's boundaries. There are certain basic truths which we must pass on to the children whether they like to study them or not. . . .We are rapidly getting to the point where we are confusing technical efficiency with education.". Dr. Bowman thinks that objectives of education set thousands of years ago by the Greeks, truth, goodness and beauty, are musts for modern civilization.

Miss Jenkins wrote that she was leaving Cheshire, Mass., August 22, on her trip back to Thorsby. Mrs. Jenkins is coming back with Miss Jenkins. Miss Grace Stanley has been in poor health this summer and plans to stop off at Demorest, Ga., to stay with Miss Leach at the "Leach House" old ladies home.

Do not forget that Thorsby Institute has opening day on Tuesday, September first, at 10:00 a.m. All friends and interested parties are invited. Everybody helping will make this a good and profitable school year, whaterer or wherever the school.

PUBLISHES NEW BOOK

Montgomery, Ala. — Montgomery County Circuit Judge Walter B. Jones last week announced the publication of a new book, "Alabama Jury Instructions." The book is in two volumes, containing 1,300 pages, and is published by the West Publishing Co., St. Paul, Minn.

Dedicated to the memory of the Judge Benjamin P. Crum, of Montgomery, the book contains more than 3,000 written instructions to juries which have been approved by the Supreme Court of Alabama and the Court of Appeals. These opinions date back as far as 1819.

"Alabama Jury Instructions" is the result of three years work and contains Judge Jones' experiences of 33 years on the bench. Judge Jones is the newly-elected first vice-president of the Alabama Bar Association.

Fewer Welfare Cases Reported In July

Montgomery, Ala. — A decrease of 300 welfare cases and a more than $1,700 in assistance expenditures in July, as compared with June, was reported today by Commissioner Bill Dorrough. On the average, individual payments rose slightly, from $29.88 in June to $29.95 in July.

Dorrough said the decline in caseload and increases in payments were decidedly marked when compared with date for January, 1951. Since then, the number received aid per month has dropped by more than 13,000, whereas average payments have increased by $7.16.

In July payments totaled $2,907,623.54 to 97,071 cases. These included 68,031 aged, 1,506 blind, 17,637 families with dependent children, 672 children in foster care, totally and permanently disabled, and 174 emergency cases.

"This report indicates continuing effects of stricter policies and careful casework service to help more people help themselves. The aim is also to provide more adequate grants to the neediest who do get aid," Dorrough declared. He pointed out that the agency now has more experienced workers and less personnel turnover.

Laws and policies primarily responsible for the caseload drop were cited by Dorrough. Since October 1951 the Relative Responsibility Law has caused 8,459 cases to be closed, 1,616 applications to be denied and 2,413 payments to be reduced. Also since October, 1951, there have been 880 cases closed and 369 applications denied because of the $800 real property limitation.

Step-parents and other substitute parents in the home are now held responsible for support in 415 dependent children cases, all of which have been closed since April 1953. Another 259 cases have been closed because they owned cars or trucks not used in business for a profit.

Many of us who have followed the "Dionne Quintuplets" throughout the years will be interested in the following write-up appearing in a recent edition of a local newspaper.

"The Dionne Quintuplets, together since they were born 19 years ago, are now to go their separate ways. Marie will become a nun and her sisters will continue school. Their father, Oliva Dionna, told the North Bay Nugget that Marie will enter a Catholic religious order. Yvonne will study art with the Notre Dame Congregation in Montreal, and Cecile, Annette and Emilie will attend the Institute Familial in Nicolet, Que., Dionne explained that the group was being broken up because the quints are thinking seriously of their future.

Joe Brady and Associates Salute and Congratulate A New Clanton Firm-

Chilton County's Largest Logs!

A salute and congratulations to a new Clanton firm: Clanton Small Motors Service, owned and operated by Mr. J. W. O'Neal.

The firm of Joe H. Brady & Associates, distributors of the famous McCulloch Chain Saw, is proud to list Clanton Small Motors as a dealer for the McCulloch Chain Saw.

To this unusual, built-to-take-it chain saw recently went the honor of cutting one of Chilton County's largest logs. In the hands of Luther Smitherman (shown above), of the M. C. Barth Lumber Company, a Model 3-25 McCulloch Chain Saw did the job.

Fitted with a 24-inch blade and in the hands of this experienced logger, the McCulloch Chain Saw felled, topped out and cut into logs this giant pine, measuring 51 inches in diamter. The overall time was just 58 minutes — quick work and a tribute both to Mr. Smitherman and the McCulloch Saw.

Veteran Chilton County lumbermen say the 51-inch diameter pine, probably one of the last big fellows in this section, produced 3,900 board feet of lumber.

Loggers and farmers are invited to see the famous McCulloch Chain Saw in action by visiting Mr. O'Neal at Clanton Small Motors, located just south of the M. C. Barth Lumber Company, on the main street. Although Mr. O'Neal's firm sells only McCulloch Chain Saws, it also repairs small gasoline engines of all types.

Another great honor has come to Miss Pat Huddleston, who, it seems, is destined to have many. And to repeat a remark you hear every day: "It couldn't happen to a nicer person." As you know Pat was named "Maid of Cotton" for Chilton County last week and will compete in the state finals in October. You can see Pat on television next Friday night at 9:30 o'clock. The channel is 13, bet that's Pat's lucky number.

Gonna have a hard time giving credit where credit is due to those who worked so hard and contributed so much to our first County Fair in a dozen years. It wasn't the biggest in the world but it was a wonderful beginning. Multiply our stock and agricultural exhibits about ten times so that more of our farmers will have a personal interest and get our local merchants to dig down for bigger and better prizes and we'll have the best little County Fair in the state.

School starts today. Never saw so many smiling faces going down the street. Of course after the first day and lessons have been assigned the smiles will change to something more serious. But kids don't really hate to go to school any more. Even the little boys seem to be getting a kick out of reading, 'riting and 'rithmetic.

A meeting of interest to all fathers of little boys and to many with sporting blood who are not fathers, will be held Tuesday night, September 1st, at the City Hall at 7 o'clock. This is a meeting to organize the Little League for next year. The boys had a jam-up team this year and can have a better team next year if the men of Clanton will back them. Here is your opportunity to cooperate in doing something for the boys. Are you willing?

Our story today has to do with a certain local citizen who decided to do some cement work in front of his home. Seems every day as he worked an old hen that had been around the house for some years kept walking up and down watching him. Each time he went out to work the old hen was there—just watching. Finally we figured it out. The old hen wanted to see a man lay a sidewalk.

1953 County Fair Is Acclaimed Huge Success By Officials

Citizens and officials alike yesterday proclaimed the 1953 Chilton County Fair one of the best and most successful in the history of the county.

Judge M. D. (Dave) Tingle reported that he felt the fair was a tremendous success. He further stated that he had never seen as many people attend anything in Chilton County like they had the fair that ended last Saturday night.

M. K. (Red) Glasscock, County Agent, stated yesterday that he felt the fair was very successful and that the crowds that had attended the fair were way beyond his expectations.

Mr. Harold Foshee, President of the Chilton County Chamber of Commerce, said yesterday that he was very enthusiastic over the reception the people of the county gave the fair. He said that he felt it was a tremendous success and hoped that the Chamber would see fit to again sponsor the event.

Although crowds by the hundreds and thousands gathered at the Clanton Airport for the fair this year from the opening gong last Tuesday, officials stated that last Saturday was the biggest day by far. They reported that it was impossible to estimate the crowds that gathered for the event.

The whole five-day event was run off with only minor mishap, what with one car reported to have gone off into the ditch beside the parking area. Many other motorists reported that they were for a time jammed up in traffic and were unable to extricate their vehicles when they were ready to leave for home. However, this complaints were few and far between and no serious complaint was registered as far as the fair officials could ascertain.

Last Sunday wrecking crews were back at the fair pulling down many of the exhibits and many of the amusement company's regalia. And again yesterday morning many of the commercial exhibitors were pulling out their exhibits and storing them away to be used again in next year's exhibition. And by Tuesday morning everything at the airport is expected to be back at normal again after the big county scrappers have cleaned up the inside of the hangar and the county trucks have hauled away the trash.

LARGE INCREASE IN PHONE DIRECTORIES

Indicative of the growth of Clanton and surrounding communities is the large increase in the number of telephone directories now being distributed to local telephone subscribers.

Approximately 2460 new directories have been delivered to homes and businesses, according to J. W. Mitchell, manager for Southern Bell Telephone Company, compared with 2200 when the last directory was delivered.

The new telephone directory contains many new and changed listings and other helpful telephone information and is easily distinguishable from the old green-covered telephone book by its yellow stripe across the grey cover. A sufficient quantity of the new directories has been printed to supply every telephone subscriber and to allow for future telephone expansion.

The classified section — yellow pages — contains listings for business telephone subscribers under headings alphabetized according to their businesses or profissions. "The variety of classifications describing products, services, professions and businesses provides a convenient ready reference guide when you want to locate a firm or individual," Mr. Mitchell pointed out.

He requests that the old directory be discarded and that the new directory be referred to when telephone numbers are desired. Looking up the desired numbers helps to avoid the possibility of getting wrong numbers and saves time for both the calling and called parties. "Information" should be called only when the number you are seeking is not listed in the directory.

Nanette Nivens Gave Recital

MISS NANETTE NIVENS

A musical social event of interest last week was the song recital of Miss Nanette Nivens, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Houston Nivens, at the home of her teacher, Mrs. Raymond P. Mims. Miss Nivens has been a leader in the musical life of the young people of Clanton, both in church and community activities, and in school where she served as leader of her section in glee club, as soloist, and as student director. For two years she was song leader for the state organization of F.H.A. Her recital was the culmination of these activities and several years of study both in piano and voice. Next month Miss Nivens will enter college at University of Tampa. About forty friends and relatives were present to enjoy this very expressive program by the charming young singer and to wish her well as she begins a new phase of study.

Miss Bobbie Gray, a sophomore music student at Alabama College, contributed two fine piano numbers to the occasion. Accompanying Miss Nivens was Mrs. Mims. Miss Donna Klinner received the guests as they arrived. Mrs. Luther Little and Mrs. Reese Mullins served during the delightful social hour that followed the recital.

Little Leaguers To Meet Tonight

The Clanton Little League baseball team and their sponsors, the businessmen of Clanton are to meet Tuesday (tonight) at the City Hall at 7 o'clock. The meeting is for the purpose of organizing and several important business matters are to be brought before the meeting. You are requested to be there.

WARNING!

Chief of Clanton Police, Charles Tucker, yesterday issued a warning to Clanton motorists that violators of the school bus traffic laws will be vigously prosecuted. Chief Tucker reported that yesterday, the first day of school, he saw three cases where motorists passed stopped school busses. Chief Tucker reports that it is a direct violation to pass a stopped school bus if the motorists approaches the bus from either the front or the back. Chief Tucker said that he had instructed his patrolmen to be on the lookout for future violators.

Service Station Entered Here Thursday Night

Burglars last Thursday night entered the Pan-Am Service Station in Clanton and escaped with $32 in cash. Officials reported that the burglars entered the service station some time between 9:00 p.m. and 6:00 a.m. by forcing their way through a window.

FORTUNATE AID

Traverse City, Mich. — It was fortunate for little Edward Smith, 18 months old, that Otto Fortunate, of Detroit, passed his way recently. The baby had crawled from the playpen where his mother placed him in the yard of their home on the bay and was face down in the water when Fortunate strolled by. He summoned help and started administering artificial respiration. The child was rushed to a hospital where oxygen revived him.

Adding To Danger-

Highways Are Undermanned, Most State Police Overworked

Highways would be far safer if undemanned and overworked state police and highway patrol forces on rural roads were expanded to proper strength to cope more adequately with speeders and other law violators whose accidents claim the majority of motor vehicle victims, a traffic safety authority contended today.

Thomas N. Boate, accident prevention department manager of the Association of Casulty and Surety Companies and himself a former Pennsylvania State Police captain in charge of traffic, summed up the vital need for strengthening the nation's enforcement arm on the highways by citing the extremely long hours worked by state police officers on patrol duty in the majority of states.

Only 13 states have a work week of 48 hours or less for their state policemen, he declared. The work week for state policemen in the other states surveyed ranges from up to nearly 100 hours a week, as follows:

One state has a 96-hour week for its state policemen.

Seven states have work weeks ranging from 70 to 76 hours.

In 12 states the state police work from 60 to 69 hours a week.

Nine other states have work weeks for these officers of from 50 to 57 hours.

The patrolmen in Chilton County work at least 9 hours per day, six days of the week, and at least 12 hours on Saturday. They are reported to get five days per month off.

"How can any state begin to deal effectively with increased numbers of speeders and other violators of traffic laws if its state police are called upon to work up to twice as long as other workers do on the average?" asked Mr. Boate. "It is evident that many states are behind the times in coping with the increased needs of road patrol duty with forces of men that are inadequate in strength and greatly over-worked from the standpoint of hours of duty. Only three states have a 40-hour week and 11 a 48-hour week for state police.

"The public needs and wants more protection from the law-breakers of the highways who menace their safety. As one direct step toward the goal of greater safety on the rural roads where the speeders exact the biggest tolls of lives and maimed victims, civic and safety organizations and influential citizens should demand, and not rest until they get, state police forces of sufficient manpower. In the states where long tours of duty exist for state police or highway patrol officers, normal work-weeks should be instituted to help increase the efficiency of the forces."

According to Mr. Boate, state police personnel enforcing traffic laws are averaging only one arrest or warning for every 118 miles traveled by patrol cars in rural areas. If the rural highways were adequately patrolled, he pointed out, "traffic contacts" should average one for at least every 40 miles patrolled, as estimated by the International Association of Chiefs of Police. A "traffic contact" means either an arrest or a warning for a traffic violation. Only 10 states have met this standard, he added.

Mr. Boate said it has been conservatively estimated that from 5,000 to 7,500 more highway patrolmen are needed in the nation as a whole to protect the public more adequately against accidents caused by drivers violating traffic laws. He emphasized that any personnel added to these forces should be assigned entirely to rural highways, "where they will do the most good" in reducing accidents.

The former state police captain, who has been a leader in the fight against excessive highway speeds as the cause of most rural accident fatalities and serious injuries, also called attention to the importance attached by the enforcement section of the President's Highway Safety Conference to the problem of in sufficient manpower to enforce traffic laws on rural roads: Its report said in part:

"State (police) departments still are plagued with the hardy perennial—insufficient manpower to do a completely satisfactory job of traffic supervision on their highways. Lack of manpower and of selective enforcement, plus excessive speed, are undoubtedly some of the reasons for the continuing increase in traffic fatalities in rural areas."

ORCHIDS

Stakes were pulled Saturday night on the best fair in the history of Chilton County.

Much gratitude and many compliments are due to the many men who put so much time and effort into the production of this year's fair and they have set a high goal for the fair committees, in years to come, to work towards. This committee worked tirelessly for months in the planning and preparation of this fair and their efforts turned into an exposition that topped anything held heretofore.

The businesses of Clanton are to be congratulated on taking a part in the exhibits and fair. They put much time, labor and money into transforming the hangar into an exhibit that drew multitudes daily and nightly.

Also, orchids are due the people of Chilton County for the warm welcome they gave the fair and the wonderful response they made in attendance. The crowds were consistently orderly and showed in their eagerness the need for this extra recreation.

A bouquet is due also, to the Lee Amusement Co., for sending down the cleanest and most entertaining carnival that Chilton ever had.

So it's orchids to everyone and let's strive to make it even bigger and better next year.

THE RETIREMENT OF GENERAL BRADLEY

The retirement of General of the Army Omar N. Bradley this month removes a familiar military figure, known to many soldiers as the "G. I.'s General," from the U. S. scene. His retirement from active service brings to an end the story-book rist of a poor American boy to fame and an international reputation.

Bradley was field commander of the largest force of U. S. fighting troops assembled together in World War II. It was his men who achieved the break-through at St. Lo in August, 1944, and the tactical plan was his. He later became the nation's first chairman of the Joint Chiefs of Staff, in which post he served two terms.

In his book, President Dwight D. Eisenhower praises Bradley most highly, describing him as having always performed the task assigned him and being the man who never disappointed his Supreme Commander in all the difficult days of fighting in Europe. Aside from military achievements, however, the success of Omar Bradley is a pure and refreshing American success story.

After finishing high school in Missouri, Bradley went to work for a railroad. He did not have the money to go to college. A friend suggested he go to one of the service academies and Bradley replied he didn't even have enough money to go to a Missouri college. Upon learning that they paid him, however, to attend a service academy, Bradley became interested.

"Omar" wrote his Congressman, who informed him that the appointment had already been made, but that he was welcome to stand the examination as an alternate in case the principal failed to pass entrance examinations.

Bradley talked it over with his former school superintendent and finally said he would take the examination if his railroad employer gave him the day off. The railroad not only gave him the day off, but gave him transportation, and Omar Bradley stood the West Point examination. Shortly afterwards he was informed that the principal had not gained admission to the academy, and that he was to report to West Point. That is how the nation happened to enlist the military abilities of one of its foremost leaders in World War II.

By chance, General George Marshall, then Army Chief of Staff, happened to hear Bradley deliver a lecture on machine-gun tactics at Fort Benning shortly before World War II. Marshall told associates it was the best lecture of its kind he had ever heard. Thereafter, Marshall and another rising general, Dwight D. Eisenhower, were very influential in Bradley's rise to fame. Bradley, however, deserved and earned every promotion he received. The nation is indebted to him for his long and brilliant service to his country.

CONGRESSIONAL Quiz

Q—Are most Congressmen service veterans?

A—Yes. Sixty-four of 96 Senators—exactly two-thirds—are veterans. In the House, 245 of 431 (57 per cent) have served in the armed forces. Over-all, 59 per cent of the Congressmen are veterans.

Q—Do ex-Congressmen retain the privilege of sending mail postage-free?

A—The franking privilege continues until Dec. 1 after an ex-Congressman's term expires, giving him not quite 11 months' leeway to clear up his mail. Free postage is supposed to be confined to official correspondence, which usually is interpreted broadly—so broadly that ex-Congressmen have been known to mail campaign material under the frank.

Q—The papers are full of stories about the excess profits tax. Excess of what?

A—Under the EPT law, a corporation's normal profits are set at 83 per cent of its average earnings during the three most profitable years from 1946 through 1949. Besides paying regular corporation taxes on all its profits, the corporation pays an additional 30 per cent on earnings above the "normal" level. There are certain exemptions.

Q—How does the Supreme Court's June 8 verdict, upholding a District of Columbia anti-segregation law, affect home rule for D.C.?

A—The 1873 law upheld by the Court was passed by a District legislature, not by Congress. The local assembly later was abolished, and Congress has since been serving as the District's city council. In its opinion, the Court ruled, in part, that Congress had the right to give the local lawmakers power to enact D.C. legislation. Therefore, doubts about Congress' legal authority once again to delegate some of its powers over local affairs to a District legislature have been eliminated. A home-rule bill, which would establish a nine-member city council, is under Senate consideration.

Around OUR HOUSE

by Kathryn Tucker Windham

Our four-year-old considers himself quite grown-up about most things, but he still doesn't like to leave home, not even to visit the neighbors, unless some member of the family goes with him.

The other day the neighbor down the street telephoned him that she had a space man, his current interest, for him. He was pleased and excited, but he wouldn't go alone to get his gift.

"You can go by yourself," I encouraged him. "It's just down the street where you've been hundreds of times."

"Well," he answered slowly, "I need somebody to go with me because sometimes I forget to tell people thank you when they give me things, and that's not polite. So somebody will have to go with me to remind me to be polite."

The six-year-old went along.

By now I should know that the next door neighbor has a good reason for all the things she does, no matter how strange they seem. I couldn't help being surprised the other morning though when I went over and found her in the living room with a compass in her hand.

Surely, I thought, she doesn't need a compass to find her way around in her own home!

It turned out she was using the compass to locate the studs in the wall so she could hang a new picture she had bought. The needle of the compass, she told me, points to the studs because it is attracted by the nails.

I started to tell her that she could locate the studs by seeing where the nails for the baseboards are driven, but she seemed pleased with her own method so I said nothing.

"Mother," said the six-year-old reproachfully, "I'm afraid you're getting a very bad habit."

"What?" I asked hastily.

"It seems you're getting in the habit of saying, 'No,' all the time.'"

After thinking about it for a while, I'm afraid there's much truth in the accusation. The habit of saying, "No," is a very easy one for busy mothers to acquire.

The recent pleasantly cool days prompted our neighbor down the street to take her blankets out of moth balls and get them ready for Winter use.

She gave them a good sudsing to freshen them up. To the final rinse water she added a tablespoon of household ammonia.

"The ammonia," she explained, "raises the nap of the blankets and makes them soft and fluffy.

As soon as Winter clothes come out of storage, their space is filled with Summer things which won't be used for several months. Our next door neighbor keeps her white dresses, blouses and other delicate white articles from turning yellow by blueing a large pillow case and storing the things in it.

For a pretty and good salad for a late summer meal, slice large, unpeeled tomatoes in four slices. Mix 1-3 cup diced cucumber and 1-3 cup diced celery into 1-2 pound cottage cheese. Season with grated onion, salt and pepper. Spread the cheese filling on the tomato slices, stack slices on lettuce and serve with mayonnaise.

BROKEN BONES

Education is needed to prevent accidents of all types. Indeed knowledge and adherence to safety rules would reduce the number of deaths, the loss of an arm, leg or an eye, and particularly the number of broken bones.

A fracture is an interruption or a break in the continuity of a bone. A fracture may be closed or one in which the skin is not broken, or it may be open in which the skin is broken. Sometimes in the more severe types of open fractures the bones may even protrude through the skin.

Fractures may also be complete, broken entirely through, or incomplete in which the bone is merely cracked or broken partially through. This latter group includes greenstick fractures frequently seen in children. They are called greenstick because just as a green piece of wood will often bend before it breaks, so the bones of children will bend and crack but will not always break through.

Bones are broken through falls, when twisted, when struck by another object, or when the body is thrown off balance in such a manner as to cause an unusual force to be applied to the bone. Symptoms indicating a fracture include swelling, discoloration, blisters or blebs on the skin, pain and unusual or flexible motion in areas where joints are not present. While there is usually inability to bear weight or move the extremity, or motion is limited and painful, it should be remembered that some of the most serious fractures often are present when weight bearing and motion are possible, although usually painful.

Many fractures can be prevented. Slipping on highly polished floors and rugs, falling off unstable ladders, running down stairs, hurrying to get a bus or train, stepping unwarily off curbstones, or careless driving of an automobile are all factors in preventable accidents. Avoid these, and you may prevent a bone from breaking.

Less Calories And More Nutrition From Potatoes

Potatoes deserve a more important place in the menu, especially in budget meals, says Mary Hulsey, API Extension nutritionist.

"A generously daily serving of potatoes furnishes as much as one fourth of your vitamin C quota, besides some of the B vitamins, iron, and other important minerals," she adds. "Freshly harvested potatoes now coming to market are higher in vitamin C than those which have been stored for several months."

Contrary to popular opinion, potatoes need not be fattening, continues Miss Hulsey. One medium-sized potato has about 100 calories—no more than an apple or banana and only half as much as a medium-sized piece of pie. It's the added fat or gravy that piles up the calories. So if you're keeping an eye on your weight, watch what you put on the potatoes and how you prepare them.

"I REMEMBER"

BY THE OLD TIMERS

From Mrs. Henry B. Moody, De-Witt, Arkansss: I remember when Uncle Bill Prange of Crockett's Bluff, Arkansas, would take his place by the Christmas tree which was gleaming with taBew candles. Excitement was running high, but Uncle Bill stood calmly, holding a long, cane fishing pole with a wet cloth tied on the end of it. If a stray spark appeared among the cedar, he would quietly "smudge" it out, and no one got alarmed during the Christmas program at the church.

From Mrs. Julia Shaw, Grandville, Michigan: I remember watching my folks thrash buckwheat. Father would cradle the grain, mother would rake it in bundles and set it up and bind it with a few buckwheat straws. When it was ready to thrash father would smooth a spot on the ground and lay rails on the smooth spot and they would flail the buckwheat on the rails, shake the straw with pitchforks to get all the grain. Next they would scoop the grain up and run it through a hand mill.

From L. C. Hallman, Winnsboro, Texas: I remember watching my father split pine and build a tar kiln. He used the tar in building and to grease his wagons.

How To Make Friends

WHO SHOULD END THE CALL?

On your local calls, allow the called party or the customer to hang up first.

Sell Fish From Farm Pond Is Advice Of Specialist

Auburn, Ala. — One thousand farm ponds in Alabama now being used only for irrigation and watering livestock can bring additional income to their owners who will market fish from them.

"Farmers who have three or four-acre ponds can make an annual income of from $25 to $50 per acre by selling fish to restaurants, fish markets, wholesalers, etc.," says Earl F. Kennamer, API Extension fish and wildlife specialist. "What's more, one-acre pond owners can boost their incomes too by selling fish to local markets and restaurants."

Alabama is probably the only state in the country where private pond owners can sell game fish to any market they choose, continues the expert. No license or fee is required; farmers simply register their ponds with the State Conservation Department. To do this, write the department, giving your name and the size and location of your pond. Also state your intention to market fish from the pond, and request an acknowledgment of your letter.

Kennamer further states that pond owners don't have to wait on the seasons for stocking their ponds. "Build a small holding pond—anywhere from one-tenth to one-fourth acre in size—directly below your original pond," he explains. "Then when bass spawn in April or May, drain the large pond. Put small bass and bluegills in this holding pond until the big pond can be partially refilled for restocking."

He advises farmers who do not intend to market fish from their ponds to fish heavily. With game fish selling for 40 cents per pound wholesale and not dressed, pond owners must catch an annual minimum of 75 pounds of edible fish per acre to pay for fertilizer costs, which usually run about $30 per acre each year.

Crocheting thread is less likely to become entangled in the work or clothing if it is run through a safety pin fastened to your dress so that the thread is fed to the work from above.

DALE CARNEGIE

AUTHOR OF "HOW TO STOP WORRYING AND START LIVING"

CAMPBELL L. REED, R.D. #1, Canonsburg, Pennsylvania, was in combat with an infantry company in Germany during the last war, and seeing his friends get hit on either side of him—in front and to the rear—made him wonder when his time was coming. He felt that the law of averages would be pretty sure to catch up with him. He began to worry about dying.

CARNEGIE

Soon his stomach felt terrible, the cold sweat soaked his clothes, and before each action his feet felt as if they were incased in concrete.

He didn't want to die! He was still young! He wanted to have a little fun in life, get married, raise a family.

Then he got to thinking. "Reedy, you're not what is known as a religious man, but you do believe in God, in Heaven, and in a life hereafter. And if Heaven is what they say it is, it wouldn't be so bad to die after all. If you have led a good life and go there, you will have no more worries and existence will be wonderful. So death would be a promotion to Heaven."

Firmly believing this, he lost his fear of death!

He has applied the same thought in his civilian life since, and he realizes that when he gets down and out that the worst thing that could happen to him at any time would be a promotion to Heaven. So death can't be so bad after all!

SPORTS CORNER

Ben Hogan

If Ben Hogan never shoots another round of golf as long as he lives, he'll still be called the greatest of them all—even Bobby Jones.

Here's what outstanding sport writers are saying after he annexed the British open:

Leonard Crawley in Daily Telegraph: "Who shall say he is not the best of all times?"

George Harley in The Daily Mirror: "Hogan has proved himself the greatest golfer in the world. His final round was a picture of sustained accuracy, splashed with brilliance."

Fred Pignon in The Daily Mail: "Hogan's victory stamps him the world's greatest golfer of this, if not all times."

And Jack Allen, who caddied for Bobby Jones: "Ben Hogan is the greatest golfer the world has ever seen."

Hogan does not plan to retire, but will rest until next March when he will compete in the Masters Tournament at Augusta, Ga.

Asked if he was coming back to defend his title next year, he said: "I don't think so. I've been traveling 15 years now. I'm 40 and there isn't much mileage left in this old frame. It's time I took it easy."

WINS BRITISH OPEN . . . Ben Hogan, America's top golfer, won British Open golf championship at Carnoustie, Scotland with score of 282 in first appearance in tourney. Hogan also won U. S. Open and Augusta Masters this year.

PLENTY OF CABBAGE

Joliet, Ill. — The cabbage crop at the Stateville Penitentiary was so prolific this year that Warden Joseph E. Ragen didn't know what to do with it. He ordered cabbage or cole slaw served twice daily for three weeks to the inmates, had prisoners put up 150 barrels of sauerkraut, gave hundreds of heads to prison employes and offered free cabbage to hospitals and orphanages in the area. Still left with 150 tons from the five-acre plot, Ragen asked permission to give the vegetable away to the general public.

On January 1 of this year there were 31,600,000 sheep and lambs on U. S. farms and ranches—a decline of nearly 500,000 head from the 1952 figure.

Home Leader Gives Tips About Cleaning Windows

Auburn, Ala. — Wash windows when the sun is not shining directly on them to cause uneven evaporation of the cleaner and give a streaked surface.

It's more economical to use a soft paper instead of a cloth, says Stella Mitchell, API Extension home management specialist. But regardless of what is used, be sure it is lint free.

One tablespoon of washing soda dissolved in a pail of clear water is a good cleaning solution. On a very cold day, adds the home leader, moisten the cloth with alcohol or kerosene. Kerosene is a very efficient, inexpensive cleaner.

"Whiting or some prepared cleaning paste may be used on windows," concludes Miss Mitchell. "Let these dry, and then wipe off the powder which removes the grease film, leaving the windows bright and clear."

Oats And Vetch Make Good Grazing

IT'S almost a certain fact that Alabama farmers this year will plant more oats or oats and vetch for winter grazing than ever before, says D. R. Harbor, API Extension agronomist. And the specialist says it's safer to plant the mixture than oats alone because disease or other conditions are not as likely to wipe out both oats and vetch.

"I am expecting a record acreage of oats and vetch this year because conditions have developed that make them a favorable crop for farmers. In the first place most farmers who planted oats last year made good yields. These, of course, won the crop favor with growers, as well as providing a big supply of excellent seed. Then the fact that vetch and oats are about the most fool-proof winter grazing crop farmers can plant also adds to their popularity," explains Harbor.

Then he continues, "The fact that this mixture can be planted after so many crops makes it ideal for most farms. Either oats or a mixture of oats and vetch can be planted following annual hay crops such as soybeans or cowpeas, dug peanuts, hogged corn, harvested corn, cotton, or grain sorghum. And oats or oats and vetch are suited to most farms," says Harbor, "for they make good growth on any well drained soil."

To prepare land, break and harrow smooth. This forms a well pulverized, clean, firm seedbed. (Where seed will be planted in clean cultivated crop middles, this preparation isn't necessary.)

Oats alone or in mixture with vetch can be planted with equipment that's already on most farms. The seed can be planted in a prepared seedbed with a grain drill; drilled in row crop middles with a three-row drill, planter, or fertilizer distributor; broadcast on a prepared seedbed and covered with a disk harrow; or sowed in row crop middles and covered with sweeps or spring-tooth harrow.

The agronomist recommends having a soil test made on the land that's going to be planted to oats. This will determine more accurately the kind and amount of fertilizer needed. (See your county agent for information on how to take soil samples.) On land where these tests were made, use fertilizer recommended by the laboratory. If no soil test was made, apply 300 pounds of 4-16-8 per acre before planting, and top-dress with 225 pounds of nitrate of soda as soon as oats are up to a stand.

Ask your county agent about oat varieties recommended in your area, and plant three to four bushels of treated seed per acre. Treat seed with an organic mercurial fungicide such as Ceresan M, Agrox, or Panogen, according to manufacturer's directions. Plant oats for grazing between September 1-10.

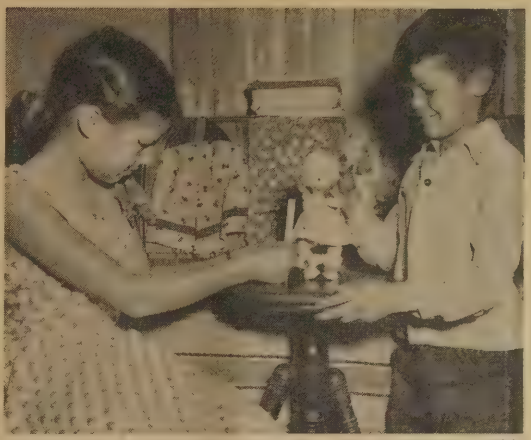
Harbor adds that a vetch-oat mixture will do best when given the following treatment.

After seedbed is made where preparation is necessary, make a soil test to determine lime and fertilizer needs and add accordingly. However, on land that has not been tested, add one ton of lime on sandy soil and two tons on heavy soil if the land has not been limed recently. Before planting apply (1) 500 pounds of 4-16-8 or 700 pounds of 4-10-7 before planting and top-dress with 125 pounds of nitrate of soda or equal nitrogen from other sources as soon as plants are up or (2) 500 pounds of 0-16-8 or 300 pounds of 0-28-14 per acre before planting and top-dress with 250 to 300 pounds of nitrate of soda or equal nitrate from other sources as soon as the plants are up to a good stand.

Harbor concludes by saying, "Use good treated oat seed of a recommended variety, and plant three to four bushels plus 20 pounds of hairy or smooth vetch or 30 pounds of Williamette vetch per acre. Be sure to double inoculate the vetch seed with vetch inoculant according to manufacturer's recommendations.

Plant two acres for each mature cow between September 1-10.

A Good Helper



Although Nancy Sloan of Blountsville Rt. 3 is not putting on an up-to-date fashion show here for her young brother, Ronald, the little lady can demonstrate many sewing techniques which have already won her county-wide recognition. The 11-year-old girl recalls that her sewing career began three years ago in the Cleveland Junior 4-H Club when she won top honors in the apron revue. That achievement simply added more sparks to Nancy's sewing enthusiasm. And the following year the Blount County seamstress entered the local contest again, won it and later exhibited the best made apron in the county apron revue. This year Nancy is again following the winning trail. She'll represent her local club in the county apron contest. Now that the young lass has a blue ribbon pinned on all aprons she has made, Nancy is aiming at that same record in dressmaking. Ronald helps his sister get some practice too by making sure the doll dress is level and the right length. The youngsters' parents, both active community leaders, are Mr. and Mrs. E. C. Sloan.

Dr. L. A. Weaver, head, Animal Husbandry Department, Missouri College of Agriculture, will be the judge. Dr. Weaver is a nationally known livestock judge.

Superintendent and assistant superintendent are G. B. Phillips and C. H. Johns.

All entries must be in by September 4th. Official blanks may be obtained from officials of each of the eight state breed associations or by writing directly to Alabama State Fair, Birmingham.

THE HERD GREW—In 1947 Allen Blackburn (right) of the Providence community started his dairy herd with a single Guernsey heifer bought as a 4-H project. Since that time he has increased his herd to 15 animals by saving heifers from his cows. During the six-year period Allen has sold four animals for $435. The Butler County farm youngster operates a 75-acre farm after school and on Saturdays. He is a member of the Georgiana 4-H Club and is treasurer of the county 4-H council. Shown also looking over the herd are Allen's twin brothers, Rex (center) and Ray.

API Agricultural Experiment Station

SMALL grain varieties recommended by the API Experiment Station, for 1953 have recently been announced.

These recommendations are based on results of tests conducted throughout Alabama by the Experiment Station in an effort to determine the best small grain varieties for the state.

The tests were conducted on the Sand Mountain, Tennessee Valley, Upper Coastal Plain, Piedmont, Black Belt, Lower Coastal Plain, Gulf Coast, and Wiregrass substations; and the Alexandria, Aliceville, Prattville, Tuskegee, Monroeville, and Brewton experiment fields.

1. Northern Alabama—First choice oat varieties are Arlington, DeSoto, Mustang, and Victorgrain 48-93. Second choice varieties include Anderson and Fulgrain 48-107. Fulwood may be grown on trial basis.

First choice wheat varieties are Atlas 66, Chancellor, and Coker 47-27. Second choice is Sanford.

2. Central Alabama—First choice oat varieties are Anderson, Arlington, DeSoto, Mustang, and Victorgrain 48-93. Second choice varieties are Delta Red 88, Nortex, Nortex 107, and Rustproof 14. Fulgrain 48-107 and Fulwood should be grown on trial basis.

First choice wheat varieties are Chancellor and Coker 47-27, and second choice are Atlas 66, Coastal, and Sanford.

3. Southern Alabama—First and second choice oat varieties for southern Alabama are the same as for central Alabama, except Southland is added as a second choice and Fulwood is recommended on a trial basis.

First choice wheat varieties are Coastal and Coker 47-27; Atlas 66 is recommended as a second choice.

Copies of the variety report may be obtained from the API Experiment Station or your county agent.

The only mineral necessary for beef cattle in Alabama is common salt. Several thousand dollars are wasted each year by cattlemen who buy minerals that do no good.

Along the Way with P. O. DAVIS

DIRECTOR, API EXTENSION SERVICE

IF cotton marketing quotas are in force next year—and they're expected to be—farmers will be challenged to do more sound, long-time planning.

Although it may not be necessary to continue quotas over a long period, farmers will realize that hereafter cotton will occupy only a small portion of the crop land.

This has been true in our state for years. Last year, for example, cotton grew on 18 per cent of Alabama's total crop land acres. Quotas will reduce this acreage further. With this reduction, farmers will have an opportunity to use more land for other crops and livestock.

This means, of course, that more livestock and poultry will be grown. In turn, more feed and pasture crops will be needed on the land.

MOST folks know cotton is the biggest cash producer on Alabama farms; however, they know little about the relative importance of other farm cash crops.

According to official reports, in 1952 cotton and cottonseed brought Alabama farmers $177,865,000. Hogs were second. They brought $46,353,000, while cattle and calves placed third and sold for $45,652,000.

Dairy products ranked next with $29,139,000, and were followed by peanuts which brought $22,137,000. Chickens produced $21,818,000, and eggs sold for $18,992,000. Income from both eggs and chickens places the poultry industry in fourth place—above dairying.

ALABAMA'S best informed man about hogs is G. B. Phillips, our hog specialist at Auburn who has studied all phases of hog production. Again and again he reminds us that hogs can be used to make a big increase in Alabama's farm income each year—especially more net income.

Mr. Phillips insists that a farmer who can produce enough grain and grazing at a low cost has the prime essentials to big profits in hog production. Good breeding and good management will add extra profit. Capital requirements for hogs are low. Sows will produce two pay days annually from two litters and improve the land while they're doing it.

Along with these good qualities, they put money in the bank for all farm needs. And what's more, they make excellent food.

ONE friend of mine says that for each worker employed, American industry is now investing $14,000 in buildings, machines, and other equipment. Another friend says that the amount of capital per worker in farming is 50 per cent more—$21,000.

I'm not vouching for the accuracy of either of these statements, but they're reliable enough to remind us that a successful farmer now must have plenty of money or capital. And if he is to succeed, he must be a good manager of money as well as other things.

Manufacturers employ specialists in their different fields, but a farmer must master all farm problems himself. And I know of no other occupation or business that requires so much information about so many things.

THE bumper corn crop now being made on Alabama farms presents this question. How profitably will we use it? It is one

NOT ENOUGH YET—The broiler business in Hale County continues to grow. Here Jack Davis (left) of Sawyerville Rt. 1 tells County Agent Bill Hairston he is expanding his 2,000 capacity house to take care of 5,000 birds. Davis says he sold 10,000 broilers last year that added $1,000 to his farm income.

A GOOD START—Mrs. Gazelle Thomas of Greensboro says she likes the broiler business better than any other job she can think of. She's been growing chicks for 14 months and does a good job with her project. Her last batch of chicks was sold at nine weeks of age and averaged 3.21 pounds each. Mrs. Thomas has brooding facilities for 5,000 birds at a brood.

THEY BEAR DOWN—As they weigh a batch of broilers, L. N. Massengale (left), owner of the Massengale poultry processing plant in Greensboro, tells Hale County Agent Bill Hairston that he has an almost unlimited market for heavy birds. He likes for them to weigh at least three pounds. Massengale ships about 70 per cent of his dressed broilers to northern and western markets.

thing to make a lot of corn and another to get the most profitable use out of it.

Plans for efficient feeding on each farm are always needed—especially now. Hogs, cattle, and chickens will convert your corn into meat, milk, or eggs. See your county agent about ways to get best results from your corn.

A little advice to beef cattle farmers—stick with your cattle. Take good care of them and feed them plenty of home-grown grazing and other feed, and they'll pay off.

You may be discouraged by prices. I'm delighted, however, that most cattlemen with whom I've talked are not discouraged.

They're doing what we're talking about, namely, operating on an efficient basis to produce beef at a low cost and make money. Those who do this will come out on the right side of the ledger.

They Like 'Em Big

Unique Market System Ups Hale Broiler Sales

WHEN folks north of the Mason-Dixon line sit down to a fried chicken dinner, they like a big platter full!

And when chicken growers in Hale County, Alabama, take broilers to market, they like to sell the kind of chicken their northern buyers want.

So through a sell-what-the-customer-likes program the Massengale processing plant at Greensboro has gotten these two ends of the broiler business together.

Here's how the program started in a county that's in the midst of the famous Black Belt cattle growing section of Alabama: As in most businesses, financial backing was the first problem. But the Hale County poultrymen were soon over this big hurdle because of the interest of their local banker, Lewis Lawson. Thoroughly sold on broiler projects, he is now the largest grower in the vicinity. Lawson has houses to grow 75,000 birds at one time.

When he became a broiler grower, Lawson encouraged farmers to go into the business, and he helped finance their projects. His bank makes broiler house loans to interested poultrymen, and in many cases it grants production loans. This enables growers to buy chicks and feed in large volume at cash prices.

This entire unique system of supplying broilers for northern markets is centered around the processing plant in Greensboro. The plant is owned and operated by L. N. Massengale and two sons, C. N. and J. R. They are turning out high quality birds of the size demanded by northern and western housewives. To do this, they have developed a system of processing a large fancy broiler with uniformity of color. The birds, 70 per cent of which are shipped to northern and western markets, average weighing about three to three an one-half pounds.

The result of this program has provided poultry producers in Hale County with an almost unlimited market for their birds. In fact Mr. Massengale says he could sell twice as many chickens to these markets outside the state as he is now turning out.

County Agent Bill Hairston points out that the broiler business is proving particularly attractive to Hale County farmers. And he says they should double their million-dollar broiler income very soon. This expansion is well suited to smaller farmers looking for an additional source of income or a way to make better use of the labor on their farms the year around.

Producers like to grow the large birds because they have less chick cost invested in the pounds of meat they sell. Some growers say this reduced cost brings them a higher net return. What's more important though is that the poultrymen are selling the kind of broilers their customers want and thereby have a market for all the chickens they can grow.

A NEWCOMER—Mr. and Mrs. Amos Thomas of Greensboro Rt. 1 have started their first batch of chicks, and they like the poultry business. They have a 6,000-capacity house and are doing fine with their first brood. Mrs. Thomas does most of the work around the poultry house while Mr. Thomas is busy with field chores.

We have built over a million homes a year in the United States since World War II, and yet the Census Bureau states that over one-third of our 35 million non-farm dwellings are either sub-standard or over-crowded. The demand for trees for construction lumber should maintain the price of stumpage at a high level.

1. FARMERS' GREATEST PROBLEMS—Farmers of Calhoun County have made great progress with marketing problems in recent years, according to County Agent A. S. Mathews. This modern livestock auction (upper right), owned by farmers and local businessmen, is a fine example of what Calhoun County farmers are doing to solve their marketing difficulties.

2. ANOTHER MARKETING FACILITY—This giant grain elevator located on highway 78 just outside Oxford can handle 43,000 bushels of grain. It furnishes a good market for grain growers in Calhoun and neighboring counties. And prices compare favorably with those paid by western grain markets.

3. FRESH FARM PRODUCE—The 30,000 people employed by industry in Calhoun County furnish local farmers with a good market for their produce. Helping get buyers and sellers together is this fine curb market (lower right) on Moore Avenue in Anniston. Here local farmers bring their produce for sale three days per week. Large chain grocery stores in Anniston also furnish a good market for farm produce.

Working Together

Calhoun Farmers Solve Market Problems

MARKETING is one of the biggest problems farmers are facing!

Calhoun County Agent A. S. Mathews, Jr., who made this statement recently, believes a solution to the problem can be reached only by farmers themselves. "If farmers would spend as much time on marketing as they do on improved cultivation and production practices they'd have better outlets for their farm products," he said.

Mathews recalled that despite the complicated marketing problem, farmers of this county have already made much progress in the field. The farm agent cited their livestock auction on Highway 78 near Oxford as an example of the way farmers are handling the marketing problem of the area. The market, which has 106 individual livestock pens and which is one of the most up-to-date in the state is owned by local businessmen and farmers in the county. Farm ownership of the auction has its advantages, added Mathews, because the owners know something about the problems of the producers.

Another cooperative marketing facility is the curb market on Moore Avenue in Anniston. This market, with plenty of shady parking space, is also owned by local farmers and businessmen. However, Mathews said, "Calhoun farmers aren't producing nearly enough to supply the 30,000 people who are employed by industry in the county. To keep this great potential market, farmers must produce foods in a larger volume."

This market, now open only three days a week, should have enough producers and customers for a 6-day-a-week service.

Another cooperative marketing program in the county is a grain elevator near Oxford. This elevator, which has a 43,000-pound capacity, furnishes a ready market for local grain and pays prices about equal to those paid by western markets. In fact, prices here were above those of many western markets this year.

These three markets are also conveniently located for farmers in St. Clair, Talladega, Randolph, Clay, Cleburne, Etowah, and Cherokee," said Mathews.

Mathews concluded by saying that someone has to produce food for workers in Calhoun County industry. And he pointed out that local farmers have every advantage in this situation. High transportation costs along with the fact that local farmers can furnish fresher produce gives them a great advantage, especially with perishable foods."

You'll find a good supply of winter legume seed available this fall and prices for the seed will be somewhat lower than in previous years. The 1953 production for seed of most winter legume crops has been estimated to be below 1952 figures but a large carry-over of seed will more than make up for normal needed supplies.

BY this time we may have an infestation of screwworms in Alabama. To combat this pest it is recommended that all livestock be observed daily and all wounds, even minor ones, treated with one of the screwworm smears containing EQ-35. It is also recommended that livestock be sprayed every two or three weeks with one of the livestock sprays containing BHC and DDT to kill ticks and other biting insects which cause wounds for screwworm entry. It is also believed that spraying decreases the screwworm infestation. If screwworms are here farmers would do well to postpone all operations possible until after we have a killing frost.

THERE is a sheep drench on the market now that will control tapeworms as well as nobular worms and roundworms. This material is commonly known as pink drench and contains ¾ of one per cent by weight of arsenate of lead in addition to phenothiazine. One treatment a year of this drench should be given all sheep. Now is a good time to do it. This material can also be given to cattle that have tapeworms. Under most Alabama conditions sheep should have four drenchings annually, three of them with phenothiazine and one with pink drench.

WORMS feeding in the bud of corn or in the heads of grain sorghum can be controlled with 10 per cent DDT or toxaphene cotton dust applied in bud of corn with dust gun or by hand at the rate of 15 pounds per acre. Dust heads of grain sorghum when in full bloom and again within 10 days. Do not feed corn or grain sorghum that's been treated for 30 days following the last application.

USE lights on pullet flocks this month. Morning lights should be started at 4 a. m., with one 40-watt bulb for each 50 hens. Space lights 10 feet apart and use reflectors on them. Remember that lights stimulate the hen's reproductive system by harmones released in the body. Suspend the lights so that they will shine on both roost and feeding areas.

IT is injurious to kudzu to mow or graze it too closely during September. If you haven't gotten around to mowing your kudzu, you should postpone mowing until just before frost. If you have been grazing your kudzu, remove livestock to enable it to make a good growth before frost. After frost, resume grazing.

FRUIT buds for next spring's crop of strawberries will be developed through the fall and winter months. To develop strong, thrifty plants which will develop many fruit buds, thin them to about four to the square foot—leave the largest plants. Fertilize the patch with 500 pounds of 6-8-4 per acre or two quarts to 100 feet of row. This should be done in early September in North Alabama and a month later in the southern part of the state. Apply the fertilizer directly on the row and brush any surplus off the plants with a light brush broom.

Changed His Mind

Coastal Bermuda Makes Good Cash Crop

"A grass that I used to think was a terrible pest has now become a money-making crop for me.

"Most of my life I've worked hard to keep common bermuda grass off my farm. Then a few years ago folks began talking about the whopping yields coastal bermuda was making. It sounded so good, I decided to try it on four acres. That was back in 1951. I liked it so well I planted 18 more acres this year, and now I'm thinking about putting my 80-acre farm in it."

What's he going to do with so much of this grass? "Why, as long as the price of planting stock stays high, I'm going to sell crowns and market hay from the summer growth," says Dillard. "Last spring I dug my four-acre patch six times and got over 1000 bushels of planting material. When the crown market gets bad, I'll put in a livestock program to use up the grass."

Here's how the Notasulga farmer says you can make coastal bermuda grow on your farm.

"First, prepare a good seedbed. Break the land thoroughly and harrow smooth. Lay off rows with an old-time shovel and scrape, and drop plants in the bottom of the furrow. Then drag lightly with a wooden drag to cover crowns with a little dirt—about one inch is enough. To pack the soil and hold moisture, run the tractor wheel over the row. (Three people can plant one acre a day by this method.) Cultivate with a rotary hoe until plants are growing good.

"How much fertilizer? To start the crop, you'll need about 600 pounds of 0-16-8 broadcast over each acre before planting. After grass is growing good, give it 150 pounds of nitrate of soda, and in about three months add another 300 pounds per acre.

"To keep bermuda thriving after the first year, apply 500 pounds of 6-8-4 per acre in April. In a few weeks add an additional 300 pounds of nitrate of soda. When this makes enough growth, cut for hay. Then give the grass two more applications of nitrate during the summer if rain comes.

"Since the growth is determined by the amount of nitrate used, don't fail to put on plenty."

PLENTY OF FEED HERE—This nice fat Jersey cow is proof that there's plenty of good nutritious grass here. L. O. Dillard, in background, says his animals like the good juicy coastal bermuda grass too. The Macon County farmer dug over 1000 bushels of planting material from the same four-acre field last year. He says plenty of nitrate is the secret to growing good yields of the grass.

LOTS OF FEED—This stand of coastal bermuda grass on L. O. Dillard's farm in Macon County will make lots of hay. Dillard (right) tells Farm Agent M. F. Whatley that his four-acre field was dug for planting stock six times last spring. He got over 1000 bushels of crowns from the area.

A NEW PLANTING—L. O. Dillard of Rt. 1 Notasulga liked coastal bermuda grass so much that he decided to plant 18 more acres on his 80-acre farm this year. He plans to sell planting stock and hay as long as the market is good. If prices go bad he'll develop a livestock program to use the forage. Dillard (left) tells County Agent M. F. Whatley that to start new plantings of the grass he breaks his land and harrows it smooth. Then he opens the row with an old-time shovel and scrape, drops the plants in the bottom of the furrow, and drags a board over the field to cover the plants. He then runs the tractor wheel over the row and packs the soil. By this method the farmer says he gets about 95 per cent of his plants to live.

Do It Now

Put Your Idle Land To Work

A broom sedge field can be turned into good pasture, advises D. R. Harbor, API Extension agronomist. He suggests these two methods.

"Spread lime on the land and plow under all the old sedge," says the specialist. "Keep the area disked until planting time, apply 700 pounds of 4-10-7 per acre, and then plant either oats or wheat and vetch or crimson clover."

Or apply lime now on the sedge area where there is a scattered stand of dallis or bermuda grass, continues Harbor. In October clip off the sedge, rake and burn. Top dress with potash and phosphate, basic slag and potash, 0-16-8, or 0-14-14 mixed fertilizer. Then disk the land lightly and sow crimson clover on high land and white clover on low land. Dallis and bermuda grasses will volunteer in the clover, concludes the agronomist, and most of the broom sedge will fade away.

EXPERT ADVICE—When Wallace Smith of the Harris Lake community took over the tasks of home improvement for a 4-H Club project this year, he found that one of the first big jobs was rewiring their house. Before he starts the major task, the Tuscaloosa County youngster is getting some expert advice from John M. Spence, (right), rural service engineer, Alabama Power Company. Wallace has also carried projects in gardening, corn, commercial truck crops, and pigs. The farm boy is vice president of the Tuscaloosa County High 4-H Club.

RECIPE FOR SEPTEMBER

HIDDEN under the brown skin of the lowly sweet potato is a delectable flavor that's relished by most everybody. And wrapped in the same vegetable package is a nutritious food that supplies big quantities of energy for the body. In addition to energy food the sweet potato is also a good source of many essential vitamins and minerals.

There are many ways this delicious root crop can be prepared and served to the family. For instance, during fall months most folks like the potato baked and served with good country butter. This versatile crop can be used as vegetable, a breadstuff, and a dessert.

1 cup orange juice	2 cups sugar
½ teaspoon grated orange rind	¼ cup butter
1 cup water	½ teaspoon salt

6 medium sized potatoes

Peel and slice uncooked potatoes in ¼-inch slices; arrange in buttered baking dish. Make syrup of first six ingredients and pour over the potatoes. Cover and bake in moderate oven until tender. Baste occasionally. Remove lid last ten minutes to brown. If desired, a layer of marshmallows may be added and browned just before removing from the oven.

To make maximum use of home-grown grains, feed high protein supplements or concentrates to the poultry flock. This may be fed free-choice by keeping a hopper of oats, a hopper of corn, and a hopper of supplement before the birds at all times. It may also be fed by mixing the supplement with equal parts of ground grain and feeding as a regular mash with grain.

THE BATTLE OF THE BIRDS—"Buzzards became so numerous at my river pasture that they were killing my baby pigs, and occasionally they got one of my calves," says M. D. Wise of Elba Rt. 3. The Coffee County farmer tells Assistant Agent Paul Mills (right) that he solved the problem though by building a buzzard trap. Wise explained that he caught over 200 of the large birds during the first two weeks the trap was set. Made out of chicken wire, the bird catcher is 12x12x11 feet. "Since catching the buzzards, I haven't lost any more of my small animals," says the South Alabama farmer.

Expert Advises

Make A Good Garden; Start On Time

TAKE advantage of the good gardening season this fall, says John Bagby, API Extension horticulturist. It's more pleasant to work the garden when the weather cools off, and grass and weeds don't grow as fast at this time of the year.

September is the month to start fresh garden vegetables for fall and winter. Crops such as cabbage, collards, and broccoli plants; onion sets, and seeds of lettuce, turnips, mustard, kale, carrots, radishes, beets, and tendergreens should be planted this month.

Soil preparation is about the most important factor in the success of the fall garden, explains Bagby. For a good firm seedbed, break the soil deep, and disk or spade it once or twice. This will eliminate air pockets in the soil. It will also help preserve moisture when the fall dry spell comes.

About 10 days or two weeks before planting time, apply two to three quarts of 6-8-4 or 4-10-7 fertilizer on each 100 feet of row. Then when there is plenty of moisture in the soil, plant the crops—this will insure good stands.

On sandy soil two tablespoons of borax added to the fertilizer used on each 100 feet of row will increase the yields of root crops such as beets, carrots, turnips, rutabagas and radishes.

When plants are up to a good stand, give them another application of two to three quarts of complete fertilizer per 100 feet of row. One or two side-dressings with a pint to a quart of nitrate of soda will keep the crops growing in a thrifty condition.

Remember, October is usually the driest month of the year. So when possible, water the garden to keep crops growing. A thorough soaking once a week is better than frequent light applications of water.

Insects will likely be a problem on many of these crops, concludes Bagby. Dusting with the Auburn-approved garden dust or with one per cent rotenone will control most of these pests.

Water stains on glass pitchers and vases usually can be removed by rubbing them vigorously with a piece of freshly-cut potato or a cloth which has been moistened with potato juice.

Boll weevils and other cotton insects can cause serious damage to cotton in the Tennessee Valley and Sand Mountain areas of Alabama in early September. Farmers in all parts of the state should be reminded that the cotton crop is not safe from weevils and bollworms until the bolls are mature and ready to open. Often, the most effective poisoning for the control of these pests can be done late in the season just prior to the time harvesting is started.

There is unusual interest in wheat, especially among South Alabama hog growers. Good yields have been made for the past two or three years. It is suggested that wheat be tried on a limited scale. You must keep up with the acreage control program in planning your wheat crop.

How Will You Gather Your Corn This Fall?

NOW that sure signs of autumn are here again, you'll soon be thinking about harvesting that corn crop.

Here's how the job will be done in Alabama, according to a report from the U. S. Department of Agriculture.

1. Twelve and six-tenths per cent of the approximately 2.5-million-acre crop will be hogged off or grazed for forage.
2. Seven per cent of the harvested acreage will be gathered with mechanical pickers (1300 corn pickers and 600 row binders).
3. Two per cent of the harvested acreage will be shucked, husked, or snapped.
4. The other 91 per cent of the harvested acreage will be gathered by hand.

Just in case you're interested in comparing Alabama's harvesting methods with those of the U. S. as a whole, here's what the survey showed:

1. Eighty-nine per cent of the country's 83 million acres will be harvested for grain, 5.7 per cent for silage, and 5.2 per cent hogged off or grazed for forage.
2. Sixty-eight per cent of the harvested acreage will be gathered with mechanical pickers (558,000 of them).
3. Twenty-seven per cent will be gathered by hand.
4. Four per cent will be shucked, husked, or snapped.

If a farmer sells 1,000 board feet of 12-inch logs, 12 feet long, measured by the Doyle log rule, and disregards the overrun which they will yield, he actually gives away 500 or more additional board feet. However, if the 1,000 board feet were in 24-inch logs, the overrun would be practically nothing.

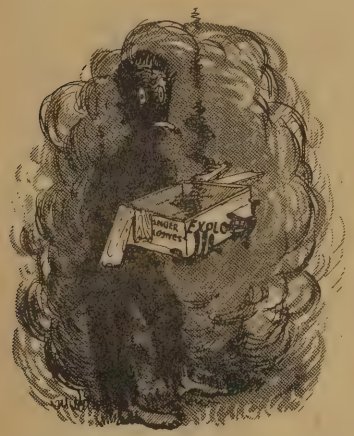
Safety First

Explosives Dangerous---Handle Them With Care

LAWRENCE ENNIS, API Extension specialist in soil engineering, says if you'd like to live to a ripe old age, here are some things to remember when handling dynamite:

1. DON'T store blasting caps, or other high explosives in the home nor leave them where children can get them.
2. DON'T leave explosives in a wet or damp place.
3. DON'T leave explosives where stock can get at them.
4. DON'T throw packages of explosives around or handle them roughly in any manner.
5. DON'T smoke while using or handling explosives.
6. DON'T handle explosives near open flame or sparks.
7. DON'T have matches about you while handling explosives. Where matches are used to light the fuse, they should be kept in a closed metal box.
8. DON'T open explosives cases with metal tools—use wood, fiber or rubber mallets.
9. DON'T tamp with iron or steel bars. Use only a wooden tamping stick.
10. DON'T fire a blast before all persons are at a safe distance and all explosives are in a safe place.
11. DON'T attempt to investigate a misfire too soon, even though it is thought the fuse has not been lighted or has gone out.
12. DON'T drill, bore or pick out a charge of explosives that has misfired. Drill and charge another borehole at least two feet from the misfire.
13. DON'T light fuses near boxes of caps or other explosives.
14. DON'T leave high explosives or blasting caps exposed to the direct sun rays.
15. DON'T store or carry blasting caps with any other explosives.
16. DON'T use blasting caps weaker than No six.



17. DON'T carry blasting caps in your pockets.
18. DON'T tap or investigate blasting caps or electric blasting caps.
19. DON'T spare force or energy in operating blasting machines.
20. DON'T use short fuse. Never use less than two feet.
21. DON'T crimp blasting caps to fuse with a knife blade or with the teeth. Use a suitable cap crimper.
22. DON'T try to light fuse with burning paper or other inflammable refuse.
23. DON'T use empty dynamite boxes for kindling.

THERE'S SOME TIME FOR FARMING—Miss Ada Ray and her sister Eula operate a 55-acre farm in Butler County's Mt. Olive community. And according to Assistant County Agent George McMillan they are two of the best farmers in this area. Here they look over a field of fine corn on their place with their tenant Vick Blackburn. Miss Ada (left) also likes to work with the boys and girls in the community. She has been a local leader of 4-H'ers for a quarter of a century.

STILL ON THE JOB—Miss Ada Ray of the Mt. Olive community in Butler County has been a 4-H Club leader since 1928. She says, "The best crop that's raised on farms is boys and girls, and I like to do my part in helping them become useful citizens." Miss Ada talks with two of her grand nephews, Wilmer (left) and Bobby Ray, about their 4-H Club records. Both boys are members of the McKenzie club. Wilmer is president of the organization, and Bobby is song leader.

A Helping Hand

Twenty-Five Years Of ServiceTo Rural Boys And Girls

UNDER good leadership, there's almost no limit to the achievements of rural boys and girls.

And Miss Ada Ray has helped 4-H Club members in Butler County's Mt. Olive community chalk up an impressive record during her 25 years as a local leader.

Miss Ada, as she is known to old and young alike, started her colorful career back in 1929 while teaching school at Goshen. That year she volunteered as a local leader for a 4-H Club, and since then she has been actively engaged in encouraging farm boys and girls with their club work. Even when she moved back to her home community the next year, her reputation as a youth leader followed her.

Miss Ada believes that 4-H'ers should be encouraged to do a better job with their projects each year as they assume more responsibility. She is also a great believer in keeping records, and she has done lots to get young farmers and homemakers to put down their expenses and receipts so they will know just how much money they have made on a project.

To encourage the youngsters in their work, the local community organization presents an achievement award each year to the outstanding boy and girl in the community. In addition to this award, any boy or girl from Mt. Olive who has been selected as county winner in 4-H project work is also given a community award. All awards are made at the annual 4-H recognition banquet at the community center.

Proof that Miss Ada's work is paying off is found in the fact that last year the Mt. Olive community produced two of the state 4-H winners. Lester Stinson was state cotton production champ, and Lewis Bennett was tops in the farm and home safety field. As a result of their record, both boys won trips to the National 4-H Congress in Chicago last year.

In addition to working with farm youths, Miss Ada is also considered one of the most outstanding leaders among adults in the community. In 1924 she helped organize a community club at Mt. Olive and it has met regularly since that time.

According to George McMillan, assistant county agent, she is one of the best farmers in Butler County. With the help of a sister, Miss Eula Ray, she operates a 55-acre farm and tends an additional 142 acres of woodland.

About her busy life Miss Ada has this to say, "I have a full-time job trying to farm and help the boys and girls at the same time. But, every time one of our community youngsters makes good at a worthwhile project, I am well repaid for any small contribution that I might have made.

The Covington County housewife had experienced water trouble since 1906 because the well either went dry, or the pump needed a new strainer. Now an electric pump at the spring supplies plenty of water for two families, 100 head of hogs, and 10 cows.

Winter Legumes Are Suited To All Farms

By J. C. LOWERY
API Extension Agronomist

FARMERS can usually succeed with winter legumes by following a few well-known, proven practices. The great value of these crops has been established by nearly 50 years of use in Alabama. And now with improved equipment for seeding and turning winter cover crops the job can be done more effectively than ever before.

Right at the top of the list of suitable winter cover crops is hairy vetch. It can be grown most anywhere in Alabama under many conditions and can withstand adverse weather. Smooth vetch does about as well as hairy vetch.

Austrian winter peas are good, but they haven't been too popular in recent years because of disease injury which has occurred some seasons.

Crimson clover is another one of our most popular soil-building winter legumes, and its seed can be produced on the farm.

Blue lupine is used in the southernmost counties of the state, but the cold damage in 1950 and 1951 cut the acreage to a low figure.

Caley peas, the standard winter legume for the Black Belt, are especially good for a winter grazing crop and soil improvement. They grow well in succession with Johnson grass or dallis grass.

From this group of winter legumes you can pick one or more that's suited for your cropping system. Here are a few precautions that will help you succeed with winter cover crops.

1. Get good seed. Be sure they're high in germination and free of bad weeds.

2. Inoculate the seed. Use proper inoculant for crop being planted and follow directions on the package.

3. Fertilize each acre with (1) 300 pounds of 0-16-8 or (2) 40 to 50 pounds of muriate of potash plus 200 to 300 pounds of superphosphate or 400 to 600 pounds of basic slag. Inoculated seed must not come in contact with 0-16-8 or superphosphate. It is a good plan to have your soil tested for phosphate, potash, and lime needs.

4. Plant Sept. 1 to Oct. 15 in Tennessee Valley and on Sand Mountain, Sept. 15 to Oct. 15 in Central Alabama, and Sept. 15 to Oct. 25 in South Alabama.

5. Plant between cotton, corn, or grain sorghum rows before crops are harvested. Plant after hay crops or summer grazing crops or after harvested peanuts. Crimson clover and vetches may be planted on bermuda or Johnson grass sod if the soil is well-drained. Caley peas may be seeded on Johnson grass or bermuda grass. They do better on wetter land than the other crops.

Here are the rates of seeding to use per acre with the various legume crops. (1) Smooth and hairy vetch 20 to 25 pounds. (2) Other vetches 30 pounds or more. (3) Austrian peas 30 to 40 pounds. (4) Crimson clover 20 to 30 pounds. (5) Caley peas 40 pounds or more. (6) Bur clover 15 to 20 pounds of scarified clean seed or 100 to 125 pounds of seed in bur. (7) Lupine 50 to 75 pounds of seed germinating 80 per cent or higher; use 100 pounds on thin land when planted late or when broadcast.

The following methods have proved to be successful ways of planting legumes.

If you use mules, plant vetch and Austrian peas between cotton, corn, or grain sorghum rows by one of these methods:

1. Knocker or vibrator fertilizer distributor—use a sharp scooter on distributor. Mix inoculated legume seed and basic slag and plant by making a "round" to the middle. Drag a chain, board, piece of iron behind the plow to fill the furrow so the young plants won't be covered too deep by rain washing soil on them.

2. One-row planter—plant with a one-row planter using plates suited to seed size.

3. Three-row drill or two-row drill—these are designed especially for planting winter legumes in row crop middles. Fertilizer is applied and seed planted at one trip.

4. Broadcast the seed and cover them by making a round to the middle with a sweep and scooter on a Georgia stock, with a scratcher, or a ghee whiz. A middlebuster run down the middles, throwing soil to the rows, is equally effective. Middles may be listed to the row with a turn plow or the row straddled with a cultivator so plows throw soil to them.

Crimson clover may be covered lightly with sweep or scratcher. It cannot stand deep covering and has not been successfully seeded in row crop middles. If crops have been harvested, seed may be broadcast and covered with a disk or drilled.

If you have tractor equipment, there are several ways you can plant winter legumes. You may plant before cotton opens or right after picking if plants are not very tall.

In most of the state much of the cotton and corn is harvested by the middle or last of October. When harvest is complete, cut stalks, disk soil, seed, and roll. Seeding may also be done without cutting stalks when the land is to be disked. This breaks down many stalks and leaves the area in good shape.

Research Results
in brief from A.P.I. AGRICULTURAL EXPERIMENT STATION

NO PRACTICAL CURE HAS BEEN FOUND FOR LITTLE LEAF DISEASE of shortleaf pine. However, complete loss of affected timber can be prevented by cutting and marketing the trees or by using them on the farm as soon as symptoms occur. Results show that on the average trees die within five to seven years after the first symptoms of little leaf. Removal of the diseased trees does not check spread of the disease; it is purely a salvage operation.

STORED GRAIN INSECT DAMAGE can be reduced materially in corn by treating cribs before the new crop is stored. Numerous tests show that best results are obtained when the entire inner surface of the crib is thoroughly cleaned and sprayed with 2 pounds of 50 per cent wettable DDT in 5 gallons of water. This treatment will not kill insects which are already in the corn, but it will prevent infestations from insects hiding in the crib.

PERMANENT PASTURES REQUIRE PHOSPHATE FERTILIZERS both for establishment and for maintenance. In the various soils regions of the state, experimental results indicate that, in general, 700 to 800 pounds of superphosphate per acre are needed for establishing and about 400 pounds annually are required for maintaining permanent pastures of legume-grass mixtures. Basic slag used instead of superphosphate at the rate of 2 to 2½ pounds for each pound of superphosphate has given about as good results. Where sufficient amounts of slag are used for establishing and maintaining pastures, usually no lime is required. If potash is needed, an 0-16-8 fertilizer will supply both the phosphate and potash.

TESTS AND OBSERVATIONS FOR MANY YEARS SHOW that the following harvest and storage practices reduce sweet potato loss. Harvest before the first killing frost when the soil is dry; avoid bruising; handle with gloves; place potatoes in individual containers; cure for 1 week to 10 days at 85° F. and 90 per cent humidity; and store at 50° to 60° F. during winter.

SWEETPOTATO VINES STORED in the fall to be used as cuttings for planting stock in the spring are rarely ever satisfactory. Experimental results show that most of the vines die while in storage. Those that live lose their leaves, and when planted, they either die or make unsatisfactory growth.

A REASONABLE AMOUNT OF CARE IN HARVESTING COTTON will pay big dividends in a better sample and higher price, according to studies made by the Department of Agricultural Economics. These studies show that labor shortage in recent years, plus stories about the ability of modern gin machinery to turn out a good sample even from dirty, trashy, wet cotton, has caused many farmers to become lax in their methods of picking and handling seed cotton. Frequently, pickers have not been supervised properly to eliminate excessive trash as seed cotton goes to the wagon. Green bolls, leaves, pieces of clothing, and even pieces of metal have been found in many loads.

Folks and Things ABOUT TOWN

—By Ben

It was wonderful to see the number of business men out to the Little League meeting Tuesday night at the City Hall. The meeting was exceptionally well attended and enthusiasm was high throughout the meeting. Regular business was transacted, committees appointed, and with an hour Clanton was on its way to having a Little League Baseball Club next year. Of course, much of the work is to be done by the committees, but from the cooperation shown at the meeting they will have little trouble. Our good friend, Ott Miller, is due a big hunk of credit for the progress made thus far and for the even manner in which he conducted the meeting.

Here is the evolution of a man's ambition. Let's start about the age of ten:

To be a circus clown.
To be like dad.
To be a fireman.
To make the football team.
To do something noble.
To get wealthy.
To make ends meet.
To get the old-age pension.

Reminds us of the little fellow who asked his dad what his ambitions were when he was a boy. The dad told his son that his greatest ambition was to wear long pants. And he continued, "I have certainly realized my ambitions, too. If any man wears his pants longer than I wear mine then I'd sure like to see him."

When asked how he could swindle people who trusted him the prisoner answered: "They are the only ones you can swindle, Judge. You can't swindle a man if he doesn't trust you."

From a contributor: "What is your favorite hymn? Thousands of people responded to the request of the 'Voice of Prophecy' to name theirs. Eight-hundred and eighty-three songs were listed as favorites. 'The Old Rugged Cross' was first in the heart of the listeners. Eighth from the top was a song only three years old: 'It Is No Secret,' by Stuart Hamblen. Listen to the program Sunday, September 6th, and hear them on WSGN at 10 o'clock."

What are you parents going to do about it. There have been eight juvenile arrests for petty crimes within the past few weeks. Our law enforcement agencies are busier trying to break up this menace than anything else. Remember: "Great Oaks From Little Acorns Grow," and just as sure as the good Lord made little green apples, if we parents don't know what our children are doing and with whom they are associating, we are likely to find that the acorn has grown into the great oak after it is too late. We ain't preaching. We just hate to see little boys, or girls, get off on the wrong foot.

Wonder if some good citizen would tell us what became of a good step-ladder that we had in our booth at the Fair. There is no mistaking it. It has beautiful pink paint all over the top steps where we were painting our boudoir. Not at the Fair grounds—at home. We figure someone borrowed it and forgot to bring it back, so if you see a step-ladder about seven feet high walking around out at the airport some day, or night, it belongs to us. Let us know.

The Alabama Automobile Dealers are going to select "Mr. Alabama Automobile Dealer" of the year again and he will be presented with an engraved brass plaque at their annual convention in October. We received a submission form this morning and we have thought the whole thing out, and here is our choice out of all the Clanton automobile dealers, taking them alphabetically: J. C. Burnett, Dick Hayes, H. P. Hebard, L. A. Lambert, Troy Maddox, Dyer Shackelford, Russ Shelton and Dent Williams. Now that's our choice and the way we will send in our ballot. But seriously, Clanton has got a fine group of automobile dealers and we think that they have really served the public well in their field. It would be nice if one of our dealers could bring the plaque of "Mr. Alabama Automobile Dealer" back from their convention.

SCOUT MEETING MONDAY NIGHT

There will be a Scout meeting at the Hut next Monday night at 7 o'clock. All members are requested to be present.

This will be a special meeting to which the fathers of the Scouts are invited and a special program is planned.

Four Youths Caught While Breaking Into Local Business Firms

Two Clanton youths, Hershel Burkhalter and J. D. Easterling, Jr., were caught by H. T. Salter, Pan-Am Distributor, in the Pan-Am Service Station here last Monday night, according to Sheriff J. Luther Kendrick. Kendrick stated that several burglaries and petty thefts had been occuring lately and at least eight juveniles had been apprehended. The boys caught Monday night were 14 years old the Sheriff said.

Thirty-two dollars in cash had been taken from the Pan-Am Station last week in another robbery according to Salter. When the second attempt was made to break into the station Monday Salter was waiting.

The two boys were released to their parents' custody on order of Judge V. J. Heard, according to the Sheriff's office.

On Saturday night last two boys entered the Dent Williams Motor Co., in South Clanton and were apprehended. They were Wilson D. Knight and Donald E. Mims. The boys were 14 and 12 years old respectively. It is understood that nothing was taken in this instance, but the boys were classed as juvenile delinquents and placed under the supervision of the Welfare Department.

First Methodist Revival Begins Next Sunday

The summer revival will start at the Clanton Methodist Church next Sunday morning.

Dr. E. L. Hardin, of Pensacola, Fla., will be the evangelist and the Rev. M. C. Mathison, of Opelika, will direct the music.

At the morning service next Sunday Miss Pat Huddleston will sing, "My Hope Is In Thee Everlasting," accompanied by Mrs. Robertson.

The revival will run through Sunday, September 13, according to Rev. M. K. Vickers, pastor of the church. Services will be held daily at 7:00 a.m. and 7:00 p.m.

Union Springs Held Successful Bible School

The week of August 24th through August 28th, Union Springs Baptist Church in the northwestern part of Chilton County had their first Vacation Bible School. Rev. Berkley Webb, Missionary of Chilton Association, was principal. Mrs. R. R. Webster of Mulberry Church assisted him in teaching and with the music. Molly Webster, also of Mulberry helped with the music. The enrollment on Monday was about 30, which made a gain up to 55 on Friday, the last day of school. The school is proud to report an offering of $34.50 given to the cooperative program.

NOTICE OF MEETING TO DISCUSS RAILWAY EXPRESS CHARGES

On August 3, 1953, Railway Express Agency, Incorporated, filed tariff schedules with the Alabama Public Service Commission which would have the effect of increasing Alabama intrastate express rates on September 8, 1953, by approximately 15 percent, which is the same extent as authorized by the Interstate Commerce Commission to apply on interstate traffic and which became effective August 20, 1953.

The Alabama Public Service Commission on August 31, 1953, ordered the Railway Express Agency to defer the use of the increased express rates on Alabama intrastate traffic until October 8, 1953, and to appear at a public hearing in the Commission's hearing room at 516 South Perry Street, Montgomery, Alabama, at 9:30 a.m., Monday, September 21, 1953, to justify the proposed increases in rates on Alabama intrastate express.

Any person desiring to protest the increase in Alabama intrastate express rates should appear at the hearing and offer evidence or oral testimony in supporta thereof.

BEGINS TERM AT UNIVERSITY SEPTEMBER 1st

Tuscaloosa, Ala. — Dr. Oliver Cromwell Carmichael will begin his term as the 19th president of the University of Alabama on Tuesday, September 1st.

Dr. Carmichael will take over administration of the University affairs from Interim President Lee Bidgood, who has filled in since Dr. John Gallalee's retirement in July. Bidgood is dean of the School of Commerce and Business Administration.

The new president of the University is a native of Goodwater and is a 1911 graduate of the University. He received a master's degree from the University, and was awarded an honorary LLB degree in 1937. He was once a member of the University faculty. As a Rhodes Scholar from Alabama, Dr. Carmichael earned Oxford University's bachelor of science degree.

Sixteen American colleges and universities have conferred honorary degrees on Dr. Carmirhael. He served as president of Alabama College at Montevallo from 1926-35 and was Vanderbilt University's chancellor from 1937-46.

Local Schools Hame An Extra Large Enrollment

Unless something is done immediately the local schools will be unable to accommodate the enrollment according to reports from Eddie Waters, Principal of the Chilton County High School, and U. H. Abrams, Principal of the Clanton Elementary School. Both buildings, it seems, is bursting at the seams.

The Clanton Elementary School with 695 has the largest enrollment on record for the school and the high school has 575 which was probably topped during the war years.

Regardless, both schools need more room as does practically every school in the county and the crowds of children who marched to their classes this week gave a good indication of what must be done about it — appropriate more money for schools.

Chestnut Creek All-Day Singing September 6th

The annual all-day singing will be held at Chestnut Church at Cooper, Ala., on the first Sunday in September.

All singers and lovers of gospel music have a special invitation to attend. It is requested that you bring your new song books with you.

P & M To Hold Meet Saturday

The P. & M. Association will hold their annual meeting at the courthouse Saturday morning at 10 a.m., according to A. D. Headley, secretary-treasurer of the organization. The purpose of the meeting is to issue dividend checks for the past year and to elect new officers. Mr. Headley urges a good attendance.

TAXES

The automatic expiration early next year of taxes yielding about $8,000,000,000 makes practically imperative the Administration's insistence on present cuts in Federal spending. The alternative would be a $12,000,000,000 deficit next year instead of the current $4,000,000,000, or new and higher taxes.

Long-Week End Expected To Claim 10 Lives In State

A. L. MARTIN

Montgomery, Ala. — The Alabama Safety Council announced this week that 10 persons may die in traffic accidents during the coming Labor Day holiday week end in this state.

The prediction came even as most state-and local traffic law enforcement agencies marshaled for the most critical annual traffic period of the year, state-wide and nationally.

The Council said it based its prediction of 10, partly on the records of the Alabama Department of Public Safety and partly on "Alabama's recent tragic Independence Day week end traffic toll."

Actually, the Council said, the record indicates "six deaths would be 'normal' for the 78-hour period." This figure is based upon Alabama's 1952 Labor Day toll with the added reflection of a slight traffic improvement this year over 1952.

"But," the Council added, "the slaughter on our streets and highways during the Fourth week end belied any general improvement trend. It was a holiday period, and too many Alabamians cast all common sense and judgment to the winds. The final chaotic result was 16 deaths, more than 500 injuries, more than 4,000 accidents in all, and an economic loss to Alabamians of more than a million and a half dollars.

Ten traffic deaths had been predicted for the 54-hour Independence period.

"Alabamians and tourists must realize, or be made to realize, that holiday driving is extremely dangerous because of traffic volume and driver attitudes. Any Alabama holiday period is twice as deadly, traffic-wise, as a normal period, because of these volumes and attitudes."

L. B. Sullivan, director of the Alabama Department of Public Safety, said every available man in his department will be on the road during the week end. Off-days have been cancelled, and long working shifts are being scheduled.

Augmenting this force, Sullivan said, will be many enforcement officers of the Conservation Department and Alcoholic Beverage Control Board. These officers were issued highway patrol commissions by Gov. Gordon Persons last year, and "have been of great assistance ever since," Sullivan said.

(Conservation and ABC enforcement vehicles are not painted as conspicuously as most Alabama Highway Patrol vehicles, so present a greater threat to "police car-conscious" habitual traffic law breakers.)

The Safety Council said excessive speed "probably will kill half" of the coming week end toll. "Drunken driving, improper passing and disregard of traffic signs and signals" will account for most of the remainder.

These are the most common Labor Day traffic violations, and "the ones against which the sane motorist must guard himself and his family most carefully."

Best accident preventive measures to be applied for this week end, according to the Council, are "first, stay off the highway if and as much as you possibly can. Second, keep your car under complete control every moment you are in traffic—expect the unexpected, and stay ready to avoid an accident no matter how it comes toward you."

Jemison Infant Strangles On A String In Crib

A string toy-holder turned into a death-trap for an eight-months-old Jemison infant last week when he got two loops of it around his neck and choked to death.

Little Robert E. Wheeler, son of Mr. and Mrs. John Wheeler of Jemison, was playing quietly in his crib when his mother went out to milk last Thursday, August 27th, but when she returned she found her child strangled with a string that had been tied with toys on it to his bed for his enjoyment. Only the night before the string had been cut loose at one end for fear that he might get tangled in it while standing in bed.

Robert was buried last Sunday in the Hepzebah Baptist Church Cemetery with the Rev. S. B. Rogers officiating.

Surviving the infant are his parents; two brothers, and his grandparents, Mr. and Mrs. Edward E Baggett, of McCalla, Ala.

Pleasant Grove Revival Begins Next Sunday

The revival will begin at Pleasant Grove Methodist Church on September 6th, running through the 11th, with the Rev. A. L. Martin, of Mobile, Ala., as the speaker, with 10:30 a.m. and 7:30 p.m. services. Rev. J. C. Brown, the pastor, extends a cordial invitation to all.

CLANTON WILL GET BUSINESS COLLEGE

W. H. Foster and Hooper Nolen, representatives of the Alverson-Draughon College of Birmingham, were in Clanton this week in the interest of bringing a business college here.

Mr. Nolen is at the Willingham Hotel and can be reached there for information regarding the school.

Before this course can be brought here there must be at least 25 who enroll for one of the many courses offered. Speedwriting and shorthand will be featured but courses in secretarial work, general office work, filing, spelling, typewriting, business spelling and clerical practice and procedure, will be offered.

The school has been recommended by the local Chilton County Chamber of Commerce. For full particulars see the advertisement in this issue of your Chilton County News.

Hill Charges Republicans With High Living Costs

Senator Lister Hill has charged the Republican administration with responsibility for the highest cost of living in the history of the United States, as announced by the Bureau of Labor Statistics.

"The announcement comes as no surprise to our farmers and our wage and salary earners, who are being severely pinched by the mounting cost of living," Hill said in a statement. He added:

"Our farmers are particularly hard hit. The farmer is caught between rising costs of living and of doing business, on the one hand, and the sharp drop in farm prices on the other hand. The farmer must pay more for what he buys but gets less for what he produces." Hill continued:

"This economic squeeze is the direct result of the actions and policies of the Republican administration—the sweeping away of all controls on prices, the administration's high interest rate, tight credit policies, the decline in farm exports and the loss of farm export markets, and the uncertainty and anxiety of farmers over the administration's position with respect to the farm price support program. These are danger signs which the administration can ignore only at the risk of irreparable damage to our economic strength."

STUDENT ENROLLMENT CAUSES HOUSE SHORTAGE

School officials expected 7,000 students to enroll for the fall term which begins in September. College authorities have petitioned Auburn citizens to sponsor a housing program.

H. F. Vallery, director of men's housing, said both men and women's dormitories have been filled. He added that some students might be refused admittance unless emergency housing facilities are provided.

THINGS HUMMING HERE

Things were humming Tuesday morning in Clanton. At the corner at Upchurch Drug Store bees had swarmed on the traffic light there and the Police Department, with the aid of other gentlemen with bee "know how" had to give them the bum's rush.

It took Chief Tucker and his co-workers nearly an hour to get a pick-up truck, step-ladder, and other bee-fighting accessories together to do the job. However, when they got all set it wasn't long before the bees had been dispossessed.

Things hadn't hummed around that corner so much since last year about this time.

BUT WHOSE CRIME?

For months, and months now, the local Police Department and the Sheriff and his Deputies have been trying to break up a series of petty crimes that have been taking place at much too regular intervals in and around Clanton.

The past week two teen-aged boys were arrested for breaking in a local business and within the past year a dozen places have been bedeviled by such instances. The News Office was gone into not long ago and the entrance could only have been committed by a small boy, or boys.

Now, whose responsibility and whose crime is it when things like this occur. It all gets back to the parent, doesn't it? Probably if we knew where our teen ager was, and what he was doing, and what kind of company he was keeping there would be less for the police and the other law officers to have to worry with.

Are we, as parents, doing the best we can?

SCHOOL DAYS AHEAD

To many a freckle-faced youngster September is a foreboding sound. For it is in this month that complete freedom dies for millions of boys and girls, and the schoolroom curriculum once again demands its place in their lives.

To the youngster who roamed the hills with an adventurous spirit during June, July and August, this confinement often comes hard. To the freckle-faced lad who spent his time swimming in that nearby stream or lake, or hiking through the woods, or just lying on the bank of some stream waiting for a fish to bite, looking up into a summer sky, school is the worst of all of mankind's inventions.

To most young girls, the catastrophe of reopening schools is not as grave a matter. Somehow, as is the case with their mothers, the female sex seems to adjust to shock more easily.

But the consolations which come with school and September are many. For one thing, football is just around the corner and the first crisp days of Autumn follow closely behind.

To that youngster who hunts over hills and valleys, colored in brilliant fall hues, the first cool days remind him of the smell of gunpowder, and the taste of quail or pheasant. And then, with September and the cooler weather, come either thoughts of the first snow of the year, or Thanksgiving or Christmas.

And, despite the tremendous grief at the arrival of September, the consequences are neither serious or long-lived. But, if it is any consolation, lads, father, and most of the red-blooded men around (and maybe mother), long ago suffered the same emotions They faced the threat of education with a stiff upper lip.

THIS WEEK IN Washington

Ike — Seeks Prosperity— Germany — Key to War— Malenkov's Bid— September Elections—

Washington — President Dwight Eisenhower is not insensitive to even the smallest business trends in the U. S. economy and seems to be determined to prevent a major recession while he is President. If the Chief Executive succeeds in this undertaking, as he has in every major assignment in recent years, the country will enjoy good business for years to come.

The President realizes only too well that the Republican party cannot afford to present the country another economic crisis. The memory of the depression of 1930-33 is still fresh in the minds of too many voters and another bust while the Republicans are in power would nix the G.O.P. with millions of voters, might actually end the party as an effective national machine. And, regardless of his views on what caused the depression of the thirties, the President knows that the blame for it has been tied to the G.O.P. in the minds of millions of voters.

With this in mind the President has decided to set up a network of economic experts in the major cities in all sections of the country. This network will send in monthly reports on economic conditions. The idea is to get quick reports in Washington of developing trends, inflationary or deflationary, without having to wait for official government reports to be published.

Already the new administration has shown that it would act swiftly to halt any severe tightening of loan money. There is renewed speculation at present that a new move in this direction will be made if evidences develop that loan funds are drying up again. The administration has also given its blessing to a plan whereby 100 business, agricultural and labor leaders will meet with the Senate Banking and Currency September 15th to study international trade and the economic angles involved.

The President long ago appointed an agricultural group to assess the needs of the farmer, and he is now moving to ease some of the requirements of the Taft-Hartley law, and extend social security. In every way he is playing the game to avoid a sharp recession. If he can avoid that trap, he will have taken a major step toward his re-election in 1956, if he wants the job.

The key to the European defense picture at the moment is Germany. After six years of military and economic aid to Europe, the United States must now stand by practically helplessly and watch German voters decide whether that nation will join NATO forces in Europe and make mutual defense a reality and a success.

President Eisenhower has said no European Army without German units could be successful in fulfilling NATO goals. The elections in West Germany on the 6th are thus of vital concern to both Russia and the United States. If voters support parties not inclined to collaborate with the West, Malenkov will have succeeded in scaring the Germans away from the West.

The new USSR dictator used every card in his hand to lure West German voters away from Chancellor Konrad Adenauer's pro-western government. He promised to free German prisoners, end repatriations, and aid East Germany economically. Shortly before he had urged a united Germany—on Russian terms of course.

It became clear late in August that Malenkov and the Reds were doing all in their power to prevent the reelection of Adenauer. They warned West Germans that alignment with the West meant war. They promised peace, if Adenauer were defeated. But the Russian change of tune came at the last minute. Would West Germans believe Malenkov now, after all these years of Russian treachery, thievery, and deception? That was the sixty-four dollar question in Europe.

Happiest Boys & Girls In The Whole State Of Alabama

Montgomery, Ala. — Among the happiest boys and girls in the "Yellow Hammer" state are orphans of Master Masons, guests of the Alabama Masonic Home Farm near Montgomery.

They reside in separate residences in a peaceful and lovely grove cared for by matrons, either widows or Masons or members of the O. E. S., with kindly affection. The Children take pride in keeping their dormitories spotless inside and out.

Boys at the Home have regular jobs assigned to them, when they are not in school. The girls also pitch in a help. Then there is play. Children at the Alabama Masonic Home never seem to grow tired of their playgrounds, that have safe and sturdy equipment.

Like boys the country over, these youngsters are always ready for a camping trip. Each summer they are guests at Camp Rotary near Montgomery. When vacation is over the boys and girls attend schools in Montgomery. They also attend Sunday School. Everyone at the Home in encouraged to attend the church of his choice.

All of the children have healthy appetites and how those kids can eat. Those nice persons who have charge of the Home believe that there is no substitute for good food, most of it raised on the Home Farm. There is an abundance of fresh milk, eggs, fruits, and vegetables, and chickens, pork and beef. Hunger is unknown at this happy Masonic Home.

Grand Master Joseph S. Southall, Grand Dodge, F & A M of Alabama urges all Master Masons to contribute to the Million Dollar Endowment Fund now being raised for the permanent maintenance of the Home. Secretaries of Alabama Masonic Lodges will be glad to receive your contributions.

WAGE INCREASE IS ANNOUNCED BY SOUTHERN BELL

Concluding negotiations which began on May 11, Southern Bell Telephone and Telegraph Company and Communications Workers of America CIO today announced agreement on modifications of their contract which covers approximately 51,500 employees in the nine states served by the Telephone Company.

Wage increases ranging from $1.00 to $3.00 a week are provided for a majority of the employees. In addition, agreement was reached on the reclassification of a number of cities and towns to higher wage levels and on the upgrading of certain craft jobs. A number of changes was also made in working practices.

Modifications will become effective as of August 23, and the agreement will run for one year.

President Fred J. Turner, of the Southern Bell, issued the following statement:

"We are pleased that a settlement has been reached that is fair to all concerned. We are particularly gratified that it came without interruption of service to the public. In the agreement, full consideration was given to the interest of the three elements vitally concerned in the operation of our Company—the customers, the employees and the owners of the business.

The agreement makes adjustments in the wages of our employees necessary to bring them to a level comparable to that prevailing in the cities and towns where they work and live. This is in accordance with long-established Company policy that is necessary in order for us to attract and retain the competent employees essential to good service.

Wages continue to be the biggest single cost of operating our business, amounting to about half of every expense dollar."

The Company acknowledges the assistance of the Federal Mediation and Conciliation service in arriving at this agreement. Mr. R. W. Dennahoo of the Service participated in final phases of the bargaining.

"But except ye repent, ye shall all likewise perish." Luke 13:3.

Kepentence occupies a very important place in Scripture because it is always the divine pre-requisite for forgiveness of sins. Nowhere in the whole of Scripture is there a single instance recorded where God forgave an unrepentant sinner. Before God can bestow His grace and mercy upon anyone, the individual must be fully cognizant of his sin and inability to save himself; then, he must acknowledge his sins to God and plead for forgiveness.

Many commonplace examples of repentance and forgiveness occur in everyday life. Take, for example, the little child, who, when he is threatened with punishment by his mother for invading the cookie jar against her instructions, comes and throws his arms around her neck and asks for her forgiveness. The mother's heart melts and she remits the punishment with the child's promise that he will obey from now on. In this illustration two points stand out clearly: First, the child's knowleuge that he has done wrong by disobedience, and secondly his outward demonstration of his remorse by his plea to his mother not to punish him.

Repentance, therefore, embodies two phases—a contrite attitude, and the act of confession. Both are absolutely necessary. Without an attitude of humility any confession of sin would be as "sounding brass and a tinkling cymbal"; however, mere knowledge of sin without confession is equally void.

If you have never repented of your sins, my friends, I urge you to do so today without fail. If you feel that you are too deep in sin, read the prayer of the publican who said, "God, be merciful to me a sinner," or that of the dying thief on the Cross who said, "Lord, remember me when thou comest into Thy Kingdom," and Jesus' assuring words, "Today shalt thou be with Me in Paradise." Come unto Him in humble, penitent faith for He will have mercy and abundantly pardon.

Susie Pope (Colored) died at the Good Samaritan Hospital in Selma on Wednesday night, August 19, after a lengthy illness. Susie had been under the care of a Clanton physician for nearly a year. It seems that she suffered with a heart ailment. Susie came to this section early in life and lived with the Pritchard family for many, many years, giving them of her service as cook and housekeeper. After serving this family so faithfully she then started working for the Thrash family and continued there for a long time. Since that time she has served several other families well in this and adjoining communities. She was a good servant, obedient, humble and helpful in the community where she lived. Her white friends say of her, "She was a good negro—a negro that worked hard and minded her own business." She lived alone.

CHILTON COUNTY STILL PROGRESSING IN ITS SOIL CONSERVATION

Jeck Roberts of the Dry Valley Comunity is in the process of applying one ton of lime, five hundred pounds of 4-12-12, twenty pounds of Dallis grass, and two bushels of oats and crimson clover on forty-odd acres of new summer pasture. Oats and Kentucky-31 Fescue will be seeded on a seperate field for winter pasture. In both cases the oats will serve as a nurse crop, and will be hayed or combined for grain, depending on season and the needs at harvest.

James Kincaid of Thorsby has an idea that might prove of value as a soil conserving crop and shelter for chickens. James states, "I plan on stretching some woven wire and allow the Kudzu to crawl over the wire and form a canopy where the chickens can get green grazing and shade from the same area."

* * *

J. C. Boockholdt said, "I plan on starting soon preparing land to plant oats as a nurse crop and add Bahia grass to serve as a perennial grass sodded water way.

Dewey Hill, also of the Enterprise Community, has four acres of Caley peas which he will plant Rescue Grass on this fall.

There are several hundred farmers in Chilton County, as there are in every county in the southeastern United States, that have used the excuse that seed are too high to establish the conservation crops he knows that are needed on his farm. So, in the fall of 1953 it looks like he might establish the crop a lot cheaper than in the last eight or ten years. Start land preparation now for meadow outlets, new pasture, or other Soil Conservation land preparation.

OUR DAY IN PROPHECY

God warned the world through Noah, of the coming flood. He gave ample warning to the cities of the plain, Sodom and Gomorrah, before their ultimate destruction. The nations of old, such as Babylon, Egypt, Medo-Persia and Rome, were fully warned of their coming doom. The coming of Christ the Lord of glory, was clearly foretold by all the prophets of the Old Testament.

In the light of these facts, why should we not believe that God would have spoken in His Word, about this our day, the greatest day of human history? Jesus said: "But as the days of Noe were, so shall also the coming of the Son of man be." Matthew 24:37.

The explosion of the first atomic bomb changed the thinking of mankind. The H-bomb, if fully developed and used, could destroy the world in one night—the last hope of survival of the race. Will God permit this to happen? What have the Bible prophecies said about man's effort to destroy the world? Are we headed for world peace or a world in pieces?

Beginning Sunday evening 7:30 at the Adventist Church a series of three talking picture lectures, with screen illustrations, will be given on, "The Last Day Prophecies of Daniel." The public is invited.

U. S. officials are seriously concerned over the continuing inability of the French to form a stable government and economy. The large numbers of Frenchmen who remain ardent Communists is disillusioning. Since France was the major continental power on which U. S. defense plans of Europe were based, her weakness is of momentus import.

A number of observers are fast concluding that only a radical form of government can bring stability to the country. It could be a radical leftist, or even a dictator.

MOTORISTS ADVISED TO DRIVE CAREFULLY

Montgomery—"Always expect the unexpected where children are concerned."

L. B. Sullivan, director of the Alabama Department of Public Safety, gave this advice to motorists today, speaking in connection with the September traffic program for child safety being sponsored by the Alabama and National Safety Councils.

"When children get interested in playing ball, or running a race, or a thousand and one other activities, they are apt to forget for a moment the safety rules they have been taught at home and in school," Sullivan said. "And one moment of forgetfulness can be fatal.

"Motorists always must be on guard for children," he said. "For when a child forgets, the driver must remember, if a tragic accident is to be avoided."

Sullivan gave four rules for motorists to follow, to protect children on the streets and highways of Alabama:

1. Remember that children are unpredictable, and the motorist must think for them in traffic.

2. Give young bike riders every break.

3. Drive with extreme caution near schools and playgrounds, and in residential areas—in fact, near any place where children may gather.

4. Be especially alert in school areas for sign, signals, traffic police, safety patrols, and for children themselves.

"The best advice on child safety anyone can give a motorist," Sullivan concluded, "is contained in the September slogan of the Alabama and National Safety Council: 'Children May Dare—Drivers Beware!'"

Under The Study Lamp—

THE TOUCH OF THE MASTER'S HAND

By William Crowe

"He restoreth my soul"—Psalm 23:3

In the opening paragraph of the third chapter of the Gospel of Mark you will find the account of the restoration of the paralytic's withered hand. By the dsuite the victim's arm and hand had become shrunken. The miracle that brought a renewal of muscular strength in that case is analagous to what the psalmist had in mind when he wrote, "He restoreth my soul." There is another verse in that unrivaled hymn that portrays more vividly the bountiful benefits that result from one's direct contact with God.

At this point may we quote a less English preacher, James Henry paragraph from the pen of the peer-Jowett; "There are withered limbs of the spirit as well as of the body. There are faculties and powers which are wasting away, sacred endowments which have lost their vital circulation. In some lives the will is a withered limb. In others it is conscience. In others, again, it is the affection. These splendid moral and spiritual powers are being dried up, and they hang comparitively limp and useless in the life. They have been withered by sin and wilful negligence."

"He restoreth my soul." As Jesus was the healer of withered limbs, so today He can minister unto the faculties of the heart and mind that have become benumbed by constant indifference to the will of God. He can deal with wayward affections, and warm them into sacred love, as the springtime sun deals with the river that has been locked in ice. He can restore the circulation to a broken will, as He did to the withered hand, and empower it to respond in loving obedience, to the will of the Creator. He can give grip and tenacity to all who are hungering and thirsting after righteousness, so that they can be abundantly satisfied with the bread that cometh down from above.

The question with us is, are we willing to obey the voice of him who commanded the afflicted man, "Stretch forth thy hand." That is, are we ready to surrender to the Healer? Obedience to that command takes us into the region of the impossible, humanly speaking. But with God, the impossible becomes possible, for He who is the way, the truth and the life, can vitalize all!

The Shepherd has more confidence in the sheep than they have in themselves. If we are willing to follow Him with unquestioning obedience, we will find ourselves singing.

JOBS SHOULD NOT INTERFERE WITH SCHOOL, OFFICIAL SAYS

Birmingham, Ala. — With the fall opening of the nation's public schools, officials of the U. S. Department of Labor here are planning to do everything possible to keep illegal employment from interfering with youthful education.

"For boys and girls not yet graduated, the most important job is training and education," says Regional Director Homer E. Krog of the Labor Department's Wage and Hour and Public Contracts Divisions here. "Unlawful employment should not keep them out of school."

To explain unlawful employment, Krog pointed out that in enacting the Federal Fair Labor Standards Act, Congress made it illegal to employ children under 16 years of age in interstate commerce or in the production of goods for interstate commerce, in most instances.

In agriculture, it is unlawful to employ children under 16 during school hours if the farm products concerned go into interstate or foreign commerce.

Since the Law was enacted some years ago, he said he hoped it was now understood that the Law applies equally to local resident children working on their parent's farm. Farmers are responsible under the Law if they employ under-age children during school hours.

He said "school hours" means those hours when school is in session for the school district where the child under 16 is currently living. If local authorities decide to close the local school for several days during a peak harvesting season it is, of course, not considered to be in session at that time.

Furthermore, he said, the Law sets no minimum age for the employment of minors in agriculture before or after school hours, nor at any time on school holidays, or during school vacations.

"Ignorance, poverty, and evil are often closely allied," he said. "With Congress showing the way, it behooves all of us to lend intelligent cooperation in the matter of educating the nation's youthful citizens," he declared.

INDIVIDUAL INCOMES

Individual incomes in the nation rose five per cent last year over the 1951 figures to $255,000,000,000. All but four states reported increases in setting up the $1,639 national per capita income.

Folks and Things ABOUT TOWN —By Ben

Politics is in the air again. It seems mighty early for talk to be going the rounds as to who will run for this, or that, office but such is the case. Understand Solicitor A. B. Foshee may have opposition if he plans to run for re-election, and the word is going the rounds that M. C. (Jack) Hayes may have an opponent or two. Any number have announced their plans to run for the Tax Assessor's job and also that of the Sheriff. The Representative seems destined to have a half dozen opponents, counting ourself. We plan to run on the ob-servationist ticket. Anything anybody else votes for—we're against. But it won't be long now. We're going to have a lot of fun. Come on get in the race. Run for something.

STATE JC's STAGE "OPERATION WARMTH"

Heflin, Ala. — Three thousand Alabama Jaycees today launched "Operation Warmth" to collect blankets for the earthquake-ravaged Greek islands. "The aim of the state's 60 Junior Chamber of Commerce chapters is to collect vitally needed blankets for the homeless families whose homes were wrecked in recent earthquakes, "M. M. (Buster Miles)", state Jaycee President said.

"The need is urgent and compelling," Miles said. "This is an emergency project to keep thousands of people from suffering during the coming winter months."

Each of Alabama's Jaycee chapters has formed a committee to gather blankets locally and ship immediately to Operation Warmth headquarters in New York City.

President Miles urged all Alabama citizens today to contact the nearest headquarters and turn over all un-needed blankets. The Jaycees will take care of the bundling and shipping.

The deadline is September 15.

Jaycees should ship all blankets to "Operation Warmth, in care Most Reverend Archbishop Michael, 10 East 79th Street, New York City.

A minimum aim of 20,000 blankets has been set for the national quota.

The project is part of a U. S. Jaycee nationwide drive to ship blankets for the relief of homeless residents of the Ionian Islands that were recently devastated by earthquakes. Distribution of the blankets in Greece will be by the Hellenic Junior Chamber of Commerce.

Chilton County Free Of Traffic Mishaps Week-End

Looks like Chilton County will be free of traffic accidents during the Labor Day week end if the first two days are any example as to what is to come.

Up until press-time today (Monday) about the worst accident that could be found by contacting the Highway Patrol, and local law enforcement officers was the head-on collision of a car and a cow. Need it be said the cow got the worst end of the deal? Certain it is that said cow is in cows' heaven, wherever that is.

According to Officer Fred Steen, member of the State Highway Patrol stationed here, the motoring public has been on its good behavior and the patrol has found very little trouble maintaining order on our highways.

NOT GAME WARDENS ANY MORE; THEY'RE CONSERVATION OFFICERS

Montgomery, Ala. — Alabama's Conservation Director, Earl M. McGowin, announced here today that the state's game wardens will be known as conservation officers in the future and will be hired under new and more rigid qualifications.

McGowin stated that personnel now working for the Department of Conservation will be reclassified as conservation officers. In addition, applications will be received by the State Personnel Board up to September 15 from new men interested in qualifying for a job as conservation officer.

Requirements for the jobs will include minimum age of 23 years, maximum of 40 years; minimum height five feet, nine inches; minimum weight 150 pounds and maximum weight in proportion to height.

Applicants should have a working knowledge and skill in the use of fishing tackle, trapping and hunting equipment and firearms; knowledge of federal and state laws relating to conservation of fish, game and forests; good knowledge of fish and game common to the state, their habits, and natural requirements; knowledge of basic fish, game and forest conservation principles, of good forestry practice, land management and of first aid.

A written examination will be given at some time after September 15 to establish an eligible list as required by the merit system law of the state.

McGowin said the new standards were set up in order to assure hiring young, qualified men as conservation officers. The job includes active public relations work and officers must emphasize conservation education.

THE ARRIVAL OF AUTUMN

After the hot months of July and August, the arrival of autumn is welcomed by most Americans. This year autumn begins at 3:07 a.m., September 23rd. At that time the length of day and night is approximately the same in this part of the Northern Hemisphere (The sun will rise at 5:49 a.m. for the Southern portion of the United States on a line from Charleston, S. C., to Southern California and below, while it rises officially at 5:48 above that line in the United States.)

Of all the seasons, autumn is the most nostalgic. The first crisp days of fall, the bright turning leaves which begin to cover the ground, combined with new wool sweaters, football, the smell of burning leaves, the brown fields and bluish smoke from country chimneys, are all familiar impressions. The weather is perhaps the pleasantest of all the year.

Because the flowers and crops are dying or dead, however, fall is a melancholy time of year for nature's products. There is also the thought that soon after the beautiful days of October and early November will come the colder, harsher weather of winter.

The end of the year comes into view, and this tends to bring back memories and summations for the year, thus lending another emphasis to the nostalgic note. The days rapidly grow shorter and the nights longer, and the result is that the earth loses the heat stored up during the summer months. But, until the cold weather is actually upon us, and the days are at their shortest, the best days of the year and nature's greatest show should be enjoyed by all who are capable of appreciating the miracle of life and nature so evident around us.

FOR BRITAIN — RECOVERY

Almost exactly fourteen years after the German armies marched into Poland, thus committing Great Britain to go to war with Nazi Germany, the British people have at last pulled themselves out of an economic abyss which threatened to reduce Great Britain to a minor power. To prevent such an eventuality, the British people have tightened their belts and subjected themselves to strict rationing since the end of World War II.

There are few examples of national self-discipline and individual sacrifice more courageous than that of the British during the last fourteen years. Now, at last, and due in part to American aid, the British see their export sales going up and a favorable trade balance in much-needed dollars rising steadily. Gold and dollar reserves in Great Britain are now close to 2.5 billion dollars, which represents an increase of nearly a billion dollars in the last year.

When it is remembered that these reserves were dangerously low only a few years ago and steadily shrinking, one can see that recovery is now well on its way. In Britain itself, business has picked up noticeably in the last few months, and automobile sales, appliance sales and housing starts are all up sharply.

Much of the credit for this recovery must be given to leaders who insisted the British people maintain price control and rationing in order to prevent inflation from ruining the countrys chances for recovery. With inflation controlled, British manufacturers have been able to export goods at prices which have risen only moderately since World War II and, thereby undersell similar products in some countries where inflation has doubled and tripled prices since World War II.

The United States will benefit greatly by the recovery of Great Britain. The British have an air force which, in quality, is second to none in the world. They have the world's second largest Navy. The British Isles represent the best possible air base for U. S. planes in any eventual trouble with Russia. Despite our differences, we stand to gain much from the British recovery.

2 Million People Will Be Injured In Automobile Accidents This Year

Motor vehicles will claim at least 2,000,000 injured victims in 1953, according to Thomas N. Boate, nationally known highway safety authority, and 1954 may see that figure greatly exceeded if present upward trends of injuries continue.

Mr. Boate, who is accident prevention department manager of the Association of Casualty and Surety Companies, declared today that some official estimates of the number of persons injured in automobile accidents are "completely unrealistic." They are based, he said, on theoretical ratios of approximately 35 persons injured for every person killed on the highways. Actually, he asserted, official reports of injuries in some states run from 75 to 125 persons injured for every person killed, and the national average is undoubtedly 50 to 55 hurt for every fatality, rather than of 35 to 1.

These "well-based" higher estimates of the number of men, women and children injured by automobiles are borne out both by accident reports of some states and by independent annual studies of the extent of the accident toll in injuries as well as deaths, Mr. Boate explained. A former Pennsylvania State Police captain on traffic duty who has been engaged in highway safety work with the Association for the last ten years, Mr. Boate said he is convinced that widely accepted estimates of motor vehicle injuries ranging in recent years from 1,100,000 to 1,350,000 are merely "shots in the dark based on outdated theoretical proportions of injuries to fatalities."

His "realistic" estimates are from one-third to 55 percent higher than the quasi-official national figures for injured victims, he pointed out. He added that the lower totals are "a masterpiece of understatement" because too many states have inadequate accident records.

In this connection he pointed out that one state which reported an average of 113 persons injured for every highway fatality over a three-year period, 1950 to 1952, has four neighboring states whose reported injuries ranged from one-third to a little more than half of that total during the period. The lowest average of the neighboring states was 35 injuries for every death, the highest 75, and those in-between were 45 and 65. In several states the averages run somewhat lower, but he added that these averages occur in less populous states and have little significance or effect on the national average.

"It is inconceivable that the number of persons injured in motor vehicle accidents should vary so widely over state lines," Mr. Boate commented. "Generally speaking, proportions of injured to dead are lower in states with large rural areas because speed kills far more victims on the rural highways, while in the more densely populated states the totals of injured run higher because more accidents occur at relatively lower speeds in urban areas, injuring more people less seriously than in the open highways. However, even these considerations do not take into account the wide variety of ratios of injured to dead in adjoining states which are similarly rural in character.

"As I see it, the relative efficiency of the respective reporting systems is the only logical answer to the wide variations. Some states actually do not know how many persons are injured in highway accidents because drivers are not required to report injuries in all instances.

"Where the full facts about the far larger totals of injured are known, the real truth about the enormity of the accident situation is given to the public. Injuries which cripple the victims for life alone reach into hundreds of thousands of American families every year to affect their happiness, their way of living and their economic status.

"The deaths of approximately 40,000 persons in automobile accidents annually is one of the nation's most serious problems to be solved by effecting greater safety on the highways, but the injuring of 2,000,000 more men, women and children ranks very close to that enormous American tragedy."

Mr. Boate said more widespread use of standard traffic accident records in both states and communities, in order to determine the actual totals of injured victims and property damage, as well as fatalities, should be an important national objective in the approach to solutions of the accident problem.

Select Furniture For Small Home Carefully

Furniture for a small home should be selected carefully, advises Alice Peavy, API Extension home furnishings specialist.

"It should be small in scale and simple enough in design not to attract too much attention, appear to take up too much space, or obstruct the view," she explains. "Measure wall spaces and furnishings to be sure the new additions will fit satisfactorily."

Traditional furniture has been scaled down to suit the small home, continues the home expert. Look also for transitional furniture that combines good points of both modern and traditional furniture. And for lovers of the unconventional there are both conservative modern and ultra-modern pieces now on the market.

Health & Beauty

RELAX

One thing that is wrong with the world today is that man is in a maelstrom, a vortex. He is not taking time out to relax, to think, to pray, to rest.

Our bodies are only machines. It is true that they are the most delicate and intricate machines in the whole world when driven at top speed with no rest for long hours every day, they wear out and burn up.

A new machine, like a young body, can take a great deal more neglect and punishment than an older one. But it will not last as long as it would if it had a reasonable amount of care.

Rest and care are necessary to preserve and extend the life and usefulness of any machine. The same is true of your body. If your man-made machine gives out from your misuse and neglect, you may be able to buy another that will take its place. When your body becomes diseased, and premature old age renders it useless, you can not replace it. It will never be the same again. Your earning days and happy, useful years are at an end.

Many people are bringing on illness because they do not relax. Only yesterday I was examining the nervous reflexes of a young school teacher.

"You are nervous," I commented. "You need to relax. Do you get any rest in the day-time?"

"No, when I get my dinner I begin instruction in sports. It is basketball now."

"You should rest a while after dinner. When you have taught all day, you cannot properly digest your food unless you rest and relax at least for a short period after you eat. What time do you retire?"

"Oh, around 11 or 12 o'clock most of the time. You see I must correct papers at night."

"No wonder you are nervous. You are burning the candle at both ends."

This young woman, like thousands of others, does not know the importance of relaxation.

Do you realize that the heart beats 4,000 times an hour, day and night. Every organ of the body is active. If they were not, the body would not function right and we would suffer.

Relax, rest a while every day. This is essential to the well-being of the mind and body. Go to bed at a reasonable hour and try to get at least eight hours of sleep every night.

Don't say that you are too busy. You won't be too busy to take time out to go to bed when you are too ill to move a step further, and you'll find time to die and to remain in the grave a long time when your body, to which you gave so little consideration, is too worn out to function any longer.

Take time out now to relax, to think, and to pray.

Dates Are Given For Managed Hunts In State Forest Areas

Montgomery, Ala. — Earl M. McGowin, Director of the Alabama Department of Conservation, announced here today the dates and permit requirements for managed hunts this fall on three National Forest areas located in the state.

McGowin said permits for several two-day deer hunts on the forests will be available at the Montgomery office of the Department of Conservation. In the past game wardens in the National Forest areas have issued these permits, but this year they will only sell permits for squirrel and quail hunting and trapping of furbearers.

Applications for permits to hunt deer on the Bankhead Forest and the Oakmulgee and Choccolocco Divisions of Talladega National Forest will be received beginning October 15. All applications received before that date will be dated October 15th.

Permits for each type of hunting on the National Forest areas will cost the hunter $2. Each applicant must submit the serial number of his state hunting license to be eligible. Trapping permits are $5. Not more than four permits will be allowed on one application.

If more persons apply for permits than the number available for the National Forest deer hunts, then the permits will be drawn in a lottery. If all permits are not sold by November 15 then the extra ones will be placed on sale at the forest where the hunts are to be held.

Managed deer hunts will be held as follows:

Talladega National Forest:

Choccolocco Division, two-day hunts November 20-21; November 27-28 and December 3-4. Five hundred permits are available for each of the first two hunts and 400 for the last.

Oakmulgee Division, two-day hunts November 20-21; November 27-28 and December 3-4. Four hundred permits are available for the first hunt and 300 each for the last two.

Bankhead National Forest:

Two-day hunts on November 20-21; November 27-28; and December 3-4. Five hundred permits are available for each of the first two hunts and 400 for the last.

Trapping in each of the three forest areas will be open to permit holders from December 1 through February 20.

Quail hunting will be open in the Oakmulgee and Choccolocco Divisions from December 15 through January 15, with no open bird season in the Bankhead Forest.

Squirrel hunting will be open in all three areas November 1-15 and December 15-January 1. One squirrel hunting permit will enable the holder to hunt in both portions of the season.

Permit holders will be required to report after the hunts information as to date, hours hunted and game killed, observed or crippled. These facts will be used in an effort to determine the success of managed hunts and to gain more knowledge of the state's wildlife population.

On The Screen

"Mr. Scoutmaster."

This film has Clifton Webb, the perennial surly sophisticate, as a Scoutmaster, surrounded by hordes of boy actors and real-life Boy Scouts. It seems that Mr. Webb a television star, finds that his Hooper rating is plunging him into unemployment, mainly because children hate his show, so he becomes a Scoutmaster to save his career, after his wife and a kindly parson (Edmond Gwenn) urge him into service to save his humanity. He punishes his television sponsor's son at a Tenderfoot test and wins the other boys' hearts on an overnight hike. The central plot, however, revolves around little George Winslow, a winsome Cub Scout with a hoarse voice.

While the action is a little slow this film is good entertainment and the actors are all convincing.

"Plunder Of The Sun."

All the tricks of the adventure film tirade are employed in this film, in which Glenn Ford plays the role of an American broke and stranded in Meixco, who is hired to carry a small package containing the secret of the wealth of the ancient Aztecs to the city of Oaxaca, near the Zapotec ruins. In one series of adventures after another, his path is crossed by Patricia Medina, who says she has an invalid husband (Francis L. Sullivan," soon to die who is "very possessive. \"Sean McClory, a newcomer to the screen, tries to kill Ford during several attempts to get the package; and Diana Lynn, an apparently unattached blonde who talls desperately for Ford.

"The Sun Shines Bright."

This film is based on three short stories by the famed humorist Irvin S. Cobb — "The Sun Shines Bright." The Mob From Massac" and "The Lord Provides." It has Charles Winninger in the lead role as Cobb's famed character, Judge tucky, and he has a high time whether he is in his rustic old Southern style courtroom, or at the monthly meeting of the local Confederate War Veterans. In addition to his other activities, the judge is up for reelection and is opposed by a "Yankee political machine," whose rallying cry is a strangely familiar "throw the rascals out."

All in all, it is a comfortably entertaining film, which will appeal to most film-goers.

Factory production workers' earnings reached a record average of $1.77 an hour in mid-July. This includes over-time and other premium pay and represents a gain of 21 per cent in three years of the Korean War. The average work week was 40.4 hours.

Cleaning Range Equipment Saves Money Next Summer

When pullets are moved in off the range, clean and scrub the range shelter, feeders, and waterers to use again next summer.

John Weeks, API Extension poultryman, advises using one can of lye to six gallons of water. However, he warns, be careful when applying lye solutions on metal—do not leave them on more than a few minutes, and then rinse thoroughly in clean water.

"The range shelter and feeders may need a paint job to protect them until next spring," adds Weeks. "Be sure to block the shelter up off the ground to prevent the runners from rotting. Feeders may be stored in the range shelter. Clean the water fountains, dry thoroughly, and store in a dry place."

For Milk Profits Give Animals Balanced Menu

Auburn, Ala.—As fall approaches, cows often lose their thrifty condition and produce less milk because of lower quality pastures.

"On areas where pasture grasses have received plenty of moisture, dairy animals may still be finding enough tasty food to keep them producing satisfactorily," explains Pete Turnham, API Extension assistant dairyman. "But as soon as pastures get dry and stemmy, give cows some extra feed—hay, silage, and home-grown grain mixtures."

For highest profits possible, it's important to feed dairy cows according to their production, continues the specialist. A grain feeding table will serve as a useful guide in making sure that every cow receives a balanced ration.

Terry Jackson, of Birmingham, in charge of records reported that the 1953 Livestock Show would probably shatter all previous entry records.

About Your Home

(By FRANCES DELL)

Household pests are not a very pleasant topic to discuss. It is a subject that homemakers must have knowledge of, however.

There is no single insecticide that will kill all types of pests. For this reason identification is the first step. Learn where the insects are entering the house and their breeding spot.

The German cockroach is a common pest, particularly troublesome in the warmer, Southern sections of the United States. They like dark places such as behind sinks, stoves, under cabinets and around pipes. To control cockroaches, spray with a two percent solution of Chlordane.

Ants can breed out of doors and enter the house through very small cracks. They quite often breed behind baseboards and within walls. To control spray nest, if possible, or entrance with a two percent chlordane solution. Use a good commercial ant poison that the insects will pick up and carry back to the nests as an everyday precaution.

Silverfish feed on paper products and are often found around book cases. They can be controlled by using a ten per cent DDT powder.

A great deal is written about the control and prevention of moths. They are most often found around wool, mohair or other hair products.

The best preventive measures seem to be: Sun all woolens before packing them for storage—Spray with five per cent DDT—Pack garments with moth balls or flakes.

LESS VEGETABLES?

The Agriculture Department has suggested an over-all acreage reduction of five per cent for fourteen winter vegetables to be marketed fresh, mostly in January, February and March, 1954. While there are no actual production controls, the Department suggested that plantings be limited to 239,700 acres. To be affected are beets, cabbage, carrots, cauliflower, celery, escarole, kale, lettuce, green fiscal year as a result of efficiency change in lima beans.

ARMY SAVINGS

The Army estimates that it has saved $13,000,000 during the past fiscal year as a result of efficiency suggestions submitted by its military and civilian personnel. Offsetting this savings, however, was $282,520 paid out in bonuses to civilian employes, whose suggestions were accepted.

TOP ENTERTAINMENT STARS SUPPORTING KENNY FUND DRIVE

KLINE

Minneapolis, Minn. — The nation's top ranking personalities of the entertainment world are giving their active support to the 1953 polio fund appeal of the Sister Elizabeth Kenny Foundation, now under way, according to Marvin L. Kline, the foundation's national executive director.

RUSSELL

LOMBARDO

"By contributing their time and efforts, these people are helping to insure that the polio-combating program of the late Sister Elizabeth Kenny will be continued and, where possible, expanded," Kline declared. "The Kenny Foundation is dependent upon public contributions for its program of training additional Kenny Therapists and for making the Kenny treatment available to polio victims. It has no other source of revenue for this work."

DURANTE

COUNTERFEITERS

Two-thirds of the counterfeit bills seized by Treasury agents in the last fiscal year were recovered from retailers, who had been bilked. Counterfeiters showed a decline, however, mainly because of heavy raids on plants before money could be passed out, but forgeries of Government checks increased.

Not enough of you folks are using the A.A.U.W. Library. The members of the local chapter are working hard to make a go of a library for Clanton and you should lend your support. They have the books here and one of the members spend each Saturday afternoon at the Library (which is located over the Chilton County News Office) to lend books to those who come for them. Just what do you people want anyway—them to bring the books to you?

The Chilton County Board of Registrars meet at the courthouse every first and third Mondays, and don't you forget it. We'll try our best to remember each week to notify you just before they meet, but if we don't—you call us.

A letter from Gordon L. Robertson informs us that the Methodist Men's Club will hold their first meeting of the season this month. It will be held down at the dam and Sam Powers will be host and do the barbecuing. You can get a ticket from Gordon Robertson after next week if you are the type that goes for the best barbecued chicken in the world, and if you don't, you ain't a prospect, anyways, because you don't know what's good.

Fred and Mary Francis have announced their new arrival. It was a little girl and they call her "Debbie." Fred was around town last Monday passing out cigars and feeling mighty happy about the whole thing. We're glad for them both. They're two of our favorite kids.

TAX RECEIPTS TO INCREASE $16 MILLION

Montgomery, Ala. — State Revenue Commissioner Joe Edwards has disclosed that Alabama tax collections are only $4,364,766 below last year's record $131,623,580.

Edwards pointed out that there is still one month left in this fiscal year. He credited the gasoline and sales taxes as composing most of the $6,567,320 increase over the corresponding period last year.

He said $127,358,814 has been taken in during the first 11 months of this year. If the present trend continues, collections should exceed last year's record by about $7,000,000.

The sales tax was the biggest producer during August. It brought in $4,440,437, compared to $4,273,-115, the same month a year ago. The figure for the first 11 months of 1953 is $51,959,883, compared to $47,440,143 for the first 11 months last year.

The gasoline tax, second biggest producer, brought in $3,647,160 in August, compared to $3,412,428 in the same month a year ago. It has produced $38,437,481 compared to $36,087,341 in the same period last year.

The income tax produced $204,587 last month, compared to $320,262 in August, 1952.

Southern Bell Stops Time Of Day Service

In the interest of better service for all Maplesville, Jemison and Thorsby telephone users, local telephone operators are no longer able to furnish the time of day to those requesting it, W. L. Hinds, Manager for the Southern Bell Telephone Company, announced today.

"We regret that it has become necessary to discontinue this service," Mr. Hinds said, "but the growth of our city and the resulting increase in the number of telephone calls made here requires us to do so."

He pointed out that local operators now handle a much larger volume of calls than they did when the time of day service was inaugurated. As a result, the requests for the time slows down telephone service for everyone.

"The cooperation of telephone users in not asking the time, in the future, will help us provide the best possible telephone service for all," Mr. Hinds stated.

THE REV. TROY B. HELMS FAMILY ATTEND COUNCIL

The General Council of the Assemblies of God has just convened in the city auditorium in the City of Milwaukee, Wis.

Rev. and Mrs. Troy B. Helms and son, James Noel, drove to Milwaukee, via Detroit, Mich. Rev. Helms reports that the theme for this convention was "Evangelism," and that some 500 or more went to the prayer altars for salvation. And a great feature of the services was the 50 or more piece orchestra, directed by Rev. Wannamacker, one of the nation's leading violinists. And also the trained choir, composed of the 15 or more Assembly of God Churches of the City.

The mayor of the city adressed te great audience of several thousand delegates and gave to them the key to the city. Also the Chief of Chaplains, Major General Bennett of the Army flew from Washington, D.C., to speak to the Assembly. Chaplain Bennett is a Southern Baptist.

The outstanding feature of the week of convention was the great Missionary Rally Sunday afternoon. An Alabama Missionary from Africa was the speaker, the Rev. Charles Greenaway. The total cash raised in this one service was $111,-394. The Assemblies of God have over 700 Missionaries in every country in the world and the islands of the seas. In spite of persecution in several countries they are gaining.

The Government of Italy is trying to close the Protestant churches, but the Assemblies of God has secured one of the outstanding attorneys of Italy to defend our rights there. This lawyer flew from Rome to speak to the convention. Rev. Helms had the opportunity to talk to tis lawyer personally, and was shown by him one of the leading newspapers of Rome with the headlines stating: Quote, "All that wants God get out." But the Assemblies of God have gained some 80,000 in Italy in the past five years.

The overall world missions, including foreign and home, given by the members in the past two fiscal years was over seven million.

The Rev. Ralph M. Riggs, a former missionary to Africa and an Assistant General Superintendent for the past 10 years was elected to the office of general superintendent and the Rev. Zimmerman of Cleveland, Ohio, was elected as ne of the four assistant general superintendents.

The Assemblies have had a 38% gain in membership in the past 10 years and a 20% gain in the number of new churches, with some 14,-000 ordained and licensed ministers in the U. S. alone.

FIN-FAN ITEMS

By— R. L. SCOTT

Fishing prospects are steadily improving on the Coosa-Tallapoosa Lakes. Crappie are being taken with live minnows from deep tree tops, and Stripes and Bass are hitting everything from red worms to spinning tackle. Of course, everyone that goes is not taking the creel limit but as reports from boat docks show many are having exceptionally good luck.

Many fishing camps are equipped with telephone service and an advance call to your favorite fishing spot will be well worth while, especially, during this relatively slow season. You will find most fishing camp operators very honest and sometimes, too conservative, in their predictions of the finny tribe. It is to the fishing camp operator's advantage not to be too enthusiastic with his encouraging predictions if conditions indicate poor prospects. A disappointed angler is a very unhealthy advertising medium. However, conditions sometimes change so rapidly that even the most conscientious prognosticator will completely miss his guess. So it all boils down to this: "The best time to go fishing is when you have time."

Lake Martin—

Fred Wilder, Southside Standard Service Station, Dadeville, reports:

S. G. Smith, Camp Hill, used spinning tackle to hook a nice string of Largemouth Bass, the largest weighed in at 5 pounds, 4 ounces.

John W. Hodnett, Kowaliga Beach Resort, Kowaliga Bridge, near Alexander City, reports: Young Jeff Bauer, 1592 Gilmer Avenue, Montgomery, had good luck on Kowaliga Creek when he strung up an 8-ounce Bluegill. Jeff is quite a fisherman at 7 years of age; last week his best catch was a 1½ pound Bass. Bait used on both occasions were red worms.

Lake Mitchell—

Payton's Store, Higgins Ferry Road, near Clanton, reports: R. W. Lowry, 307 Windson Drive, Birmingham, used a Pike Master 30 to snag an 8-pound, 12-ounce Southern Smallmouth Bass. Mr. Lowry hooked several other smaller Bass that averaged 2½ pounds each.

Lake Jordan—

Joe Smith, Log Cabin Beach, below Mitchell Dam, reports: O. W. Spear, Jr., Calera, used a Baby Dujig to boat a nice string of Stripes, his best was 2 pounds, 8 ounces.

Mrs. Hubert Bonner, Bonner's Fishing Lodge, near Holtville, reports: Miss Nicolena Kirkland, 1631 Fairview Avenue, Montgomery, caught the creel limit on Stripes from Sofkahatchee Creek using a Peck's Popping Bug as bait. The largest for the day weighed in at 2 pounds even.

Chief Alapoco Says: When boating near swimmers or fishermen, show them the same courtesy that you have a right to expect from others. — R. L. Scott, Recreational Supervisor.

"Operation Heartbreak"

Suffering Does Not End When Bodies Are Removed From Smashed Autos

The nation's increasing grist of automobile deaths and crippling injuries was pictured today as an endless "Operation Heartbreak" by a traffic safety authority who estimated in human terms "the unmated in human terms "the unmated indirect toll" of highway counted indirect toll" of highway accidents—their emotional impact upon the growing legion of bereaved close relatives of the victims.

More than 150,000 members of the families of nearly 40,000 persons who are being killed every year by automobiles suffer untold emotional agony for long periods after the accidents, according to Paul H. Blaisdell, public safety director of the Association of Casualty and Surety Companies.

Another 2,000,000 to 2,500,000 mothers, fathers, brothers, sisters and grandparents, plus other close relatives of those seriously injured in highway mishaps in a single year undergo severe emotional crises before their lives are adjusted to the shock, he said.

Although more than 20,000,000 persons have undergone "Operation Heartbreak" following the fatal and serious highway accidents of the last ten years, Mr. Blaisdell said, the average American is still quite unaware of this grim aspect of the traffic safety problem. If they were, he added, millions of them would take more direct action in their own communities to make the highways safer.

Mr. Blaisdell buttressed his outline of "Operation Heartbreak" with the simple words of a bereaved Illinois mother who lost a son in an automobile accident in 1952. She wrote to him about her family's tragedy with what he described as "the typical mother's heartbreak" which is seldom expressed in a letter, offering her services as a volunteer in traffic safety work and seeking his advice on how to proceed in this field. Her letter to Mr. Blaisdell follows:

"Recently an editorial appeared in the Chattanooga Times, Chattanooga, Tennessee, relative to your plan to reduce highway accidents. In view of the fact that I have a very deep personal interest in doing everything I can to help put this plan before our legislators and others in authority, I obtained your address from the editor.

"As a citizen, I feel that such a plan is most worthy of everyone's consideration. As the mother of a 15 year old boy who was one of the 38,000 Americans who lost their lives in 1952 and whose life was entirely dependent upon a 15 year old licensed driver who had control of the car with two guests at his mercy, I will wholeheartedly enlist to recruit others to get behind the powers that be to put such a plan into effect as soon as possible.

"One reads of automobile accidents involving hundreds of people, but little do they consider the heartbreak and changes in family living that these accidents bring about. We never hear of the victim's father and mother who have to keep on from day to day, feeling that all their physical strength has completely left them—pulling themselves up by their boot straps so the two brothers and one sister won't too feel that the bottom has dropped from under their feet. We never hear of the brother who was so very close to his year-and-a-half older brother wandering from bedroom to bedroom when it is time to retire, visiting with his little brother and sister and his mother and dad, and his grandmother — talking about first one thing and another, dreading the time when he must go into his bedroom alone—sighing and tossing in his bed until late in the night. We take other people's trouble so casually—surely something could be done to lessen the number of lives that are lost along the highways.

"Mr. Blaisdell, what can I do? I know there is something that I can do so that other families may not have such a tradegy. I will write to our Senators and Congressmen, of course, but first I would like to know more about the plan. I will appreciate it very much if you will send me any pamphlets or other information so that I might be better 'educated' on the subject. I am really sincere when I say that I want to help put your plan into effect and await your suggestions."

Cost Of Living Up

The Bureau of Labor Statistics reported in the last days of August that living costs reached a record high in mid-July. One of the results of the report was a raise of a cent an hour for one million automobile workers, whose wages are based on the living cost index.

The Bureau reported that the latest rise was the fifth month in a row in which consumer prices had shown an increase. While the total increase has been relatively small in these five months, the trend has, nevertheless, been slowly upward.

The cost of living rise, and resulting pay increases to million of workers, are indications that buying power will remain high in the immediate months ahead. They are also indications that no recession of major proportions is in the book for the immediate future.

On Moving Sidewalks

For some years now intensive study has been made on the proposal for moving sidewalks in heavily congested downtown areas in metropolitan cities. The sidewalk would take the form of a conveyer belt and would eliminate the need for buses, streetcars and other transportation in the downtown area.

At least one major tire and rubber company has been studying the problem and more than one city has now taken the project under consideration. One of the cities, Cincinatti, was the scene of a meeting of civic leaders recently. The group meeting to consider the idea saw films and heard the project discussed at length. One proposal for Cincinatti is a two-way moving sidewalk arrangement, which would extend 72,000 feet in each direction.

We have no way of knowing whether any city will undertake such a project, though we are inclined to think the plan is not without merit. Stores in the downtown areas would probably benefit from the conveyor-belt system, to a large degree, since it would be no effort to shop up and down the street for a considerable length of time if one did not have to fight traffic and carry his weary bones back and forth.

YOUR Health

"Your Health" is presented by your physician as a health service of the Medical Association of the State of Alabama.

ATHLETE'S FOOT

Because the symptoms associated with athlete's foot are usually so mild in the initial stage of development, many persons ignore them until the condition is well advanced thus making it more difficult to treat and cure.

A low form of plant life called fungi is the cause of the disease. The fungi grow from seeds called spores. Because of their protective layers, the spores have the ability to remain dormant only to become active under suitable conditions, such as heat and moisture.

Hot, perspiring feet are a favorable field where these spores flourish. That is why the attack on the condition must center not only on the body but on wearing apparel of the feet, such as shoes and hose, and on towels used on the feet.

Many persons think in terms of self-medication and apply all sorts of patent remedies to relieve the itching and progressive redness and blistering, failing to understand that the unique strength of the spores resists any mild attack. Footbaths, aside from cleanliness, are of little value. There must be vigorous scrubbing with strong soap and hot water and the application of certain fungicides and disinfectants. The advice of a physician is most important since certain skins require individual treatment, depending on the degree of their sensitivijty.

Athlete's foot is a community problem. In these days of mass use of facilities, as in gymnasiums, shower rooms and swimming pools, definite public health efforts should be included to prevent the spread of the condition. There is always possibility of initial infection and reinfection and contamination.

Remember that the active form of athlete's foot is the third most common disease seen by the skin specialist during the summer and the fifth most common in the winter.

TOO ALERT

Oklahoma City, Okla. — Two alert scout-car officers spotted a flickering light in the early morning hours and radioed that "burglars using a welding torch on the safe at this moment" at a vending-machine establishment. With reinforcements, police closed in, guns drawn and found a harmless, flickering light bulb.

48-HOUR BATH

Hutchinson, Kan. — S. E. Drummond, 77, climbed into the tub at his home, where he lived alone. Then he became too weak to get out. Two days later neighbors became worried about him and called police. They found Drummond still in the tub, but apparently suffering no ill effects from his ordeal, other than hunger.

SOIL CONSERVATION NEWS

Carlos Smith, on the Chilton-Bibb County line, is doing a good job of Conservation farming on his 150 acre farm. Carlos moved to his place six years ago, with only one acre cleared. Now Carlos has 12 acres of sericea and 4 acres of Crimson Clover established, along with 20 acres of cotton he rents and other crops.

Carlos said, "It doesn't look like I have done much on the place, but I managed to ruin two axes each year trying to establish my pasture." Carlos is now planning to become a dairyman in the near future, and he is making arrangements for his pasture now. He is using fescue and clover for his swamp land, sericea and rescue for his upland, along with some bermuda grass and maybe a little Bahia.

Application for conservation plans were received from J. C. Chapman, Jr., Rube Kirkland, W. H. Lenoir and W. P. Lenoir.

A visit with Hoyt Freeman last week found him fertilizing his reseeding crimson clover with 400 pounds of 4-12-12 per acre.

The following farmers are planning on combining sericea seed this fall: Ira Barkley, Jarrell Hubbard, Noah Latham, F. E. Mastin, Charlie Childress, Hoyt Freeman, and J. H. Johnson. Several more acres should be harvested for planting next spring, or they can be used for an extra income to sell.

Lime is needed on most wet land for pasture production. Now is the time to do that job while the ground is dry. Wallace Fox, Claude Glass and Byron Bean are taking advantage of this opportunity and are applying one to one and one-half tons per acre.

LITTLE THINGS about the Stars

TELEVISION - RADIO - HOLLYWOOD

By GEORGE LILLEY

NEW YORK, N. Y. — Long popular "Cavalcade of America," converted last season to television, is appearing now on a new network—Tuesday nights over most of the country on ABC-TV. It continues perhaps the most realistic, documented and authentic dramatic show on the air with its stories of people historical and contemporary, famous and little known, who have contributed significantly to the growth of America. Among the early programs: The premiere (Sept. 29)

Evelyn Ankers

John Abbott

Wm. Johnstone

"Sam and the Whale," with Cecil Kellaway and Evelyn Ankers, story of Sam Mulford (Kellaway), early Colonial whale hunter, whose protests on the English taxation of whalers was carried to the King in London with astonishing results.

"The Stolen General" (Oct. 6) is a narrative of a young Rhode Island maiden who, with a wink and a smile, brought about the capture of British General Prescott in 1777, to the delight of American Rebels. Reginald Denny, John Abbott, Barbara Billingsley. Oct. 13: "Sunset at Appomattox," remarkably detailed recreation of the surrender of General Robert E. Lee to General Grant. William Johnstone as Robert E. Lee.

GOOD MUSIC's 14th YEAR

Lovers of good music still tune to the radio and "The Telephone Hour," now in its 14th year, Monday nights, NBC. Coming offering (Sept. 28): pianist Robert Casadesus, who will be making his first U. S. appearance in 18 months, after a tour of the major concert halls of Europe. Following the broadcast, the French artist (home: Princeton, N. J.) starts a series of nation-wide appearances with leading American orchestras; he will return to "The Telephone Hour" again December 7 with his wife Gaby and son Jean, both notable pianists in their own right. Thirty-five of the "TH's" 57 musicians have been with the show since its inception, while popular Donald Voorhees has been the program's only conductor.

Casadesus ...U. S. return

"PENTAGON USA"

"Pentagon USA" is something new in dramatizations of authentic cases from criminal files. A television program, the show offers exciting cases from the files of the Army's criminal investigators, an effective organization active during the last two wars but little known to the general public. Purposely this series is not using name actors. Producer William Dozier has an interesting thought that big name actors can detract from the merits and authenticity of such a program. The only exception is the part of "The Colonel," played by Addison Richards, a veteran performer. Otherwise the cast is "non-name" professionals selected each week for the specific roles they play (Thursday nights, 10 p.m., EST, CBS-TV).

JEMISON NEWS

(By MRS. GEORGE NAISH)

September--

September is an end and a beginning. The days of relaxation are over, activities begin anew. Many have had a pleasant summer and are ready to take up their duties again. This is a season that some call Fall, when plants begin to shed their leaves. Tho others like to call it Autumn because it is associated with harvest which suggests increase. After the heat through which all have just passed and which is necessary, all will welcome these Autumn days. Surely nature couldn't be more beautiful with its bloom of flowers, its coloring foliage on the trees and bushes, the golden fields with their harvest.

The comunity is ever greatful for the efforts of the mayor, councilmen and all others who had a part in bringing gas to our town. All realize that much time and surely some cash was needed to bring this our way. In only a short time the gas will be turned on the city, and let's all be mindful of these faithful servants of the public.

We would not overlook the fine work of our city officers in promoting peace and protection to our residents. They are ever watchful over those who desire protection at all hours.

The community welcome Mr. Leonard Hayes, who is operating a barber shop on main street. Mr. Hayes, until recently, operated a shop in Thorsby. Their loss is our gain. Call on Mr. Hayes and bid him welcome.

DALE CARNEGIE

WALTER P. HICKEN, 15 Baldwin Street, Montpelier, Vermont, says as a child he was sickly. Here is a resume of some of the trials that beset him. During his third year in school he had mumps, measles and whooping cough. This left him in a further weakened condition, resulting in a terrible speech impediment, a combination of stammer and stutter.

At the age of twelve he developed a goiter and an attempt was made to remove the growth by X-ray. However, knowledge of the X-ray was limited, and a severe burn resulted which involved medical care for years.

CARNEGIE

He finished grade school in eight years but he would not attend high school. Humiliation over his speech impediment brought on a nervous breakdown at sixteen that resulted in his being completely shut-in for three months. At eighteen he had another breakdown brought on by the embarrassment of the speech impediment.

Finally he obtained a diagnosis of his impediment, the gist of it being that the trouble was mental and that for a sum of money, beyond their means, he could be cured.

Grasping at this thought he bought books on applied and practical psychology. He studied long hours and attempted to devise a system of speech correction, using the trial and error method. After eight years and many set backs he made progress that convinced him he could effect a cure.

He obtained a position driving a bus so that he would be forced to talk to the public. Despite his handicap, he built a desire to operate a school and help others to have normal speech.

So he left the employ of the bus company and accepted a position of manager of an Air Show (stunt flyers). In this position he had to book shows and act as publicity agent and announcer and he had to talk before groups of from five hundred to fifteen thousand people in two years.

Studying day and night he obtained a certificate as an instructor in Navigation and Meteorology, and during the war he was employed by the Civil Aeronautics Administration as an Aircraft Communicator. Following the war he taught for several years on the G. I. Training Program and through the results proved to himself that he could teach successfully.

BY THE OLD TIMERS

From Mrs. Ester Anderson, Mesa, Arizona: I remember when I received a doll for my birthday when I was a child and I left it outdoors in my playhouse under the trees. One night a rain came and the next morning when I trotted out to the playhouse I found the face of my doll melted to nothing. I took one look and began to cry hysterically.

From Nannie McQueen, Wind Cave, Kentucky: I remember when mother dried all our food for use in the winter. Especially the apples which were dried on a scaffold. She dried blackberries, pumpkins, peaches and apples all the same way.

DID you know that many foods can be refrigerated until heating, baking or serving time? Take advantage of the refrigerator to save last minute food preparation.

Muffin batters can be stored right in their greased tins, tightly covered with waxed paper or aluminum foil, to prevent crusting of the batter. Pop in the oven before mealtime to bake.

Want to have something creamed for dinner? Keep a jar of cream sauce in the refrigerator and you'll be ready for quick creamed things on a few moment's notice.

If you have difficulty in keeping the cookie jar well stocked, keep cookie doughs in your freezing unit. Most doughs will benefit by the chilling process. In this way you can mix and store, then bake at your leisure.

RECIPE OF THE WEEK
Cranberry Ham Balls
(Serves 4)

2 cups ground, cooked ham
¼ cup fine bread crumbs
1 egg, slightly beaten
2 tablespoons milk
¼ teaspoon allspice
⅛ teaspoon pepper
Lash of cloves
1 can jellied cranberry sauce
1 teaspoon vinegar

Combine all ingredients except cranberry sauce and vinegar. Shape into eight balls. Brown on all sides in 2 tablespoons melted fat, in skillet. Heat cranberry sauce in small saucepan; add vinegar. Pour over the ham balls, cover skillet and cook for 20 minutes.

Yeast doughs for rolls and coffee cake keep for several days when refrigerated. Take off part of the dough, enough for your needs and let the rest keep chilling until needed.

Croquettes will fry better in that they hold their shape, if they're chilled. Put the mixture together in the morning, shape and chill until ready to fry.

Make your salads in advance, except for tossing together! They will be crisp-cold and more palatable. Wrap washed and prepared vegetables in plastic bags before serving time.

Having breaded cutlets or fish? The egg and crumb coating will stay on better during the frying process if they're well refrigerated after the coating is put on them.

Martin-Lane Vows Told In Afternoon Ceremony

Beauty and simplicity characterized the afternoon ceremony at which Miss Johnnie Martin and Robert D. Lane were wed Sunday, September 6, in the Greensboro Baptist Church. The day was the 33rd anniversary of Mr. and Mrs. M. H. Lane, parents of the bridegroom.

The nuptial setting was by candlelight, white cathedral candles in branched candlabra, adorning the altar. Southern smilax, palms and ferns were banked as a background for a central arrangement of white gladioli.

The candles were lighted by the two ushers, Robert Kennedy of Selma, and Norvell Simpson of Clanton.

Mrs. Robert Kennedy of Selma, organist, presented a program of nuptial music. She was dressed in pink and had a corsage of white gardenias. Mrs. Boyd Christenberry of Auburn was vocalist and before the entrance of the wedding party sang "Because." She gave "The Lord's Prayer" by Malotte as the wedding benediction. Her dress was of brown and her corsage of pink rosebuds.

The bride was given in marriage by her father, Mr. John R. Martin. She wore a suit of winter blue with white nylon tucked blouse. Her only jewelry was a strand of pearls. Her hat and other accessories were of navy blue. She carried a bouquet of white rosebuds showered with stephanitis and ribbons and mounted on a white prayer book.

The bride had as her only attendant her matron of honor, Mrs. Vernon P. Payne of Clanton. She wore a suit of gray with black accessories and carried a bouquet of pink asters.

For her daughter's wedding Mrs. Martin chose a dress of brown crepe with brown accessories. She wore a corsage of yellow rosebuds. The groom's mother was dressed in purple with black accessories and had a corsage of purple asters.

Following the ceremony the couple left for a short honeymoon trip, after which they will be at home in Clanton where the groom is plant manager for the Clanton Laundry and Cleaning Company and the bride is assistant home agent for Chilton County.

On Saturday evening prior to the wedding Mrs. Billy Perry entertained at the after rehearsal party at the home of her mother, Mrs. J. B. Kirby. Guests were greeted by Mrs. Kirby. A color scheme of yellow and green was carried out. Marigolds and ivy were used as floral decorations.

The bridal motif was predominant in the dining room where the bride's table, draped with a white linen cloth, was centered with a heart shaped wedding cake decorated in yellow and green. Miss Dorothy Croll poured coffee. Cheese straws and petitis fours were served by Mrs. J. M. Perry, Sr., and Mrs. David Holloway. During the evening the bride presented gifts to her attendants.

Recipe For The Week

BEFORE remodeling old clothing, make certain that all pieces of material to be used are clean and well pressed. Some of these may need laundering, and you'll want to make use of the following tips:

Rip silk and rayon garments and sort out all the usable pieces. Wash pieces by hand in lukewarm suds and rinse in clear water Squeeze moisture out gently and hang to dry. Avoid soaking the dark or multi-colored fabrics.

To quick-dry as well as to prevent spotting on silks and rayons, spread material on a piece of Turkish toweling, roll and unroll. Most light weight pieces will be ready to press with a warm iron after this treatment.

White fabrics or laces or embroideries which have become yellowed should be treated with an ordinary household bleach, thorough rinsing and sun - drying.

RECIPE OF THE WEEK
Tasty Broiled Sandwiches
(Makes 4)

4 slices bread
2 tablespoons mayonnaise
2 tablespoons chopped onion
4 slices American cheese
1 medium sized tomato
4 slices crisp, cooked bacon

Spread bread with mayonnaise. Place chopped onion and slice of cheese over the mayonnaise. Cut tomato into 8 thin slices and place two slices over each sandwich. Place sandwiches under broiler for about 5 minutes to let cheese melt. Top each sandwich with a strip of bacon and serve immediately.

They'll then be as good as new for your remodeling job.

If fabrics have lost their original stiffness, and you want to re-use them, wash and rinse thoroughly. Now give them a gum arabic rinse which is made by adding gum arabic to water. Amounts of gum arabic can be adjusted to the amount of stiffness required.

Sheer bits of lace or trimming can be washed in a pint jar by shaking. Use this method for rinsing delicate bits of fabric, too, to prevent snagging.

When woolen materials need to be washed before remodeling, wash in barely lukewarm water. Squeeze the suds gently in and out of the material. Excessive agitation will cause shrinkage.

"To care for him who shall have borne the battle and for his widow and his orphan."

The Legion and Auxiliary not only contribute to the veteran's care, but to his widow and orphans. Many servicemen, while in the service of our country, enjoyed many touches of home through units scattered throughout the country Now that so many wounded, sick and injured service men are in our hospitals, the Auxiliary members are still helping in many ways to provide that extra woman's touch so vitally lacking in our controlled, machinelike care that they receive in our hospitals. To be sure the government (the best in the world) is doing a herculean task of rehabilitating our servicemen. But the welcome smiles and appreciation shown by the hospitalized veteran when that "home touch" is carried to them, would compensate anyone for the few hours that they might spend with them.

Every member and prospective member is urged to be present at the next meeting, September 15, at 7:30 p.m. at th home of Mrs. Amos Glass.

The event gave opportunity to many friends of the widely known civic leader to express their good wishes, tinged with regret, over his early departure with Mrs. Lee, for their new home, now completed in Greenville, Ala. A copy of the New American Revisel Bible bearing his name on the front was presented in the name of the class to Mr. Lee. SURPLUS FOOD

Congressman Yorty (D-Cal.) is urging the Administration to consider giving some of the Government's vast surplus of food stocks to needy Americans — aged pensioners families with the father or mother missing because of divorce or death, and families having six or more children under 18 years of age. Congress recently authorized the President to send up to $100,000,000,000 worth of surplus food to needy peoples abroad.

Pastures with short grass and a lot of weeds should be clipped; however, clipping at this late date is not recommended for pastures with good grass and not too many weeds.

It's Fine To Be Fooled -Sometimes

Handy Peters entertained for the ladies of the Auxiliary the other night—and had the ladies believing for a while that he's the best marksman ever.

Handy put on a great act. He set up a whole bunch of balloons on a muslin backdrop and then took out his pea-shooter. He shot blindfolded, standing on his head, every which way — and broke a balloon every time!

No wonder Handy impressed the ladies. What they didn't know —till the show's end—was that Buck Mulligan was hiding behind the backdrop improving on Handy's aim with a hatpin.

From where I sit, we all get things "put over" on us now and again. When it's good-natured—fine! But, some folks would like to fool the rest of us into believing it's wrong to enjoy an occasional glass of beer—just because they prefer something else. For real American tolerance and neighborliness these people are simply "off target."

MISS SMITHERMAN AND SGT. BICE ARE WED AT PEPPERELL BAPTIST CHURCH

Pepperell, Ala., Aug. 29—Miss Norma Jacqueline Smitherman of Pepperell became the bride of S-Sgt. Winston O. Bice, United States Air Force, stationed at Langley AFB, Va. The ceremony took place at four o'clock this afternoon in the First Baptist Church in Pepperell, the Rev. James R. Coleman, officiating.

The bride is the daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Norman H. Smitherman of Pepperell and the bridegroom's parents, Mr. and Mrs. J. O. Bice, make their home in Clanton.

Miss Patricia Coker of Pepperell, organist, and Mrs. Marcelee Mayfield of Birmingham, vocalist, presented the musical program.

Given in marriage by her father the bride wore a gown of Chantilly lace. The bodice was off-set with a bolero jacket and the skirt, waltz-length, was trimmed with a panel of tiered net in front. A crown of lace trimed pearls held her fingertip-length veil of illusion and she carried a prayer book marked with a white orchid.

Miss Dorothy Smith of West Point, Ga., cousin of the bride, served as maid of honor. Miss Fey Fraser of Birmingham, was bridesmaid and serving as bride's matron was Mrs. Eldon Martin of Clanton.

The attendants were attired in ballerina-length gowns fashioned of taffeta with crownless hats of material similiar to the gowns. They carried nosegays of mums.

POLIO

1952 brought "the greatest threat and the greatest promise" in the fight on polio, according to the National Foundation for Infantile Paralysis. The threat came in the record number of 57,626 victims of the disease and the promise in the removal of three key roadblocks in battling it. So far this year, a total of 13,728 cases of polio have been reported an against 16,329 for the same period in 1952.

Folks and Things ABOUT TOWN

—By Ben

Sibly McGowin was buried Saturday morning. He was an extremely likable man with quiet good manners. We always enjoyed passing the time of day with him and appreciated his attention, but we never told him so.

What is it in us human beings that prevent us from telling our good friends and neighbors how we feel about them? Being the most guilty of the lot there is little we can say, but wouldn't it be a lot nicer if we gave our flowers before it was too late for the friend to whom they were given, to enjoy them. Our deepest sympathy goes to Mrs. McGowin, to Barbara and to Mary Jo, in their great loss.

Looks like we will change our mind about our race for the Legislature next spring. We asked one of our close friends if he would support us and he said he sure would except he had already obligated himself to vote for someone else. Well, we asked who he had obligated himself to and he said he didn't know yet—he hadn't heard who was going to be the other candidate.

Their young daughter returned home after taking her musical exam. The parents asked how she made out. "Very well, I think," she answered.

"What was the man like that gave your examination?"

"Oh, he was a nice man—and so religious."

"Religious! How could you tell?"

We're sorry to report that our friend, H. T. Pipes, remains very low at the hospital. He will be 85 years old this December, which is a lot of years, and we are sure Mr. "H. T." has lived them each and every one to the fullest. Until only a few weeks ago he was making is regular rounds each morning and visiting with his friends, always leaving a ray of sunshine behind him. We hope he weathers the storm and is able soon to continue his old schedule each morning.

The wife has been wanting a bird bath for the past goodness knows how long, so Sunday afternoon while driving around she saw just the one she wanted. For the birds—not for herself. Well, the way it turned out this one was for sale on account of this fellow sold birdbaths. Now since thinking it over we are contemplating going into the bird bath business. If you happen to have a bird around the house that wants a bath, just bring him, or her, (it makes no matter, the bath is semi-private), around and it can use ours. It's a dilly and one that any bird would be proud to say it had bathed in. We already have dozens of satisfied customers.

POWERFUL RAM

Grenham, Texas—An angry ram, weighing 175 pounds, on Mrs. Charlie Saeger's farm floored a 1,200 pound bull and killed a Jersey cow. It required the help of the sheriff, a deputy and a highway patrolman to rope the ram and get it into a pen.

"Jamming Of Classrooms" Can Be Stopped Says Senator Hill

Senator Lister Hill has declared that the "jamming of classrooms" by the largest school enrollment in the history of the Nation means that "more millions of American boys and girls will be shortchanged in their education." He pledged a renewed fight for his Senate-approved Oil for Education Amendment when Congress reconvenes.

Hill said that community after community has been fighting a losing battle against the tide of rising enrollments. Classroom and teacher shortages are even worse this year than last.

The Oil for Education Amendment would dedicate the income from the Nation's rich undersea oil and gas deposits of the outer Continental Shelf to aid education in Alabama and the other 47 States. The amendment was rejected by a House conference group in the rush of adjournment without a vote by the House.

"We expect to again pass the amendment in the Senate when Congress reconvenes and, if all who are concerned over the school crisis today will join us in the battle, we can and will pass the amendment in the House," Hill said in a statement. He continued:

"Enrollment records have been broken for the eighth straight year. A veritable tidal wave of six-year-olds — over four million strong —has completely swamped the first grade. Elementary schools have been rocked by wave after wave of first graders from our huge war and post-war baby crop. Year by year and grade by grade, the classrooms have been overrun. This year, every elementary grade is filled to overflowing and the war babies are now overrunning the lower grades of high school," Hill added:

"Thousands of communities find themselves completely unable financially to cope with the rising tide of enrollments. Educators, school administrators and parents are gravely alarmed. Three out of five classrooms are so over-crowded as to make effective teaching impossible. More children are being crowded into makeshift facilities — barracks, hallways, abandoned store buildings, attics and basements. Every fifth child in the nation is going to school in a fire trap." Hill concluded:

"The shortage of teachers has grown steadily worse. Teachers are still being driven out of the classroom — unable to live on their low pay. Teachers are today the lowest paid of all employed groups in America. We are in our most severe school crisis and it will be even worse next year when the first graders will again break all records."

Maid Of Cotton Finals At State Fair Next Month

Birmingham, Ala. — Maids of Cotton from each of Alabama's 67 counties will be presented at the Alabama State Fair October 8, 1953, where finals in the annual Maid of Cotton Contest will be staged.

The winner at Birmingham will be proclaimed Alabama Maid of Cotton and will compete in the National Maid of Cotton Contest at Memphis in December. There the Alabama winner will compete for the National title with entries from the nation's other cotton producing states.

A highlight of the State finals which will be held in front of the main Grandstand at the Fairgrounds on Thursday of Fair week will be the appearance of Miss Alice Corr of Selma, Alabama, the nation's current National Maid of Cotton.

Miss Corr has just returned home from a 63,000 mile journey throughout the United States, Europe, South America and Canada where she represented the cotton industry as ambassadress of good will.

Miss Mary Elizabeth Gregory of Auburn, reigning Alabama Maid of Cotton, will crown the new Alabama Maid of Cotton after the judges' decision has been announced.

The various county Maid of Cotton contests are directed by the Alabama Farm Bureau and representatives of the Extension Service of Alabama Polytechnic Institute at Auburn, in cooperation with the Alabama Cotton Promotion Committee. The cotton promotion committee is comprised of representatives of the state's cotton industry and includes buyers and shippers, processors, ginners, manufacturers and warehousemen.

Thursday, October 8th, has been named Maid of Cotton Day in honor of the cotton industry.

The various county representatives will come to Birmingham Wednesday, October 7th, and will be guests at a series of special events arranged in their honor by the Alabama Cotton Promotion Committee.

The Alabama winner will be given a complete new wardrobe among other awards, and will make a royal tour of her native state shortly after the finals are held.

To remove fruit juice spots from white cottons and linens, pour boiling water on the stain from a height of two or three feet. If it does not come out, use a household bleach; rinse well. On washable colored and fine fabrics, sponge with cool water. If this does not work, apply warm glycerine: Let stand a few hours, and rinse well. Wash in warm suds.

Underweight may result from poor eating habits or from physical defects which interfere with proper use of the food eaten; an underweight person usually tires easily, is very nervous, and has little resistance to disease.

Cancer Killed 17 In Chilton County During 1952

Cancer killed 2,983 Alabamians last year including 17 in Chilton County, the State Department of Health announced today.

The state total represented an increase of 216 over the 1951 total of 2,767. It represented an even greater increase over the average of 2,652 a year for the five-year period from 1946 to 1950, inclusive.

Breakfast Most Important Meal Of Day, Says Leader

Auburn, Ala. — Too many times we are breakfast skimpers or skippers. And breakfast is the most important meal of the day, says API Extension Nutritionist Mary Hulsey.

And, she adds, a wide selection of foods, including fruits and fruit juices, ready-to-eat or hot breakfast cereals, and meat or eggs offer the homemaker many chances to prepare varied and appealing morning meals.

"Fruit juices supply needed vitamin C; cereals are sources of minerals and vitamins; meat and eggs provide proteins, and bread supplies necessary B vitamins, calcium, and iron. Don't forget to include milk and cocoa sometimes too," concludes Miss Hulsey.

Chula Vista, Cal.—Leon Morrison, 37, was out target practicing with his .38-caliber revolver, when he realized that the bullets were not hitting the target. He didn't know what the trouble was until the pearl handle of the revolver broke off in his hand and he saw that the bullets were jamming. Taking it to police for examination, they found nine bullets stuck in the barrel of the gun.

Many Advantages In Using Garden Mulch

Auburn, Ala. — Mulching a garden prevents "splash" erosion, maintains and increases organic matter, keeps the soil cool, and reduces weeds, according to John Bagby, API Extension horticulturist.

"Soil thrown up by rains on such plants as lettuce and spinach is called 'splash' erosion," he explains. "It loosens minute soil particles which sink into the small pores in the soil and seal it up with a tight surface crust. As a result, water can't soak into the soil, air can't get into the soil, and much of the loosened soil is washed away."

A mulch also acts as a springy cushion, continues Bagby. It intercepts and breaks up falling raindrops and conducts the water to the ground without disturbing the soil at the surface. By preventing rain from making direct contact with the soil, the mulch preserves the open condition of the soil and allows much more water to enter.

Research shows that mulch materials will increase organic matter just as much as if it were incorporated with the soil, adds the garden expert. Also, a mulch evens out soil temperature—soil under a mulch is usually several degrees cooler on a hot day than bare soil. And a mulch also keeps down weeds.

Bagby suggests these materials as satisfactory mulches: Damaged hay, straw, cotton gin waste, crop residue, lawn clippings, weeds, and grass.

A COINCIDENCE

Salt Lake City, Utah—Two smiling new fathers, strangers to each other, stood beaming at their newly born daughters displayed at the hospital window. Exchanging casual words, the men compared notes more closely and found: Each was named Willard Smith, wives of both gave birth to daughters, each of whom was named Christine; the same doctors delivered both youngsters; and the new babies increased both families to four girls and one boy, each.

THE VETERANS CORNER

There are authoritative answers from the Veterans Administration to four questions of interest to former servicemen and their families:

Q. I have a National Service Life Insurance term policy, and I've just gone back on active military duty. Will my premiums be waived automatically, now that I'm in uniform?

A. No. If you want your premiums to be waived while you're in service, you must apply in writing. Waivers are not automatically granted without an application. Your unit's insurance officer can give you full details.

Q. I'm in the organized reserves, and I just spent some time on training duty. Does that time count toward my entitlement for training under the Korean GI Bill?

A. No. Training duty by members of the organized reserves may not be included in determining entitlement to Korean GI training.

Q. I'm drawing a pension for a total and permanent non-service connected disability. Would that entitle me to training under Public Law 16? I am a World War II veteran.

A. It would not. The law requires a veteran to have a compensable service-connected disability, in order to be eligible for Public Law 16 training. There are other requirements he must meet, as well.

Q. I understand I must have my original discharge paper before I can apply for a GI loan. I lost mine. Is there anything I can do?

A. Yes. You can apply for a certificate in lieu of the discharge paper, from the branch of service from which you were discharged.

FISHED TO SAFETY

Sarasota, Fla.—Exhausted after he and his wife had saved two of their children, Joan, 8, and Christine, 7, after they were swept into deep water by the tide, Chester Fisher, 29, found himself thirty feet from the beach and unable to swim any farther. An elderly fisherman, seeing his predicament, made a perfect cast from the beach with his fishing rod. Fisher wrapped the line around his wrist just before losing consciousness and the fisherman reeled him to safety. The hero of the episode, however, got into his car and drove away before Fisher could ask his name.

VACATION DRIVERS MORE CAREFUL

The National Safety Council reported recently that vacation drivers were being a bit more careful this year than last. During May, June and July, highway fatalities actually dropped one percent, compared to the same months in 1952.

This record is impressive when it is realized that vacationing motorists drive more miles in those three months this year than they did last year. The news is also especially welcome because it reverses a trend which began in January of 1953, which seemed almost certain to make this year the worst year for highway deaths ever experienced.

Although the vacation driver of 1953 is apparently being more careful than his counterpart last year, total deaths for the year are, nevertheless up over those for 1952. Over 20,000 Americans have already been slaughtered on the highways this year. Despite these figures deaths per mile continue to decrease and a record low for a six-months period has been set in 1953. While these figures are encouraging, it is well to remember that about 3,000 people are killed on the highway in the United States every month, which constitutes a national disgrace.

ENLISTMENTS JUMP AFTER TRUCE

Army sources said recently that in the first month after signing of the Korean truce enlistments increased 75 per cent above the average for the twelve preceding months. While it is still too early to know whether the enlistments will remain up, indications are that the truce will stimulate enlistments.

During the month in which final truce negotiations were in progress, enlistments were also up over the average of the past twelve months. If the trend continues, it may have an effect on the number of men drafted each month.

Recently draft calls have been running at about 23,000 a month. Enlistments have averaged about 6,600 per month for the past year. In the month of July 27-August 27, however, enlistments jumped to 11,600. These figures pertain to the Army alone. The Air Force, Navy and Marines have a backlog of men who are ready to sign up.

The Air Force has limited its quota to about 3,500 enlistees a month since May, but intends to increase its quota to about 10,000 by the end of 1953. The Navy has been enlisting about 4,000 a month and also has a backlog—of about 30,000 waiting to enlist.

Marine enlistments have been running about normal, and the Corps also has a backlog of men waiting to enlist. Thus, it appears that Army service is becoming more appealing now that the fighting has stopped in Korea. It must be admitted that the Army has borne the brunt of the worst fighting and most of the casualties.

Possibly the reason for the increased enlistments in the Army is the fact that the shooting has stopped and an enlistee's chance of survival is improved. Enlistees now have an excellent chance to get foreign duty, either in Europe, Asia or in various parts of the world, without having to face the possibility of Korean combat—a prospect which naturally has not proved an inviting one.

Around OUR HOUSE

by Kathryn Tucker Windham

The six-year-old and the four-year-old have now entered the Game Stage and spend hours (not completely peaceful) playing Parcheesi, Uncle Wiggily, Old Maid, Go Fishing and Straw-in-the-Pond.

Straw-in-the-Pond is a matching game played with Rook cards, a game in which the cards are spread out face-down on the table, and each player is permitted to turn over two cards to try to find a pair.

The six-year-old, a member of the first grade, has no trouble identifying the cards she draws, but the four-year-old doesn't yet know the names of all the numbers.

The other morning he called excitedly, "I found a pair!"

"What is it?" I asked.

"Come and see," he answered. "It's that fat-stomach number."

Fat-stomach number? The eight, of course!

Our neighbor down the street was stacking the breakfast dishes when we stopped by to see her on the way to the grocery store the other morning.

"You know," she sighed, "I guess I'll keep on being fat as long as I have to wash dishes." She ate a spoonful of egg left on one of the plates.

"I was brought up never to waste food. Now when any food is left over from a meal, it's usually too little to save, too good to throw away. So I eat it. Instead of going into the garbage can or into the refrigerator, it goes into my mouth." She sighed again and finished up a bowl of grits.

And any housewife who has even been confronted with little left over dabs of this and bits of that food knows exactly what this plumpish neighbor was talking about.

This dish-washing neighbor taught me how to wash thin glasses without danger of breaking them. She slips her delicate glasses into the hot water sideways instead of putting them in bottoms first. If the glasses are put into the water bottoms first, she explained, sudden expansion may crack them.

It was she, too, who taught me the easy way to clean burned and black spots from an iron skillet. She puts water in the skillet, adds a little vinegar and some salt and let's the mixture boil. After this treatment, the spots disappear.

Vinegar is a mighty useful housekeeping aid. When our neighbor around the corner, the one with the big family, gets too much bluing in her wash, she rinses out the "blues" quickly by putting the clothes in clear water to which vinegar has been added.

Our thrifty next door neighbor, as I have mentioned before, never wastes anything. She knits beautiful sweaters, socks and mittens, and, like everybody else, she always has some yarn left over. But she doesn't waste those scraps of yarn.

Using a number 8 crochet hook, she crochets shoe laces to match the sweaters, socks or mittens she has made. She makes a chain about 25 inches long and wraps each end tightly with cellophane tape. School children particularly like the colored laces she makes for their shoes.

Some night for supper try giving the children a slice of buttered toast covered with applesauce and topped with crisp bacon. Place under the broiler for a minute and serve hot. It's so good the grown-ups will beg for some too!

Alabama Highlights

By 1798, when the Mississippi Territory, part of which later became Alabama, was formed, these settlements had expanded until there were several hundred souls in the Tombigbee country. In fact, the white population had increased to such numbers that Washington County was laid out on June 4, 1800, by executive proclamation.

Migration to the Mississippi Territory continued rapidly until checked by the Creek Indian War of 1813-14. The arrival of white settlers in wagons and carriages, some bringing their household effects in rolling hogsheads, made it necessary for the old Indian trails to be widened into roads and for ferries to be installed. This necessitated the opening of houses of entertainment, known as taverns or wayside inns. Stage coach lines and government mail service were soon developed over these highways and meandering through the primeval forest.

Among the roads opened up in early Alabama as main arteries of travel were the Natchez Trace, the Old Federal Road, and General Jackson's "Military Road." In addition to these three principal roads there were many other roads and traces. The oldest of these was the Natchez Trace, also called the "Great Columbian Highway." This trace ran from Nashville, Tenn., to Natchez, Miss., crossing the Tennessee River at Muscle Shoals.

YOUR Health

"Your Health" is presented by your physician as a health service of The Medical Association of the State of Alabama.

That Sick Headache

Migraine is one of the most distressing of all headaches, and it calls for sympathy and understanding from the families and associates of the afflicted person.

Because migraine attacks are commonly associated with a loss of appetite and because they produce nausea, they are sometimes called bilious headaches. Blurring of vision, dark spots before the eyes, bright flashes of light, double vision or a so-called fleeting blindness are other more common symptoms of migraine headache. Sometimes patients report dizziness or sensitivity to noises or odors. Depression is usually evident in the patient during an attack; often it appears as a warning of an approaching headache.

While the condition appears in both sexes, it is more frequent in women than in men, commonly occurring between the ages of fifteen and thirty-five.

Though the cause of the migraine headache is as yet unknown, some doctors attribute the pain to relaxation of the walls of the arteries in the upper neck and in the meninges or tissue covering the brain. The relaxation causes the arteries to dilate and permits the blood to pass through with extra force. In turn this over-stimulates various nerves and causes the headache.

Heredity seems to be a factor in migraine; and it has been observed that susceptible persons are generally of a tense, nervous type, inclined to worry and to be overconscientious. A woman is likely to be overly fastidious in the care of her home or her person, while a man is overambitious with an exaggerated sense of responsibility.

A careful physical examination is necessary and trust in the family doctor essential. The physician will, in addition to prescribing a specific drug, teach the patient to understand himself because good mental health is important in the care of migraine.

ONE-WAY RACE

Clinton, Okla. — When Donald Gowdy, of Borger, Texas, was stopped by a State trooper for driving his foreign-made car at 90 miles an hour, Gowdy told the officers that he was racing a small plane, trying to find out how fast it was going. What he didn't know was the Highway Patrol's Beechcraft, with Trooper Art Hamilton dutifully clocking his speed from the air.

THIS WEEK IN Washington

Victory In Germany—
Boost to Peace Hopes—
Air Force's New Fighters—Hot Words Over FEP—

Washington — The smashing victory gained by Chancellor Konrad Adenauer in West Germany has allied capitals adither with optimism. Only two weeks ago the pollsters and foreign diplomats inside Germany were too cautious to predict such a result. Yet the West German voter showed no hesitancy in defying the threat of Russian propaganda, including the warnings given by Premier Georgi Malenkov himself.

The result of the West German election was more important than most Americans realized. On the outcome hung the fate of the North Atlantic Treaty Organization defense force, and perhaps the chances for peace in the next decade. Even President Eisenhower has repeatedly almitted the NATO defense army is doomed to failure unless German units are included. The Reds have been working overtime in an effort to scare Germans away from such a union.

Malenkov almost threatened war in last speech if the West German Republic aligned itself with the West in a military alliance. The tone of East German propaganda has been that unification of Germany would be impossible if West Germany joined NATO. The Communists have also played on Germans' fear that Germany will become another battleground, if the Bonn government allies itself with NATO.

But all these efforts failed. The West German voter saw through the false threats and through the crooked propaganda the Reds tried to ram down their throats. They have given Malenkov a major defeat to think about. On the NATO side, Supreme Commander Alfred Gruenther is eager to get the training of German units underway. Now that the Germans have supported the idea it is hoped that the French will not obstruct further progress, and that within two years West German units will be in the NATO army.

Instead of bringing war nearer, the result of the German election is to boost peace hopes. With Germany in NATO the Russians are unlikely to start trouble in Europe. The thumping vote of confidence given Adenauer may delay unification of Germany, but it would probably have been delayed anyhow—since the Soviets are not likely to agree to any democratic vote in East Germany on the question of unification with the West.

The Air Force isn't saying anything about it yet but it has several new fighters in the incubator stage which promise great things for the USAAF. The production of fighters is now humming along at about 1,000 a month and this figure will probably remain steady for some time, unless an unforeseen emergency causes an all-out expansion effort.

The Sabre, or F-86, as it is known, is a match for anything available to potential enemies in quantity today. The Russians have produced, and are building, jet fighters superior to the MIG-15, but they are not thought to have a great number of them as yet. When new U. S. fighters get into mass production, they will reportedly be far in advance of anything the Reds have in operation.

The new fighters are said to be tremendously increased in power plant and therefore in speed. It is these new fighters on which future planning is being based, and future orders figured. All are expected to be in the 700 plus miles per hour class.

Southern Governors and Senators really told the White House what they thought of the Agriculture Department's anti - discrimination clause which has been included in farm-loan contract forms. It now seems the department wrote in a clause forbidding banks allegedly practicing racial discrimination to handle these loans.

That would mean no banks in some Southern states could handle the loans, under one interpretation, and would cause some confusion in all of them. The Governors resented the effort of the department to dictate employment policy to banks. And they sounded off. The White House backed down a bit. It looked like the clause would be amended or eliminated after Agriculture Secretary Ezra Benson talked to White House and Justice Department officials about it.

Cull Herds And Raise Your Own Replacements

Auburn, Ala. — As prices continue to decline and farm expenses increase, wise dairymen will do a better job of culling their herds and growing their own replacements.

"It's true that cull cows are selling for less now than they did a few months ago," explains Peto Turnham, API Extension assistant dairyman. "But it will still pay the dairyman to get rid of these low producers that consume as much feed and roughage as good animals."

The dairyman adds that raising herd replacements is also essential for highest profits. "Not only is buying replacements expensive," he says, "but the farmer is never sure about the quality of the animals. Be sure replacements are out of the best cows in your herd and sired by artificial breeding or the best bulls available.

When Uncle Sam sends his servicemen overseas, it does not always mean years of separation from their families and loved ones. This was proven to S-Sgt. Jack H. Thomas, son of Mr. and Mrs. John S. Thomas, 901-2nd Avenue North, Clanton, who for the past ten months has been serving a tour of duty with the U. S. Air Force in the Philippines.

Recently arrived from the U. S. aboard the troopship "Fred C. Ainsworth" to join him at his station on Clark Air Force Base, 60 miles north of Manila, were his wife, the former Opal Mae Acton, and their six-year-old son, Jack, Jr.

Formerly of 305 Fifth St., the Thomases will be making their home in the housing area for military dependents on Clark AFB until the sergeant's assignment with the Thirteenth Air Force is completed. He is currently assigned as a communications maintenance technician for the 581st Communications Squadron, 581st Air Resupply and Communications Wing.

Always Keep Iron Cooking Utensils Completely Dry

Stella Mitchell, API Extension home management specialist, advises homemakers to follow this one general rule: Always keep iron utensils completely dry. "If the iron does become rusty," she explains, "remove the rust with scouring powder or steel wool."

If the utensil is used only occasionally, protect it between uses, continues the home expert. Rub on a thin coat of oil or fat that contains no salt. Then wrap it in paper and store it in a dry place. Iron utensils used regularly should be washed in hot, soapy water, rinsed in hot water, and then carefully dried as quickly as possible.

Old tubs, boilers, jars, or other containers should not be left around the farmstead; it takes as little as two inches of water to drown a small child.

Ten Tips For Veterans Starting School This Coming Fall

Veterans Administration today issued a round-up of 10 useful tips for the thousands of veterans planning to start school this fall under the Korean GI Bill.

First, said Harley A. Smith, Alabama VA Regional Office Manager, veterans should not jump hastily into training, without having a clear idea of where the training will lead them.

Instead, they should give careful thought to the choice of a goal, as well as to the training program that will help them reach it. The law allows a veteran to change his program no more than once, so it is to his advantage to choose correctly in the first place, Smith warned.

Second, Smith reminded veterans having trouble making up their minds about their goal that they may request vocational counseling to help them arrive at a sound choice of training. To apply for counseling, a veteran need only fill in the appropriate space on VA's application form for GI training.

The third tip was to urge veterans to make sure the course they want has been State-approved for Korean GI training. The VA regional office in Montgomery can tell a veteran whether the course of his choice is on the approved list.

This step can often save them much time and trouble later on, since they will be able to find out in advance whether the school has room for them and whether they meet its requirements for admission.

Fifth, Smith said veterans should make every effort to send their applications for training certificates to VA as soon as possible. This will give a time cushion so that any snags may be ironed out before school begins.

As tip number six, Smith urged veterans to check their applications thoroughly, before mailing them to the VA. An incomplete application can only cause delay, since VA will have to write back to the veteran for the missing information, before any action can be taken.

Also, veterans should make certain that a photastat or certified copy of their seperation paper accompanies the application.

Seventh, Smith reminded applicants that the forms should be sent to the Montgomery VA Regional Office, 400 Lee Street, and not to VA headquarters in Washington, D. C. Applications received in Washington have to be sent back to the appropriate regional office, a time-consuming process.

Eighth, veterans with dependents are advised to gather together the necessary proof of dependency, so that this material can be sent to VA as soon as it is requested.

Veterans with dependents receive higher GI allowance rates than those without. In order for VA to pay the higher rates, it must have proof of dependency status. For a wife, for example, this would consist of a photostat of the marriage certificate, and for a child, it would be a photostat of the birth certificate.

As the ninth point, Smith reminded veterans to take along enough money of their own to tide them over for at least the first two months of training. It takes that long, under the law, for a veteran's first GI allowance check to reach him.

The reason is that the allowances are paid some time after the end of each month of training completed. But before VA can make payment, it must receive a certification—signed by the veteran and his school—stating that he actually was in training during that month. Allowance checks usually go out within 20 days after VA gets the certification.

Smith's tenth and final training tip applies to veterans who already have started training under the Korean GI Bill. It is a reminder for veterans and their schools to submit the monthly certification of training to VA as soon after the end of the month as possible.

This form, which must be signed both by the veteran and a responsible official of his school, must be received by VA before payments on GI allowances may be made. The sooner it reaches VA, the less chance there will be of a delay in mailing a veteran his allowance check.

For Best Ginning Job Keep Ginner Informed

"To adjust drying equipment so farmers will receive the best ginning job possible," says O. N. Andrews, API Extension cotton improvement specialist, "ginners must know exactly what kind of seed cotton they're going to process.

"Farmers can help the ginner and themselves by supplying profit-saving information on the condition of their cotton—how was it picked, is it wet or dry, is it late or early?"

Andrews emphasizes that proper drying is essential for quality cotton. And a close cooperation between ginners and farmers will also mean more money for the grower.

MT. CHEAHA WILL HOLD FIRST T-V STATION FOR STATE SCHOOLS

Montgomery, Ala. The Alabama Educational Television Commission announces following its first meeting, that Mount Cheaha, the highest point in the State, would be the site of the first state-operated TV station.

The group said the Federal Communications Commission will be asked for a construction permit to build the non-commercial station on Mount Cheaha to operate with "the full permissible power of 316,000 watts."

Thad Holt and Ed Norton, veteran Birmingham radio and TV experts were employed to supervise the work. They built WAFM-TV Alabama's first station.

The Cheaha station will work in cooperation with one planned for Channel 10 in Birmingham by the Birmingham Area Educational Television Association, Inc. Raymond D. Gurlbert, Birmingham; Graydon Ausmus, director of radio and television broadcasting for the University Extension Service, and L. O. Brackeen, publicity director at Auburn, were appointed by the commission to provide the educational programming required by the FCC.

Hurlbert, a former president of the Alabama Education Association is a member of the commission. Ates was elected chairman. Thomas of Russell, Alexander City, was named secretary. Other commissioners are Melton K. Cummings, Huntsville, Rex Sikes, Laverne, and J. S. Acker, Chatsville.

DIVISION OF ADMINISTRATION AND FINANCE

School Architect—

The School Architect's section is a part of the Division of Administration and Finance. The section was established by the State Board of Education in the year 1919.

Personnel of the School Architect's section is composed of the School Architect, the Building Construction Engineer, and secretarial assistants. The purpose of this section is to assist the State Superintendent in the administration of the school laws which govern the construction of school buildings. This section is required to review all plans and specifications before they may be used for construction purposes. It is also the duty of the School Architect, along with the Building Construction Engineer, to make periodical inspections of school buildings under construction. The Code of Alabama requires that all school buildings must have a final inspection by the State Superintendent or his authorized agent before final payment can be made on the contract for such construction. The School Architect, in this case, acts as the Superintendent's authorized agent.

The most important duty of the School Architect is to act in a consultative capacity. It is extremely important that the proper procedure be followed in planning school buildings. Therefore, the School Architect is available to local boards of education to assist in obtaining desirable and economical school buildings.

The members of the School Architect's section also act as consultants on maintenance and repair work of schools and are often called upon to perform other duties in connection with school building programs.

Child Safety in Traffic Discussed

Sylacauga, Ala. — Child safety in traffic "is a three-way proposition," according to President Hugh Comer of the Alabama Safety Council.

Speaking in connection with the child safety program sponsored by the Council this month, Comer said, "the safety of children on Alabama's streets and highways is dependent on the attitudes and actions of three groups: Parents, motorists, and children themselves.

A small percentage of Alabama's schools are doing a fine job of teaching safety in the classroom, Comer declared, and in some cases also are conducting behind-the-wheel driver training courses. "But if the program to save our children from death and injury is to be really effective, it must be carried on not only in every school classroom, but far beyond the school."

Parents must set a good example to children in their traffic habits, and must use the authority and discipline of the home to instill in children respect and obedience to traffic rules.

"Then, even with the best training, children's actions sometimes are unpredictable. So it's up to every motorist to be especially alert near schools and playgrounds and in residential areas."

Finally, the Sylacauga industrialist declared, the children themselves "must also do their best to walk and play safely, observing all rules they have learned at home and in school."

Child safety "can be a reality only if all three groups work to bring it about. Comer asserts. "That is why special emphasis is being put upon the responsibilities of each by the Alabama and National Safety Councils this month."

THE PEACE THAT PAYS DIVIDENDS

The most sought after possession within the entire range of man's desire is contentment. Like the elusive will-o-the-wisp it has been chased throughout the ages, and the frantic search has left a trial of tragic failures.

Why the fruitlessness of the search? For the reason that it cannot be acquired by the method generally used—that of misdirected human ambitions. For example, the idea as always prevailed that contentment can be secured by the acquisition of wealth, or by mere mental prowess, or by organized military or political power, or by some other scheme within the compass of man's limited reason. The fallacy of the idea can be illustrated by the old story of the heathen king who was suffering from a distressing malady (probably stomach ulcers) and was advised by his astrologist that he would be cured if the shirt of a contented man were brought for him to wear. Members of the royal staff were therefore sent out to all parts of the kingdom to find such a person. After a long search a man was found who seemed to be really happy, but who could not relieve the king's difficulty, because he had no shirt!

We smile at the recital of that improbable incident, but underneath it lies the truth that, apart from the Christian religion complete satisfaction of the soul cannot be found. Neither the wealth of Croesus, nor the autocratic ambition of a Bourbon king, nor the learning of Plato can capture the summum bonum of all human desire, commonly known as contentment.

Here is the only satisfying answer to the question that has beset the race since the days of Cain, the son of Adam: "Godliness with contentment is great gain." That sentence can be interpretatively translated in these words: "Contentment that is the product of faith in God is great gain; for we brought nothing into the world, nor can we carry anything out of it; and if we have food and clothing, with these we will be satisfied." That takes us back to the Sermon on the Mount in which we find the constructive advice; "Seek ye first the Kingdom of God and His righteousness; and all these things shall be added unto you."

In the opinion of the wiseacres among our students, the author of te letter from which the quoted recipe for contentment is taken was a failure, for the reason that he had surrendered every enticing opportunity for worldly advancement in order to join the followers of One whose philosophy was not of this world. But the question arises as to whether or not he was satisfied with the position he had taken. Suppose we let him answer the question. After life-long persecution for his faith, in his penniless old age he declared, "I have learned that in whatsoever state I am, therewith to be content. . . .I have all, and abound. . . .for godliness with contentment is great gain."

—By Ben

Mr. H. T. Pipes died this morning. May he now be repaid some of the sunshine he spread through so many years, to so many. His was a lovable character. He will be sorely missed in Chilton County and throughout the South by all who knew him.

Fred Thornton, Associate Editor The Montgomery Advertiser, is asking forgiveness for voting the Republican Ticket in an editorial on the Editorial Page today. The editorial was taken from The Montgomery Advertiser. We knew that it was coming, but we didn't think it would be so soon. Why, the honeymoon shouldn't even be over.

A minister — making a call — and his hostess were sitting in the parlor when her small son came running in carrying a dead rat. "Don't worry, mother, it's dead. We bashed him and beat him until—" and noticing the minister for the first time, he added in a lowered voice "—until God called him home."

Here's an interesting item from Southern Bell. The first five cities in Alabama to get telephone service from the Bell System were Mobile, 1879; Selma, 1880; Montgomery, 1880; Birmingham, 1882; Gadsden, 1883. You have heard of a lot of water going over the dam, well, there has been a lot of yak-e-ty gone over the wires since then.

They said the stock show was the main attraction at our local Fair recently. One lady was going down the line of stalls with her husband when she noticed a big bull with a ring through his nose. Turning to her husband, she asked: "Does that mean he's married?"

A lady went into Bell Hardware Company the other day and asked Jimmy if he had an alarm clock that would awaken father without waking the whole family. "I don't know of any such alarm clock as that, Madam," said Jimmy. "We keep just the ordinary kind that will wake the whole family without disturbing father."

Two ladies talking at Upchurch Drug Store: "I don't intend to get married until I'm thirty," remarked one of them. The other returned: "I don't intend being thirty until I am married."

There's gonna be some stink raised about the stink caused by the city sewerage in Walnut Creek. He wants to know about the current football news. Well, the first game was just played last Friday night and Harold Smyer has a dandy write-up about the game in this issue. Until now we have received no schedule of this season's games from the high school. Can't understand why the party above mentioned was backwards about signing his name. Then we could have printed it. Helen Parrish To Attend Civilian Defense Confab

Miss Helen Parrish of Chilton County, who has been appointed County Coordinator of the Women's Work in the State Civil Defense program, has been invited to attend the Conference to be held at Alabama College, Thursday, September 24. Registration begins at 9:30 a.m.

Dr. Hallie Farmer, the State Director of Women's Work, appointed this summer by Colonel James M. Garrett, Jr., the Alabama Director of Civil Defense, has planned a program which will be of interest to all.

Mrs. Thalia Wood, the Director of Women's Participation in the Federal Civil Defense Administration in Washington, D.C., will be the principal speaker. Mrs. Tennie deJarnette, the Assistant Regional Director, Colonel Harry E. Brown, the Regional Director, and Edgar P. James, the Regional Training Officer, from the regional office in Atlanta will also speak and be available for conferences. Colonel Garrett will be on the program.

Plans will be made at this meeting to further the Alabama program. Although many feel that only a few strategic places in Alabama may be bombed in case of an atomic attack, the rest of the State must be organized and ready to assist in caring for casualties, mass evacuation of women and children, and for protecting their own families.

It is earnestly desired that all Women's Organizations in the county have representatives at the conference at Alabama College.

With proper drainage many Alabama acres, now too wet for crop use, can be turned into profitable land.

Chilton Tigers Stomp Red Devils of Maqlesville, 25-7

(By HAROLD SMYER)

The Chilton County High School football team defeated the Red Devils of Maplesville last Friday night by the score of 25 to 7. The Clanton Tigers' next game is with Montevallo on Friday night, September 25th, at Montevallo.

During the first quarter of the Tiger-Red Devil game the Tigers fumbled and the Red Devils penetrated deep into Tiger territory, only to be halted through downs. Clanton took possession of the ball and advanced it to their own thirty yard line and again fumbled. This proved costly, for in three plays Motley, through his passing, flipped a touchdown pass to Glaze. Motley again passed to Glaze for the extra point and Maplesville had a 7-0 lead.

Clanton received Maplesville's kick-off and in five plays scored, Captain Hardy making the touchdown dash of 32 yards. Clanton's try for the extra point was not good. The next time the Tigers gained possession of the pigskin they scored their second TD in five plays. Roy Mims sprinted for the Tigers' second score. Again, Clanton's place-kick for the extra point was not good. Score — Clanton 12, Maplesville 7.

Lewis halted the next Red Devil drive with the interception of Motley's pass, just before the end of the first half. Clanton received the second half kick-off and marched 65 yards in nine plays to score. Hardy crossed the double stripe for Clanton on a 15 yard jaunt. Maplesville received Clanton's kick-off, but lost possession of the ball as Nelson intercepted Motley's pass. Clanton was also feeling good-hearted, so after three plays fumbled, Maplesville recovering. Mims made an interception of a Red Devil pass on his ten yard line and advanced to the 28 yard line and fumbled as he was tackled, Maplesville recovered the fumble. Motley passed to Giles and Giles was downed on the three yard line. Four passes failed to find their targets and the Tigers gained possession of the ball. An epidemic of fumbles hit the Tigers and they fumbled on their own 11 yard line, Maplesville recovered the fumbled pigskin. Mims halted any threat of the Red Devils as he intercepted a pass on his goal line and raced out to his 22 yard line. With the aid of a 15 yard penalty, Clanton started down the field. Mims, Duren and Hardy clicked off yardage for the Tigers. Mims scored from the 5 yard line and his place-kick for the extra point was good. The game ended a few plays later.

Motley, Giles, Chapman, Moore and Glaze were the stars for Maplesville. Mims, Hardy, Minor, Lewis, Payton and Duren were the offensive standouts for Clanton. Littlejohn was the Tiger defensive star. Mims gained 199 yards; Hardy 125 yards; and Giles 106 yards.

Scanning the News

SECRETARY of State John Foster Dulles, who has the most difficult job in the Republican administration, is the subject of grave concern by his friends and top men in Washington. There are a number of reasons for this concern.

In the first place, Secretary Dulles has not received universal praise in the nation's press. To the contrary, he has been receiving some bad press notices. The volume of these attacks and criticisms approaches that to which Secretary Atchison of the Truman Administration was subjected.

As one nationally-known columnist pointed out, perhaps it is not the man who is being criticized, but the office. Being Secretary of State is, without doubt, the most difficult in present day government. This office is expected to solve immediately those problems that have accumulated through years; problems that are constantly changing and shifting like quick sand.

It is, perhaps, time of the American people to stop and reconsider what is expected of a Secretary of State; what powers are invested in the office; and what are its numerous limitations.

If the present trend continues, Washington observers are saying, Secretary Dulles may be the first to leave the Eisenhower administration. If this happens another good man will have been sacrificed because it is impossible for any man, no matter what his name, to fill an office that is the focal point of criticism of history.

● The American Legion in its national convention demanded full-scale action, including the use of atomic and hydrogen bombs, to drive the Communists from Korea if peace negotiations should fail. This demand is the subject of considerable speculation in Washington.

Few deny that such action would launch a third world war. It seems, some diplomats point out, that in view of this fact the Legion's demands are somewhat drastic and perhaps out of order.

What most foreign observers would like to know is whether or not the Legion reflects the general thinking of the American people. They say if it does then the next world war is well on its way. Does it reflect general American thinking?

This convention also attracted the attention of observers because of a speech made by Secretary of State Dulles, in which he said that new aggression against Korea or Indochina might provoke a war. He added that the Communists could not count on "privileged sanctuary" in Manchuria if they renew aggression against South Korea.

This sounded very much like a new government policy of warning would-be aggressors against security infringements. By mentioning Indochina it would seem that the policy includes our intervention in that area if the Chinese should decide to march in that direction.

● Approximately one month remains before the final deadline for the political conference on Korea. If and when the convention begins, from that time a new tension will rule the world for a number of weeks, diplomats report.

This is how they reason:

If the Communist prolong the talks with endless blocks the American temper may cause a walk-out. The United States has already said it will not sit indefinitely at a peace conference with the Reds.

What happens in the event of a walk-out? Does the war in Korea begin again?

These are serious questions and worthy of considerable and prolonged thought.

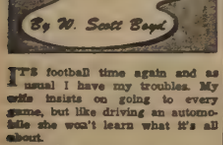
As a farmer she feels that she has recovered her health and is recovering her vision. Her handicap has made her particularly conscious of the need to keep her equipment in good condition and to save money against future needs. She is a staunch supporter of the Treasury Department's Farm Machinery Replacement Plan through the purchase of U. S. Savings Bonds. She says, "This Plan enables the farmer to earn interest on the money he sets aside for new equipment instead of buying on time and paying interest when a piece of machinery becomes useless. And the farm wife should have her own savings plan, too. It's surprising how much egg money can be put into Savings Bonds that some day can pay for a new modern kitchen or other home improvements".



IT'S football time again and as usual I have my troubles. My wife insists on going to every game, but like driving an automobile she won't learn what it's all about.

"What are they doing down on their knees?" says she.

"Digging in for a goal line stand," says I.

"I don't see how they can dig in without shovels or something, and I know they are allowed. Stop your kidding. What are they doing, honey."

"Just be still, sweetheart," says I, "and let me watch the game WITHOUT A LOT OF STUPID QUESTIONS."

"So I'm stupid now, am I." She turns to her friend on her right. "Isn't that just like a man, Liz. Just because I ask a simple question I'm stupid."

"I wouldn't stand for it," says Liz.

"Please," says I, "will you two shut up and let Harry and me watch the game."

"HARRY," Liz shouted, "hit him. He told me to shut up."

Harry shrugged. "Wish I had had the nerve to do it myself years ago."

"Oh!" Liz hissed. "Look at me and say that."

"We can't" says I, "we're watching the game."

"You stay out of this," says the wife, "this fight is between Liz and Harry."

"O. K." says I. "That suits me."

There follows a lot of yak-yak-yak. I can't concentrate on the game and the two women. So I surrendered. "O. K. What do you want to know, honey?"

"What," says she, "are they doing down on their knees."

"DIGGING IN FOR A GOAL LINE STAND!"

That silences her for a moment.

"All right smart guy" says she, "I'll take care of you when we get home."

DALE CARNEGIE

MRS. DOROTHY SMITH, 1639 Fernote Street, Rahway, New Jersey, one night recently had a caller, a neighbor who had suffered deep personal tragedy just a year ago. Mrs. Smith thinks all of us can benefit by the attitude of her friend—hence this story.

Her husband had been instantly killed in an auto accident, leaving her with five small children. But she looked so well, that Mrs. Smith couldn't help remarking on her calm and contented appearance. So the neighbor told this story:

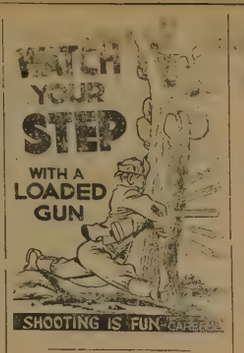
CARNEGIE

"After I lost John so suddenly and was faced with the almost impossible task of raising five children alone, I was thrown into despair, darker than I thought existed. My days and nights were tormented with worry and fear of the future; life held nothing for me. I completely forgot my children and the loss that they too had suffered. I think I would in time have lost my mind.

"Then one night my oldest son asked me to "hear" him while he recited some prayers that were to be said at a pageant. One of the prayers was the twenty-third Psalm.

"As John began reciting 'The Lord is my shepherd, I shall not want', I felt a remarkable lightness, almost as though someone had lifted a weight from me. I know now that God surely intervened that night knowing how desperately unhappy I was. I bought a copy of the Psalm and had it framed for my room. There it hung, and morning and night, comforting words to be able to read and to give me a sense of strength and courage. I'm not a deeply religious person and I doubt if I would have believed, a year ago, that such a small thing could perform the miracle it did, but I know now that the help I received from the words of that Psalm brought me back to sanity and is helping me to be both mother and father to my children."

Yes, we can all benefit by a story of overcoming fear and worry through confidence and faith in God.



It just occurs to me, when you and I tell our story about the big one that got away, they call us liars. But when Hemingway does the same thing, they give him a bunch of literary awards.

No other farm animal grows as fast as the turkey, and these birds furnish a good profitable market for home-grown grains.

Is your Machinery Replacement Plan up-to-date?

If you're like thousands of other American farmers, you've probably given little or no thought to your large annual machinery depreciation. But whether you've thought about it or not, your expensive farm machines are wearing out. And they're wearing out at a lot faster rate than they used to when they were horse-drawn.

It's hard to say just how long each one of your machines will last. Some of them are good for 10 or 15 years. Other will probably have to be replaced every 3 or 4 years. But no matter when you buy a new machine you're going to find it cuts pretty deep unless you've saved the money for it.

There's a new, easy way to save for machinery replacement, however, that thousands of farmers have already discovered. They simply set aside part of what their machines earn each year and invest it in Series E U.S. Savings Bonds. (This usually amounts to 5 or 10 per cent of their annual gross income). Then, when replacement time rolls around, they've got a ready source of cash to buy the new machines they need.

United States Savings Bonds are better than ever. They start earning interest faster, mature sooner. $75 grows to $100 in less than ten years . . . $134.68 in less than twenty. That means you can replace your equipment and still have something left over to buy those things you've always wanted. Stop in and talk things over with your implement dealer or banker. You'll be surprised how fast the dollars invested in Savings Bonds grow!

UNDER THE STUDY LAMP

(By William Crowe)

AFTER A BRAVE START WHY STOP?

"And I sent messengers unto them saying, I am doing a great work so that I cannit come down."

The sender of that message, Nehemiah by name, was one of the noblest characters in all ancient history. He had given himself to the welfare of his people, whose very existence as a nation was in jeopardy. They were refugee and were trying desperately to rebuild their dismantled capital city, though surrounded by hostile tribes whose one aim was to prevent their carrying out their justifiable plan.

Nehemiah had received a message from the enemy leaders to meet thim in ostensibly a friendly conference, but carrying a veiled threat of utter annihilation of the Jewish colony unless their demands were obeyed. Nehemiah's reply is quoted at the head of this article.

It takes a real man to take a stand and then stand by it, regardless of the consequences. Such a man was Nehemiah. Such was William the Silent, Prince of Orange, who could have escaped assassination had he deserted the cause of the beleaguered Dutch in their struggle for religious freedom. Such was John Wesley, to whom the Methodist Church owes its existence; or William Booth, who endured the scorn of London's elite for the sake of London's downtrodden. But above and beyond all others think again of One Who was despised and rejected of men, and Who, facing history's most appalling tragedy, reported to His Father, "I have finished the work which Thou gavest Me to do."

Vision, the offspring of high and holy ambition, often becomes blurred by earthy mists, with the result that we lose sight of the distant goal that requires constant diligence and patience for its attainment, and sell ourselves to the doing of small things. The old Mother Goose jingle sets forth this truth in homely fashion.

"Pussy cat, pussy cat, where have you been?
I've been to London to see the queen.
Pussy cat, pussy cat, what did you there?
I frightened a little mouse under a chair."

In the letter to the Galatians there is the barbed question, "Ye did run well wo did hinder you?" It is easy indeed to make resolutions, but performance is another matter. Men like Nehemiah who said, "I am doing a great work so that I cannot come down," are the creators and sustainers of our Christian civilization, for they are the agents in the hand of God for the building of the Kingdom that cannot be destroyed. What would you think of a woman of distinguished literary gifts, who would descend from the level of Sir Walter Scott and give herself to the writing of selacious tales, under the guise of so-called realism, with the excuse that there is more money in low-grade books than in the cultural and health-giving kind? Or of a church member who deliberately adopts a type of business that contributes to the impairment of the church's influence? It is easy for a young person's high ambition to become neutralized by the placid view that a bird in the hand is worth two in the bush. It was Emerson who said, "Not failure, but low aim, is crime." It is within the choice of every thoughtful person to be listed with Nehemiah who refused to betray his people, or with the cat in the jingle, the victim of dwarfed and withered aspiration.

TRICK ON A TRUCK

By Ona Lathrop

MARY BENTLEY walked down the alley behind their home and surveyed the new home across from them. Hm! Picture-window at the back—looking right out on their old garage made from a chicken-house, and the 1940 truck Sam kept parked beside it. That must be a beautiful view for the new neighbor moving in! She'd prod Sam about it once more.

"Sam, when are you going to get rid of that old truck? You know you'll never use it again. I should think you'd want to get what you could out of it. We might get enough to rebuild the garage."

Sell the truck? I should say not. Never know when I might need that again."

Mary untied her apron and folded it neatly. "Now Sam, you know very well you'll never truck again."

"What in tarnation has got into you, Mary?"

"Mrs. Saunders is moving in today. I just walked along the alley and noticed what pretty things she has. I'll bet she hates the view of that old lop-sided chicken-house garage of ours and that old truck right out her picture-window."

Mary could see she was getting nowhere. Sam was stubborn.

The next day she met the new Mrs. Saunders in the alley.

"So you're moving in? And fixing up your back yard so pretty."

"Yes, I think I'm going to like it." Mrs. Saunders looked about doubtfully. "It will take time, of course, to get things growing. But eventually I hope to have a screen of shrubbery across there. I like the privacy of my living-room at the back."

Mary cast an appreciative eye in the direction she was looking. "I tell Sam we ought to clean this up now that your windows face it, but he's a slow, stubborn soul. Fixing up that old truck would be like taking a little boy's red wagon away. I'd l[illegible] and [illegible] and [illegible] though I'm [illegible] and the engine [illegible] some day though.

The next evening the telephone started ringing. About five times in a half-[illegible] time the same query. "You got a tru[illegible] for sale? How much do you want for it?" Sam looked wildly at Mary.

The 190 acre farm of Douglas Wilhite near Columbia, Missouri, was originally purchased with some of his U. S. Savings Bonds accumulated during the war years. Today, Savings Bonds continue to play an important part in maintaining and improving the farm which is operated by Mr. Wilhite and his son, Frank. Here they show some of the Bonds which they are keeping against future farm replacement needs to Earl J. Huggins, Jr. of the U. S. Savings Bonds staff. Through his 4-H Club projects and Future Farmer of America work, son Frank was able to set aside enough money in Savings Bonds to purchase three registered Hereford cows from which he will be able to build up a registered herd. He bought his original flock of sheep with Savings Bonds and is using his flock as a project in his studies at the Agricultural School of Missouri University. He plans to use the money received from the sale of his lambs to purchase more U. S. Savings Bonds and for his flock replacement.

MASONIC HOME MAINTAINS 276 ACRES IN FARM LANDS

Montgomery, Ala.—The Alabama Masonic Home 276 acre farm is producing the most bountiful crops, beef, pork, poultry, fruits, milk and eggs in its history.

James L. Lawson, Auburn, chairman of the Masonic Farm Committee and his two associates, Dalton R. Harbor and James Lowery, are agricultural experts from Alabama Polytechnic Institute and the United States Department of Agricultural co-operation who inspected the Masonic Home farm recently. D. R. Harbor, extension agronomist, in his report covering the results of the farm inspection made to Grand Master Joseph S. Southall, Grand Lodge of F&AM of Alabama and other officials writes: "The all around situation at the Masonic Home farm looks extremely good."

The 70,000 Master Masons in Alabama, now raising a Million Dollar Endowment Fund for the permanent maintenasce of the Masonic Home and farm will find encouragement in other portions of Mr. Harbor's report. He states: "We went over the farm field, by field, looked at the dairy cattle, the beef cattle, hogs and poultry. Everything is really good. The Masonic farm has much more growth on the pastures than is needed at this time to feed the animals. The Masonic farm has already harveseted 2,500 bales of hay and filled the silo with grass legume silage. The 25 dairy cows now being milked are producing a total of 55 gallons of milk per day. The beef herd is in excellent state of flesh. The Masonic farm's flock of hens is now producing 130 eggs per day. The field of corn is fine. I feel sure it will produce 40 bushels per acre or more. Land clearing has improved the appearance of the place. The fencing job is almost completed.

Naturally the Masonic Farm Committee is delighted.

Rev. and Mrs. Morgan were called to Birmingham this past Monday due to the sudden illness of Mrs. Morgan's mother, Mrs. J. F. Hodges.

Rev. Morgan and wife will soon be leaving.

To the Congregation:

One of the saddest episodes in the career of a minister is the time when he feels that he should change his field of work. Such is the unpleasant item of business to be disposed of in our congregational meeting this morning.

This past Monday I received a call to become the pastor of Trinity Lutheran Church, Anniston, Alabama. After giving this matter a lot of thought and prayer, I feel that it is the Lord's will that I accept this call and go to the Anniston Church. Accordingly, my resignation will be voted upon this morning.

I do want to say, however, that my experience and work among you has been very joyful to me and I trust that it has been to you also. Another thing of which we can be justly proud is the fine spirit of harmony and cooperation that prevails among the membership. Continue this fine spirit and the Lord will prosper you.

More than three thousand plants grow without cultivation in Alabama. The grasses at present common to the southern section of the United States were found in Alabama by the early explorers. DeSoto found cane, grasses, and vines growing everywhere. The pioneers throughout the Colonial and Territorial periods found water and wild verdure abundant. Cattle flourished in large numbers on the open ranges.

SAMARIA NEWS

Our attendance Sunday was about the usual one. Incidentally, we hope the absence of the members who were absent Sunday were sick, because they ate too much at our social Friday night.

Our attendance for our social Friday night was very good. We know each of you who were absent Friday night not only missed some very good food, but just missed the blessing of being together. After the food was spread in front of the church, prayer was led by Rev. E. C. Hand, our pastor.

After we had all eaten a gracious supper, games were enjoyed by all the children. After the games, the group gathered inside the church to sing a while and to enjoy a Bible Quiz, which was helpful to us all, which was led by Mrs. Gertie Mae Schmith. After our songs and Bible Quiz, we again went outside for more refreshments. We wish to thank all the ladies as well as the men who furnished the food and helped to make the social a success. We hope it won't be too long before we have another church social.

We were very glad to have Mrs. H. H. Moore and Sara, of Plantersville with us Sunday. We welcome them back at any time.

Mr. and Mrs. Percy Wilson and J. E., visited Mr. and Mrs. Edward Little, Kathryn and Ruth, Sunday afternoon.

Mr. Will Hardy is spending this week with Mr. and Mrs. Edward Little.

There will be a hot dog supper this Saturday night at Jimmy Fulmer's for all the young people. All visitors are invited.

Mr. and Mrs. T. V. McDowell of Prattville visited in Clanton Saturday.

We hope each of you will keep in mind our Sunday School each Sunday morning at 10 o'clock, with preaching following, and also, Sunday night. Our Training Union starts at 7 o'clock, with preaching following. Mid-week prayer services each Wednesday night. — Reporter.

Up to three years ago, Harold Mullinix, Sr. (right) didn't own a tractor on his 145 acre farm in Damascus, Maryland. He used horses. Then his son, Harold, Jr., went into partnership with him and using some of the U. S. Savings Bonds he bought during elementary school, they bought this tractor. Harold, Jr. bought Savings Bonds with money he earned from 4-H Club work during both elementary and high school. Here he and his father are looking at those which are still being held against the day they need to replace the tractor or buy another to help in their increasing farm operation. They plan to buy Bonds regularly to build up a machinery replacement fund to cover depreciation on all of their equipment.

From The Lincoln Times, Lincolnton, N. C.: We note that some of the television columnists are now complaining about the deluge of psychopathic crime being strewn about the nation's television screens No doubt the average youngster, who goes in search of entertainment, in his living-room, see a lot of queer characters, and queer dramas enacted

If he were to judge the nature of the outside world by what he sees on the television screen, he would probably conclude that more than half the population is in the category of alcoholics, in need of psychotherapy, or deafing in other vices, even worse than alcoholism. We have mentioned this industry failing on other occasions and think the general average of programming is not what it might be.

Perhaps one of the causes of the difficulty is that so many of the TV plays are produced in New York and Hollywood, centers of the fast-moving life which characterizes show business. The average youngster in Podunk lives in different surroundings and circumstances, and, therefore, would enjoy clean and typically American entertainment. We hope the sponsors—with whom the final responsibility lies—will exert sufficient pressure in the right places to raise the standards of their presentations to a more acceptable level.

ALABAMA HIGHLIGHTS

The earliest available figures regarding cotton producing in Alabama are found in the United States Census Report of 1840. Cotton was being grown on 1,600 plantations, and about five bales of cotton were produced by each farmer. The first cotton mill was erected in Madison County, in 1832. Eighteen years later there were twelve such mills in Alabama, using 5,000 bales of cotton.

Alabama Indians had advanced from a roving to a more or less settled population with some phases of agriculture well understood long before the discovery of America. Early invaders of the territory now included within the borders of Alabama found large buildings filled with vegetables and grain. Folks and Things ABOUT TOWN

—By Ben

Folks been feeling kinda low around our house recently. There has been a lot of complaining. We tried to slip a complaint in edgeways the other night and the darn thing back-fired and kept us in bed for three days. Feeling better though now. We won't try that again soon for sure.

Sorry to hear that Joe Jackson fell off his road machinery and hurt himself bad. It happened like this, as we understand it: Joe was on top of his machine putting water or something into it at the county shops last week when he lost his balance and over he went on his head. The fall broke his collarbone and injured his head. He is doing a lot better now and is expected to be all right. These screwy accidents hurt more people.

Want to wish the best to Burns Goodgame, too, who suffered a brain hemorrage last week end. He is also doing fine at his home and no complications are expected. Understand it is just a matter of taking care of himself. Hope he'll be up and about before long.

Claud and Hoke Pipes were in to see us the other day. They were here with their father when he died. Claud is still at Huntsville and is doing nicely. Says he is very fond of his adopted home.

Not long ago a jury went out early in the morning on a simple case, and when it came near the time for court to adjourn, his honor sent for the jury, and asked the foreman if they required any further instructions. "We need no instructions, your Honor," replied the foreman, "but here are eleven of the most stubborn men I have ever seen. They won't agree with anything."

HUGE OUTLAYS PLANNED IN COUNTY FOR REPAIRS

Chilton county home owners will spend an estimated $495,000 during 1953 on normal repairing and modernizing if non-farm dwellings.

"As the great postwar home building boom begins to slacken, home repair and reconditioning will assume major importance to the building trades in every community," said Robert Bailey, chairman of the residential construction committee of the Tile Council of America, which released the estimate.

Nearly two of every three home owners here will make some expenditures during the year to improve their property, according to the report. Painting of either the exterior or interior will be the most common repair, with replacing or repairing roofs second.

One of every 11 homes in the United States has water pipes repaired, a bathroom tiled or a shower installed in an average year, the report revealed. Six of every 100 have carpentry work done.

The kitchen is the area most families want to improve first. The resulting demand for new major equipment, clay tile for counter tops and drainboards, and kitchen means prosperity in the community for many concerns and for skilled workmen, the report points out.

Home repair expenditures throughout the nation will total almost $4 billion in 1953, the Tile Council report estimated. This will be one of the heaviest outlays in U. S. history for such work.

T-B VOLUNTEERS TO MEET IN BIRMINGHAM

The 41-year history of Alabama's fight against tuberculosis will be reviewed by several hundred volunteers who lead the crusade when they gather for the state-wide annual meeting of the Alabama Tuberculosis Association September 29 in Birmingham.

To be presided over by Marc Ray Clement, Tuscaloosa, association president, volunteers will hear reports of the association's legislative program for adequate funds to hospitalize and treat patients, this being one of the chief issues before the recently adjourned Legislature.

Thirty-one county leaders will be honored at a special ceremony for having passed goals in the 1952 Christmas Seal Sale.

Chief among an array of distinguished speakers from other parts of the nation will be Mark Harrington, president of the National Tuberculosis Association and widely known attorney of Denver. Alabama physicians, members of the Alabama Trudeau Society, medical section of the association, will hear a talk on treatment of the non-hospitalized TB patient by Dr. Julius Wilson, professor of medicine at the University of Pennsylvania.

Training Cut-Off Date For Some Korea GI Bill Veterans

Montgomery, Ala.—Nearly a million veterans who served since the outbreak of Korean hostilities who were discharged or separated before August 20, 1952, and who have not yet taken advantage of the GI training benefit, have just less than one year in which to start training under the Korean GI Bill, C. C. Horton, Director of the State Department of Veterans' Affairs said today.

Horton stated that under the law, veterans actually must "enroll in and begin in" GI training by August 20, 1954, in order to continue afterwards. The mere filing of an application beforehand, with an intention of starting some time after that date, is not enough.

The 1954 cut-off-date applies only to post-Korean veterans who left the service before August 20, 1952. Those separated after that date need not concern themselves with the 1954 deadline. Instead, they have two years from the time they left the armed firces in which to get started.

Generally, a veteran is expected to be in the classroom or at the training bench when his GI Bill cut-off-date comes around, if he wants to continue beyond that time.

But so long as he started before the deadline, there will be no objection if he is not actually in training on the cut-off-date because of the normal summer vacation, or for other reasons beyond his control, or for circumstances that the VA deems to be excusable.

Horton invited interested persons to visit the nearest branch office of the State Department of Veterans' Affairs for advice and assistance. There is one in every Alabama County.

Safety The Main Key To Better Farm Life

Auburn, Ala. — Safety should be a special feature of every farm operation, according to J. T. Gaillard, API Extension agricultural engineer.

"The National Safety Council reports that 14,000 persons were killed on American farms last year," says the farm leader. "And more emphasis on safety measures is the only thing that will reduce this loss in 1953."

Gaillard offers these simple suggestions for safe farm living. Keep your machines in good repair and working condition. Keep guards and safety devices in place. Operate tractors carefully—avoid ditches, banks, and soft ground and always hitch to the drawbar. Be "fire-sighted"—don't smoke around barns. Pour inflammables outdoors, and never start fires with kerosene. Speak to animals when approaching them, and never trust a bull.

DIVINING ROD ALOFT

Washington, D.C. — The modern divining rod rides a plane these days, according to the National Geographic Society, which points out that with camera, magnetometer or radar, aerial explorers can locate underground water and metallic ores, assay quarries, count the trees in a forest and accurately measure the height of a mountain or a molehill.

Traffic Problem One Of Human Relations Says Sheriff Kendrick

Sheriff J. L. Kendrick announced today that information received through the National Police Traffic Safety Institute has revealed that over 7800 young people between the ages 15 and 24 were killed in 1952 as a result of automobile accidents. In addition to these fatal accidents, there were 360,000 injuries. Drivers in this age group, according to the National Police Traffic Safety Institute's report, represent only about 20% of all fatal accidents.

"It is obvious that the reason for this disproportionately high number of young driver traffic fatalities is not to be found in the youngster's lack of manual skill." Sheriff Kendrick said. "This is the period of his life when his reactions are fastest, his eyes the sharpest and his coordination the best."

"But when the young driver takes a high-powered car into traffic the situation is more than a mechanical one; at this point it becomes social. It becomes a problem in human relations. The younster must balance his own rights and responsibilities with the rights and responsibilities of others. And that involves social attitudes and judgement."

This is the problem inherent in youthful driving," Sheriff Kendrick continued. "Because of his youth, he has little chance to develope judgement through actual life situations. Fortunately, actual life experience is not the only source of judgment. If this were the case, the only answer to the problem would be to deny our young people license to drive. There is, however, another approach to development of sound attitudes and judgement-education."

Sheriff Kendrick said further that, "Education in the high schools has proved itself one of the most effective solutions to the young driver problem. At the high school age, youngsters are most capable of learning proper attitudes and forming good habits. At this age, too, youth is vitally interested in learning to drive. It is no wonder, then, that driver training courses in the high schools consistently produce superior drivers who remain so all through life. In fact, these trained drivers have only one-half as many accidents as untrained drivers do.

"Through education, youth can derive the artificial experiences which form the basis for the judgement and attitudes needed to develope safe driving habits," the Sheriff concluded.

Sheriff Kendrick is a member of the National Police Safety Institute, which organization has interested itself in driver education, and a program of promoting greater teen-age driving safety.

Less Cotton Ginned So Far

Census report shows that 694 bales of cotton were ginned in Chilton County, Alabama, from the crop of 1953 prior to September 1, as compared with 1084 bales for the crop of 1952.

Milking Practices Have Much To Do With Profits

Auburn, Ala. — More milk means more profits. And to insure added income, wise dairymen adopt good milking practices for both higher milk production and higher quality.

In explaining this statement, Pete Turnham, API Extension assistant dairyman, adds that these steps are recommended guides to efficient milking.

1. Be as regular as possible with milking time. Treat cows gently—mistreated animals can't let down their milk.

2. Wipe and massage the udder with a cloth wrung dry after it has been soaked in warm chlorine water. Do this a few minutes before the unit is applied. Wipe udder and teats dry.

3. Don't try to operate more units than you can handle. Never have more than two units per man in actual operation.

4. Use the strip cup to detect mastitis, to stimulate let down, and to remove milk that is high in bacterial count. Never milk on the floor.

5. Rinse the teat cups in plain cool water and then in chlorine water before moving on to the next cow.

6. Strip by machine if possible. Toward the end of the milking, pull down on teat cups to open the milk cistern and drain away the last of the milk.

7. Milk slow milkers and mastitis-infested animals last.

8. When the cow is milked, take the machine off at once.

9. Rinse the machine with cold water after the last cow is milked. Wash thoroughly and store as manufacturer directs.

Decrease Shown In Typhoid Cases

In spite of the increase in population, typhoid fever killed only two Alabamians in 1952, as compared with 674 in 1915.

The State Department of Health called attention to this sharp decline today, on the basis of complete reports of 1915 and provisional reports for 1952, prepared by the Department's Bureau of Vital Statistics.

The typhoid death rate dropped from 29.9 per 100,000 population in 1915 to less than 0.1 per 100,000 —one per million—in 1952.

Handful Of Korean Disabled Vets Using Special Insurance

Montgomery, Ala. — Korean veterans who are failing to keep their government life insurance after separation from the service are tossing aside one of the most worthwhile benefits they will ever have, C. C. Horton, Director of the State Department of Veterans' Affairs, said today.

Horton stated that a survey was recently completed which shows that of the one-half million veterans that have been discharged from the Armed Forces since the outbreak of the Korean conflict, only 6,500 have retained their government insurance. The insurance is available to every person who served 31 days or more after June 27, 1950. While in the Armed Forces, a person receives a $10,000 life insurance policy on which no premiums are paid. In order to keep this insurance in effect, a veteran must apply within 120 days after discharge from active service. The insurance is available in amounts from $1,000 to $10,000.

For those Korean veterans who have a service-connected disability of ten percent (10%) or more, a special type of insurance may be had differing from that offered to a non-disabled veteran which is a straight term policy renewable every five years. This special type of insurance for the disabled veterans is convertible to various permanent plans.

Horton invited veterans to come by the nearest office of the State Department of Veterans' Affairs for further information and assistance.

RECORD TRAFFIC OFFENDER

Chicago — Fines totaling more than $5,000 were assessed recently against Jerry Leverson, alias L. J. Borwen, 27, a Negro, on 71 traffic violations, most of them speeding. Police had hunted for Leverson for more than a year but he had eluded them by changing homes and jobs frequently. The judge said that the highest fines previously imposed in this country for traffic violations were in New York City one for $4,400 and another for $3,300.

State Threatened By Forest Fire Possibilities

Montgomery, Ala. — State Conservation Director Earl M. McGowin sounded a warning here today that Alabama appears threatened by a critical forest fire period. All citizens should use more than normal care to keep fire out of the woods, he said.

McGowin said at least five counties are presently in critical or near-critical forest fire condition because of drouth. Weather predictions reflect little likelihood of rain and the possibility of widespread winds. Windy weather in any of these areas might cause extensive fire damage.

Jefferson and Walker Counties have been hardest hit by fires which increased in number and size rapidly during the past few days. Neither of these counties has had more than one-half inch of rainfall on any one day during the past month, which has left vegetation powder dry.

Other counties in dangerous condition include Tuscaloosa, Shelby and Etowah, according to reports to the State Forestry Division at Montgomery.

McGowin urged that all persons refrain from setting brush, grass or trash fires until extensive rainfall relieves the situation. "We hope that the fire situation won't get as bad as last fall but present conditions are advancing in that direction.

"State firefighting forces will do everything possible to control fires in all counties, but small fires set with no intent to damage the woods may get out of control. Numerous smokes and small fires also tend to confuse fire towermen and cause wasted motion by fire crews."

He said care should be used in discarding matches and cigarettes and in leaving camp fires in the woods.

The 1952 fall fire season was one of the worst in Alabama history. During November last year Governor Gordon Persons and the Conservation Director found it necessary to close hunting seasons for a short period in order to reduce the fire hazard in the woods.

In Many States, Laws Are Too Lax On Reckless Driving

Laxity in dealing with serious driving offenses endangering safety on the highways is one of the basic reasons why the nation's tolls of deaths and injuries in accidents are so high and keep going higher, a noted traffic safety authority asserted today.

Thomas N. Boate, accident prevention department manager of the Association of Casualty and Surety Companies, said that despite the fact that approximately 600,000 drivers lose their licenses temporarily or permanently for major or repeated violations of the highway safety codes every year, "these public menaces aren't being weeded out fast enough."

Those ruled off the roads in a single year for so-called "moving violations" represent only about one percent of the nation's 60,000,000 licensed motorists and are "but a mere fraction of the chronically dangerous drivers traveling the highways, Mr. Boate declared.

Drunken drivers comprise slightly more than one-third of those who lose their licenses through revocation or suspension, totaling about 200,000 annually. The offense of driving while intoxicated leads all others as the cause of loss of license, outnumbering speeders, the next highest group of delicensed drivers, by nearly three to one. Only 75,000 speeders suffered revocation or suspension of their licenses in 1952, Mr. Boate said.

Mr. Boate, whose experience with the accidents of these types of death-dealing law breakers of the highways includes many years as chief of the traffic division of the Pennsylvania State Police, declared the public must not rest until it compels authorities to mete out much sterner treatment to offenders to discourage speeding, drunken and reckless driving violations which claim thousands of lives every year. Unless far greater numbers of drivers who threaten public safety are apprehended and ruled off the roads in future years, he said, the tolls of dead and injured in traffic accidents will continue to rise in every state which fails to deal harshly with such offenders.

A study of available figures from 40 states and the District of Columbia showed that in 1952 the licenses of 483,000 drivers were revoked or suspended for varying periods of time for "moving violations," according to Mr. Boate. Driving while intoxicated accounted for 35 percent of these revocations or suspensions, while speeding, either by itself or in combination with one or more other offenses, represented more than 13 percent. Reckless driving also ranked high among the causes of loss of license temporarily or permanently.

However, Mr. Boate pointed out, four states had nearly half of the 60,000 suspensions for driving while intoxicated, and two other states together about one-fourth of the total of nearly 107,000 revocations for drunken driving. This indicates, he said, that most states must deal more harshly with those who drink and drive if there is to be a substantial decrease in accidents caused by drunken drivers.

He also observed that two states, Pennsylvania and Massachusetts, accounted for 75 percent of the punitive actions taken against drivers for speeding offenses. Of the total of 62,000 drivers whose licenses were suspended in 1952 for speeding, 46,120 lost them in those two states. Pennsylvania suspended 30,988 licenses for speeding and Massachusetts 15,132. In all states only about 2,000 driving licenses were revoked for speeding.

"In some states the charge of driving while intoxicated represents 80 to 90 percent of the offenses which cause revocation or suspension," commented Mr. Boate. "In several states speeding outranks all other causes for loss of licenses. To lessen the highway slaughter, all states must deal effectively with all types of serious violators who continue to kill and maim those who use the highways.

"The only language some drivers understand is 'You're going to lose your license.' Drunken drivers and speeders are killing well over half of those lost in highway accidents, yet only one percent of our drivers are compelled to give up their licenses and thousands go free to persist in these deadly violations of the code of safe drivers."

U. S INCOMES UP

The Department of Commerce reported recently that total income climbed from $243,000,000,000 in 1951 to $255,000,000,000 in 1952. The Department also revealed that income totals were up sharply in several states and down in only four states.

The largest increases reported were in Kansas, with 20% increase; Nevada, with a 15% increase; Arizona, with a 12% increase; South Carolina, where income increased 10%; and in California, were it went up nine per cent.

Behind these states were Florida, Louisiana, Oklahoma, Colorado and Iowa, each with an eight per cent increase registered. The four states in which decreases occurred were states in which agricultural income fell off sharply in 1952. They are South Dakota, North Dakota, Wyoming and Montana.

The Department's report showed that national per capita income is now $1,639, or about four per cent more than it was in 1951. The highest average income in any state is that of Delaware, where it is $2,260. The low is in Mississippi, where it is $818. States in which per capita income is much higher than the national average include, in addition to Delaware: Nevada, Connecticut, New York, California, Illinois and New Jersey.

FLYING THE ATLANTIC

From travel bureaus comes word that the competition between airlines, in their bid for a larger portion of the Atlantic trade, is becoming unusually keen. Not only American companies, but many foreign companies, are involved in this competition.

The latest innovation has been by K. L. M. Royal Dutch Airlines. K.L.M. is putting thirteen new aircraft into the Trans-Atlantic trade, each equipped with some of the newest gadgets to make air-crossings of the Atlantic more comfortable.

The thirteen new planes are equipped with a nine-cubic foot refrigerator, an oven which will heat sixty meals at one time, hot and cold running water, and a bar. The planes carry 59 passengers, at flying speeds up to 370 miles an hour.

Since other airlines have luxury aircraft now in operation, featuring downstairs lounges, sleeping accommodations and other luxuries, it appears that the air traffic over the Atlantic is getting into a highly competitive state. It was only a few years ago that writers discussed the coming time when passengers could board a plane in New York and enjoy an overnight sleep, after which they could be in London. That day has arrived—the sleepers, the lounges and all the comforts are now available on the trans-Atlantic run.

ANOTHER MOUNTAIN-CLIMBING RACE

Around OUR HOUSE

by Kathryn Tucker Windham

Families with children just naturally develop vocabularies all their own, sayings or expressions of the children which other members of the family use in their conversation.

For instance, bread around our house doesn't have crust, it has peelings. And you don't put strips of pastry across the top of a pie, you put straps. The pastry became straps many months ago when the six-year-old, helping to make a pie, begged:

"Please let me put on the straps to hold the apples in all by myself."

Now we have a new expression, one not so complimentary, to add to the collection. While I was preparing au gratin potatoes for supper, the four-year-old came in and asked what I was doing. I told him the name of the dish I was preparing and let him help. At suppertime, he passed his plate for a second helping and said:

"I want some more old rotten potatoes. They're good!"

I thought old-fashioned dinner bells had gone out of style until I found out that the neighbor down the street, the one with the big family, still uses one.

"Children dislike to be interrupted suddenly at their play and told to come to meals at once," she said, "so I always ring the bell fifteen minutes before mealtime to warn them to finish up whatever project they're working on and get ready to eat. That warning bell has cut out a lot of friction around our house."

This same neighbor taught me a new use for an alarm clock, too. When she and her husband went out at night, their baby sitter often had trouble getting the younger children to go to bed at the proper time.

"Mother said we could stay up later," they'd argue. Children are seldom ready to go to bed.

Now before she leaves for an evening out, she sets the alarm to ring at the youngster's bedtime. The children understand that they're to jump into bed as soon as the alarm goes off, and there're no arguments about it any more.

Our next door neighbor was down on her hands and knees crawling around on her living room floor when we stopped in the other morning, and she had a small bottle in her hands.

She looked mighty strange, but, as usual, she had a sound explanation for her actions. It seems the painters had allowed some paint to spatter on her floors when they were repainting the woodwork, and she was getting the spots up.

"The way to get this hardened paint up," she explained, "is to moisten it with nail polish remover, let it stand for a few minutes and then wash the spots with warm soapy water."

From the grim expression on her face, I'd guess that the workmen will be more careful the next time they do any painting around her house.

Cooked carrots can be a mighty unpopular dish, but our good cook neighbor cooks her carrots with apples and turns them into something special.

She slices the carrots very thin, places in a frying pan with a little melted fat, covers and cooks slowly until the carrots are almost tender. When she adds apple rings (unpeeled), sprinkes with salt and brown sugar and browns well.

YOUR Health

Blocked Ears

The sensation of a blocked ear is a common complaint, and it is not unusual to see a person poking into or rubbing the ear to obtain relief. This sensation is caused by a number of different conditions, and no amount of poking or rubbing will help. An exact diagnosis requires a complete investigation of all parts of the ear.

To hear normally, all parts of the ear must function properly. When the hearing is normal, the sound wave enters the ear canal and strikes the ear drum. The ear drum vibrates; and this, in turn, moves the three little bones, or ossicles, causing the vibration to be transmitted across the middle ear cavity to the inner ear. In the inner ear the nerve elements are stimulated, and this stimulation is converted to a nerve impulse which travels to the brain where it is interpreted as sound.

Any interference with the free condition of the sound wave will cause a loss of hearing even if the nerve elements are normal and capable of being stimulated by the sound wave. Even if the middle and inner ear are normal and the nerve of hearing undamaged, obstructions to the proper transmission of sound can occur on either side of the ear drum. These may be in the ear canal or in the eustachian tube. Any condition which interferes with the free vibration of the ear drum, no matter where the obstruction occurs, will produce a hearing loss. In order for the ear drum to vibrate freely, the air pressure on both sides of the drum must be equal. The main function of the eustachian tube is to equalize the air pressure inside the middle ear cavity with that on the outside of the ear drum.

These are a few of the causes involved to produce the sensation of blocked ears. Other factors may be infection, allergies, abnormal growth, scar tissue, certain dental defects such as an improper closing of the jaws, and an accumulation of wax. To eradicate the cause of the feeling of fullness, a complete examination is essential. Checking the source can be the means of preventing a permanent loss of hearing.

Know Your SCHOOLS

by W. J. Terry

STATE SUPERINTENDENT

MAINTENANCE AND OPERATION OF SCHOOL PLANTS

School plant maintenance includes the replacement, repairs, and general upkeep of the school plant in order that it will be comfortable, sanitary, and possess qualities essential for learning situations for the pupils. School plant operation includes daily, weekly, and monthly activities to provide heating, ventilation, sanitation, cleanliness, and attractiveness necessary to the successful operation of the school. The Division of Administration and Finance is anxious to cooperate with all school administrators in rendering assistance in organizing and carrying out a maintenance and operation program wherever needed and whenever requested.

If a good school program is to be expected and the health and lives of the children protected, it is just as essential to have a qualified person or staff designated to perform these services as it is to provide an adequate instructional staff. Modern facilities which are now being constructed for school purposes demand the expenditure of more money. The school plant usually represents a considerable investment of public funds and is provided primarily for the benefit of the children. If we fail to protect this investment, we are practicing poor economy and, at the same time, neglecting the children. It is therefore, very essential that a good program in maintenance and operation of the school plants be carried out. In recognition of these needs, the State makes an allotment through the Minimum Program for these services. Funds budgeted for these purposes should be used for such. It is recognized that the allotment is comparatively small, but this renders it all the more important that plans be made whereby the amount spent may be used to the greatest advantage possible by all school authorities. Services are also available to assist administrators in securing merchantable titles to school property, in negotiating the sale of abandoned school property, and in making insurance adjustments on school buildings.

MAN-MOVING IS JOB

Tulsa, Okla. — It took six men two hours to tear down the trailer house in which 710-pound Fred Pebley lived in order to ease the 38-year-old Kansas man from his quarters to a specially-constructed bed at the county home. It was the first time Fred had left the trailer in twelve months, as his legs cannot support his weight.

AIM TOO SHARP

Houston, Texas — Horace Boutwell, 13-year-old, fired his air rifle at a .22-calibre rifle bullet resting on a saw-horse several feet away. His aim was too good — he hit the bull of the cartridge whizzing back into his left shoulder. Horace was taken to a hospital to have the missils removed.

Background Information On G.M. & O. History

The history of the Gulf, Mobile and Ohio Railroad, written by James H. Lemly as a research project of the School of Business of Indiana University, has just been published by Richard D. Irwin, Incorporated.

Mr. Lemly, reared in Mississippi and a graduate of the University of Mississippi, wrote the book as the thesis for his Ph.D. as a business Administration at the University of Georgia.

In the foreword of the book Dean A. M. Weimer of the School of Business and Commerce of Indiana University explained that GM&O had been chosen for the project because "Few companies and no railroads had displayed such growth. Second, the transition of bankrupt short lines into a progressive, dieselized major system surely offered lessons in business enterprise for other companies. And last, but not least, James H. Lemly was available for the project."

The foreword further emphasized that no part of the research or writing was censored by any official of the company and Dean Weimer said, "I take special pride in the release of the publication as Indiana Business Study No. 36 and call attention to the fact that courage, integrity, imagination, and the common touch are still the essentials of business enterprise."

Author Lemly traces in detail the growth of the GM&O System from a 49-mile Tennessee line to the present approximate 3,000 miles. The territory with it traffic potentialities, the physical properties of the Railroad and the intricacies of the various consolidations effected in formulating the Company are described in detail.

In his acknowledgement Mr. Lemly especially recognizes the officers and the employes of the Railroad who "offered wholehearted co-operation" and recalls Mr. Tigrett's original hesitancy to allow the project because the chairman was not "sure that the history of the GM&O was worthy of special study, because it was still a new company which had not yet accomplished much."

The sale price of the book is $6.65.

Free Mouth X-Rays To Be Given At State Fair

Free mouth X-rays will be given to children above the age of nine and adults at the Alabama State Fair in Birmingham.

In the interest of better health for Alabamians the Alabama Dental Association will have a booth at the Fair for the first time this year.

Rotating teams of dentists, giving their time in the cause of public service, will be on duty while the Fair is in progress.

There will be two chairs and two complete X-ray machines. This modern equipment is being donated by the Crutcher Dental Supply Company.

The films will be partially processed at the Fair and then given to the individuals X-rayed. A letter will be written to their home-town dentist and he will complete the development of the X-rays and give the report free of charge.

Alabama is the fifth such state dental association in the United States to adopt a similal public service program.

Dr. Walter Kyle of Birmingham, chairman of Dental Health Education for the Alabama Dental Association, announced that the X-rays will be taken in Booth 15 of the Commercial Building at the State Fairgrounds in Birmingham.

The association feels that this unusual public service will considerably add the cause of dental health in Alabama.

This year's officers of the Alabama Dental Association are:

Dr. Levert Gravlee, Birmingham, Presilent; Dr. George W. Matthews, Birmingham, President Elect; Dr. M. Wilson Gaillard, Mobile, Vice-President; Dr. Frank A. Finney, Gadsden, Secretary-Treasurer; Dr. James F. Hughey, Tuscaloosa, Editor.

The association hopes that as many children and adults as possible will take advantage of this opportunity for a free mouth X-ray.

LYN CONNELLY

"ONLY married couples need apply!" No, it isn't a want ad but a requirement for participating on Mutual's newest martial-quiz program "How's the Family," broadcast from Chicago each Sunday . . . Emcee Marshall Kent selects three couples from the studio audience and scrambles them so husbands and wives compete for the prizes.

The man and woman who become finalists conclude each broadcast by acting in a two-minute skit — that could occur in their home. He or she who emotes best gets the chance to try for the $3,500 prize-laden jackpot. These humorous family incidents are based on actual events sent in by listeners who receive a gift if their story is used.

Since all husbands and wives argue and bicker, Kent has found people enjoy having a laugh on themselves which is what makes this show so popular. There was a time though when he thought his knack of making people laugh was lost. "I was working as a straight man to a comedian and was tasked by the manager of the club to substitute for him one performance when he was ill. He had a particular routine that always brought down the house and I knew it perfectly. After giving the punch line of the story, I waited confidently for the laugh but it was just dead silence—not even a smile. It continued that way for the next 22 minutes (seemed like 22 years). I was ready to quit show business when the manager told me it was all a gag to celebrate my birthday. The audience had been cued to give me only straight faces. What a feeling."

It is very fitting Kent should be host of a show dealing with questions on family life since he dislikes night clubs and believes people should entertain in the home more. A grandfather three times, you'll get quite a spiel from him if you ask "How's the Family?"

Jemison Panthers Clip Billingsley Bears: 15-0

R. B. Johnson, Sports reporter

After a see-saw, zig-zag exhibition the first half, the Jemison Panthers broke through the last half of Friday night's game to haul in Coach Jones Bears from Billingsley High by a 15 to 0 count.

Playing under the leadership of their Coach, Orville Eubanks, the J.H.S. boys showed a staunch determination to win. In spite of several costly fumbles, and misplays they set their eyes, heart and spirit towards winning this one, and a brave little team from Billingsley simply could not stop them.

Both teams played on even terms the first half, with Jemison driving for 6 first downs against Billingsley's 7. J.H.S. lost 15 yards Billingsley 20 yards through penalties. The Panthers gained a total of 80 yards by line plunging and end runs and no yardage through passing, while the Bears picked up 28 yards through the line, and completed 2 neat passes for 41 yards. Neither could strike pay dirt when in enemy territory. Thus the first half ended in a zero to zero draw.

Early in the 3rd quarter, the Bear center snapped the ball back on a fourth down, and it sailed away over the quarterback's head and on into the J.H.S. end zone for a safety, thus booting the Panthers into a 2 to 0 lead. Four minutes later, Jemison's little 135 lb fullback, Rudy Langston, took a second-down snap back, and with some clever downfield blocking by Higgins, Sanders, Hill, Gothard, Conway and Shaw, he literally ripped right through the openings for 40 yards and the coveted first touchdown for the evening.

The Billingsley Bears, aided by a 38 yard pass, then proceeded to drive down to the locals 12 yard line, but there they were stopped as cold as an icicle soaked in frost. It was at this point that Collins Martin, Blow, Sanders, Shaw, Higgins and Hill began the big push. They rammed the visitors back out of danger zone, only to lose the ball by another J.H.S. favorite fumble. Shortly after this, with Billingsley taking to the air, old Pete Gothard, popular J.H.S. left end, reached way out in the ozone and snagged the pigskin and hauled in the hay for Jemison's second T.D. The extra point was carried over by Rudy Langston.

Coach Eubanks takes his Jemison High Panthers down to Isabella High next Friday night, September 25, to tangle with Coach Wilkins' Mustangs. The following Friday night, (Oct. 2) the Clanton High team comes to Jemison. Come on folks, football season is here. Let's go.

This inexperienced young team of Jemison High is going to give you plenty of thrills, heartaches, headaches and excitement if you'll come out and support them.

Rev. Robert H. Harper
Golden Text: Galatians 3: 28.

The lesson brings to our view an institution that began in antiquity and endured well into present times, with some traces of it still found in some parts of the world—slavery. It is true that laws have been enacted to suppress slavery in all the great nations of the world. But the main force in outlawing slavery has been the gospel of Christ.

Paul was a prisoner in Rome when he was visited by a runaway slave, named Onesimus, and the property of Philemon, a Christian of Colossae. It is possible that Paul had know Onesimus when he visited in the home of Philemon. The slave desired to return to his master. And Paul sent the letter, which has found a place in the New Testament, urging Philemon to pardon Onesimus and restore him to his place in the household. Whatever money loss the master had sustained through the flight of the slave, Paul offered to pay.

It was Paul's earnest request that the master should receive the the runaway, not only as a restored servant but as a brother beloved. In the answer to that exhortation, we can find the solution to all vexed problems in the association of men today. If men can be brothers in Christ, all problems can be solved in peace and love.

Purchase Electrical Equipment Carefully

Careful study should go into the purchasing of electrical appliances, believes Stella Mitchell, API Extension home management specialist.

"Overall construction is important," says the home expert. "Examine the product to determine the rigidity of the frame and the material it is made of. Be sure the controls and interior parts are accessible and easily cleaned. Be satisfied that the appliance has the right capacity for the kind of work you want it to do."

Consider also the reliability of both the manufacturer and the dealer, continues Miss Mitchell. Know the terms of your guarantee, and be sure the equipment has been approved by the National Board of Fire Underwriters.

If you haven't seen it, in the September 18 issue of Collier's, Francis Wallace has picked Notre Dame to take the national football championship this year. He rates U. C. L. A. second and Georgia Tech third in the nation . . . Wallace picked Jack Parker of Mississippi State, Paul Cameron of U. C. L. A., Paul Giel of Minnesota, and John Lattner of Notre Dame as his on his first all-American backfield . . . Unusual praise is going to Steve Mellinger of Kentucky by all sport writers at this stage of the game. Last season he played quarterback, fullback, and end for Kentucky. This season he is slated for a halfback post. Seems he is a one-man football team . . . Lattner, mentioned above, is being picked by man sport writers as the back of the year and Bill Krietmeyer of Vanderbild the sophomore back of the year. Franklin Brooks of Georgia Tech will become the sophomore lineman of the year, the writers are predicting.

Take Care Of Timber, It's A Paying Crop

"As soon as the fall harvest is over for field crops," says I. R. Martin, API Extension forester, "farmers should begin to plan timber management jobs. Good farming of woodlands means more money added to the farm income."

Assistance in forest planning is a free service, adds the specialist. Contact county agents or district foresters of the state Division of Forestry for help in woodland management.

"These trained foresters will make recommendations on such problems as selecting areas where thinning for pulpwood is advisable, choosing and measuring trees for sawtimber, and picking out areas suitable for planting pine seedlings," continues Martin. "They will also help owners plan the location and construction of firebreaks."

Many tree fruits, small fruits, and nuts may be successfully grown in Alabama, both commercially and for home use, when given the proper care and fertilization; some form of fresh fruit may be had from early April until late fall.

Continue The Fight Against Hog Cholera

Auburn, Ala. — State veterinary authorities report that as a result of the anti-virus law in Alabama, hog cholera caused fewer losses in 1952 than in many previous years.

And to continue to hold at a minimum the losses from this number one hog killer, G. B. Phillips, API Extension animal industry specialist, offers these suggestions to hog growers.

(1) Prevent direct contact with hogs from other farms. (2) Practice rigid isolation for 30 days of all hogs added to the farm. (3) Maintain sanitary farrowing lots. (4) Burn the carcasses of all hogs found dead on the farm. (5) Treat all pigs with an approved vaccine at either two weeks before or two weeks after weaning. Retreat all breeding stock annually.

CONGRESSIONAL Quiz

Q—Will the federal government, New York State, or private companies undertake new power projects on the Niagara River?

A—The final decision has not yet been made. The House voted for development by private utilities, but Congress adjourned before the Senate could decide whether to go along. Next January, the Senate Public Works Committee will resume consideration of the bills, recommending one of the several available paths.

Q—What did the Democratic and Republican platforms last year say about public power?

A—In part, the Republicans said: "We favor greater local participation in the operation and control, and eventual local ownership, of federally-sponsored, reimbursable water projects." The Democrats advocated "the acceleration of all such resource development) projects" and extension of Roosevelt-Truman policies in this field.

Q—Does Congress conduct any business in the absence of a quorum?

A—From the galleries, it is obvious that both the House and Senate sometimes carry on their work, even pass bills, with only a few members on the floor. The houses proceed under the assumption that a quorum is present unless it is established to the contrary. However, once this is established, the rules say debate must stop and, except for motions incidental to quorum calls, the only motion that may be entertained is one for adjournment.

Q—How many public bills and joint resolutions did both houses pass and send to the President during the first session?

A—Two hundred ninety. The President signed 288 of them, making them public laws. He vetoed two public bills, one to repeal the excise tax on movie admissions and the other providing for an exception to District of Columbia zoning regulations.

New Kind of Curb Service

Looked out the window yesterday and saw young "Smiley" Jones cleaning off the windshields of cars all down the block. Made me mighty curious, so I went out to see what was up.

"Well, Mr. Marsh," he explained, "I've been helping Dad at the Service Station after school. And when I'm not busy there, I take a sponge and start shining windshields.

"Check the tires, too," Smiley went on, "to see if they need air. And I leave a note for the drivers to stop by our gas station telling them we're always glad to take care of them."

From where I sit, Smiley sets a fine example. Extra service is a good rule for any business. Our beer retailers, for example, believe in giving something extra, too. They go all out in support of the Self-Regulation Program of the Brewing Industry by keeping their places clean, bright, and orderly. They're proud to serve our community!

DALE CARNEGIE

FOUR years ago Fred H. Cousins, 854 Lee Street, Danville, Virginia, found himself driven by fear and worry to the office of his physician.

The doctor said what every good doctor says to a patient afflicted as he was. "You can't expect to get better unless you at least try to stop worrying."

But he didn't follow the doctor's advice and a few months later his worries reached their height of violence. After four sleepless nights he wondered if he could stay on his feet throughout the day. When he walked into the office the boss informed him that they had a small Government job on hand.

CARNEGIE

Fred was to make drawings in detail and send them to the regional office, where they had to be checked by several big shots. If they were approved there, they would be sent to New York, where they would be checked over by several "bigger shots." Next they would then be sent to Washington for final approval. Fred prepared the drawings and they were returned three times. He was ready to give up in desperation. Then another thought came to him, a thought that he believes has changed his entire perspective. This thought was born of something he read about worry destroying all good. He knew he had been worrying consistently. So he asked himself, "Fred, do you think that the big shots in the office at Richmond or the fellows in New York, or Washington, are staying awake nights fretting about these drawings? Or your boss, is he down in the dumps about them?" The answer was, emphatically, "NO!"

"Then why are you worrying, Fred?" he asked. "I don't know, and from now on I'm not going to worry." And he didn't.

Then he made the necessary changes in the drawings, sent them in and they were approved. He wonders now how he did the drawings at all, working under the strain and fear that he was experiencing.

"I REMEMBER" BY THE OLD TIMERS

From Corinne Hefferman Nuttle, Detroit, Michigan: I remember the story of my father, excellent marksman and hunter that he was, shooting in 1900 in the town of New Albany, Indiana, a bald eagle with a six foot wing spread. The story appeared in The New Albany Tribune and the paper made reference to it again in 1950 in a column of previous happenings in the community. My father's name was James Patrick Hefferman, known affectionately to many as James Cody.

From J. D. Biggs, Ulysses, Kansas: I remember when my grandfather (about 1878) rode a horse on his circuit in West Virginia and Pennsylvania to preach each Sunday. He received $75.00 a year. During the week he made his living by cutting wood and making charcoal.

From Mrs. Maria McNair, Pittsburgh, Pa.: I remember after the Spanish-American war, when the veterans were mustered out at Camp Meade, of visiting the camp with my father one day. It was at meal time and we were invited to eat with them. Father enjoyed the visit and talking with soldiers because he was a Civil War veteran. Spanish-American war veterans from the camp often came to our home to fill their canteens from our well.

Folks and Things ABOUT TOWN

—By Ben

Congratulations to our good friend, R. C. Williams, on his election to the Executive Committee of the State Oil Jobbers. We know R. C. will perform his duties to the credit of his home town and his friends here. Jimmie Bell and Lora Rose attended the meeting at Montgomery as guests of R. C. and Mrs. Williams and report a good time. Jimmy, you know, only recently stepped down as president of the Retail Hardware Dealers Association of the State. Both gentlemen have brought honor to their home town.

Invariably when we get one parking ticket, the next day we get another just like it. We were wondering if the darn things came in pairs. Several times recently we have found the pretty little white cards on our windshield two days running. Now if it's just the same with you policemen, and if you think we are getting more than our share, well you just go right ahead and pass them around—we ain't greedy.

The Methodist Men's Club had a big crowd at their first meeting of the season the other night at Sam Powers's home at Lay Dam. More than a hundred and fifty tickets were sold to the occasion it is reported. This was Ladies' Night, you know, and all the fellows had their "bitter half" with them.

A man called the young lady at the society desk and told her that he wanted to report the birth of twins. She didn't hear him very well, so she said: "Will you repeat that, please?" "Not if I can help it" was the man's answer.

Did you ever wonder where, why, when, and how people started drinking coffee. The coffee shop in America is just about the most popular place in town, you know. Well, this week we read in Powergrams the story of coffee and thought you would like to read it. Here 'tis:

Coffee came to the cup of man through the capers of a goat.

That, at least, is the story handed down through ten centuries from the land of the ancient Arabians. More than a thousand years ago, the story goes, an Arab goatherd noticed that his charges became uncommonly frisky whenever they munched the berries from the coffee tree. The goatherd tried them himself and found them good—starting coffee on the road to your breakfast table.

Today the world consumes about 200 billion cups of coffee each year. More than half of that cascades down the throats of Americans. The U. S. consumption is equal to nearly two cups a day for every man, woman and child in the land.

"Why won't you marry me?" asked the young suitor. "There isn't anyone else, is there?" "Oh, heavens," she cried, "there must be!"

Welcome back to Mrs. Edd Nunn. We're glad to see her back in the business life of Clanton. She's back at her old stand for Mrs. Cobb at the Smart Shop. Mrs. Nunn had lots of friends who will welcome her back.

Jemison and the rest of Chilton County really gave Sgt. Morris Price a grand welcome when he returned home last week from Korea. Of course, we can never repay Morris for the months, weeks and days he spent as a prisoner of the Reds, but we know it makes him feel mighty good to know his friends here in Chilton County appreciate what he did for them.

"RACKET" SQUADS

The Internal Revenue Bureau reports that its "racket squads" and other agents turned up tax cases that yielded $178,000,000 in additional assessments and penalties in the twelve months ending June 30. It completed 16,114 investigations during the year, most of which were alleged violations of internal revenue laws, including 3,396 cases of suspected criminal fraud.

PASSENGER CARS

There are in excess of 43,000,000 passenger automobiles licensed in the United States. This figure does not include another 750,000 owned by city, state and Federal governments, which do not show up in the license registration figures. About 75 per cent of the registered cars were built during the eight years since the end of World War II.

Bread will be whiter in color and have greater food value if milk is used.

Williams Named Director To Oil Jobbers

At a meeting last week in Montgomery of the Alabama Petroleum Jobbers, R. C. Williams, of Clanton, was named to the Executive Committee. Williams is Distributor here for the Shell Oil Company. He is also a member of the City Council, Chairman of the Board of Stewards of the Methodist Church and recently resigned after serving six years as Sunday School Superintendent.

His many friends in Chilton County are congratulating him on this newly acquired honor.

Adventists To Take Special Africa Offering

A special offering will be taken by the Seventh Day Adventist on Sept. 26th which will be given to the Church's mission hospitals there. Africa, land of disease, superstition, witch-craft and fear. The Kendu Mission Hospital is geared to take care of 70 patients. By crowding, it is possible to admit 100 patients. Still many must wait their turn.

A number of African boys have been trained and are in service in various dispensaries and hospitals.

At Luimba Hill Mission there are huts for about 80 lepers, 100 come for treatment besides. Many lepers are sent home cured every year.

Assistant General Superintendent To Speak

DR. J. O. SAVELL

This is your invitation to attend a special meeting Saturday night, September 26th. The meeting is to be at the Temple Church on Temple Road about two miles east.

We are very highly honored to have as our guest speaker the Assistant General Superintendent of the Assemblies of God movement, Dr. J. O. Savell, Springville, Mo. We think it a rare treat that Dr. Savell will take time from his many duties and visit our church for this one service.

Dr. Savell has traveled extensively throughout the nation and several foreign countries in behalf of executies duties. He is an outstanding speaker.

There will be ministers and other church congregations from Montgomery and Birmingham driving up here for this service Saturday at 7:30 p.m. Also the Alabama Assemblies of God Superintendent, Rev. T. H. Spence, will be present.

All denominations invited to attend. — Troy B. Helms, Pastor.

DIVORCED AFTER 56 YEARS

Middlebury, Vt. — Philemon J. Bristol, 81, recently was granted a divorce from his wife, Laura Precott Bristoll, 79, whom he married March 11, 1897—56 years ago. The grounds—desertion—he hadn't seen his wife in three years.

BEAUTIFUL MOTHER OF 9

Cliffside Park, N. J. — Mrs. Anne Spada, 29, a 5-foot, 2-inch, brown-eyed blonde from Whippany, was one of the finalists for the title of Mrs. New Jersey. Mrs. Spada is the mother of nine children.

NAME'S THE SAME

Los Angeles — Names are confusing things in the St. Louis Albert Estes' home. The father and all five of his sons are named St. Louis Albert Estes. The boys are distinguished one from the other by the use of first, second, third, etc., after their names.

These Are The Facts ---

Chilton County Schools Carrying Load Of 6,300 Pupils This Year

When the doors of Chilton County's twenty-six schools swung open this year a virtual flood of approximately 6,300 youngsters came pouring in for the 1953-54 term.

As evidence of the fact that our school system must be expanded rapidly, almost 700 of these students were entering school for the first time but only about 300 students will graduate next May, according to Mr. Howard Boockholdt, Superintendent of Education.

To house this vast number of students the Chilton County Board of Education operates seventeen white schools with 171 teachers and nine negro schools with 41 negro teachers. There are approximately 5,000 white students and 1,300 negro students enrolled this year.

It takes fifty-six buses traveling a total of approximately 2,500 miles daily to carry around 4,500 students to and from school.

The Board of Education's expenditures for this school year will run around $734,000 on the education of Chilton County's school-age children. More than $629,000 of this money, of which almost $552,000 is based on attendance alone, will come from the State of Alabama. The attendance allotment is based on the fact that the county receives 59½c per student, per day, from the state. For each student missing a day's schooling the county Board of Education loses 59½c.

Twenty-four of Chilton's schools operate lunchrooms which are financed, in part, by the Federal Government through the Department of Agriculture. Approximately 3,500 children take advantage of these lunches at school, bringing in a total of more than $200 per day from the Federal Government. The total lunchroom program for a year runs to around $165,000 in this county.

Howard College Extension School Now Open Here

The Howard College Extension School opened up here on September 8th, at the First Baptist Church. New additions have been added to the roll every night, and we are expecting several more to enroll within the next week or so.

You can enroll for credit by being present next Tuesday night, Sept. 29. The fourth night from the beginning of the school closes the opportunity to register for credits, but you can register any night if you are not interested in working out certificate or college credits.

There are only two periods of the school this time where heretofore there has been three periods taught. However, three courses are being offered, but the first two are taught parrellel. The school consists of two periods of about 50 minutes each.

Dr. and Mrs. J. Gilbert Hutchinson make up the faculty for the school this term. Mrs. Hutchinson teaches the Sunday School Preview and Dr. Hutchinson is teaching a course in Church Finance the first period. Dr. Hutchinson is also teaching a course from the book of Genesis the second period.

If you are not attending this school, you are missing one of the greatest opportunities of your life. Your life will not only be richer by studying the Bible, but you will be better prepared to be a better teacher yourself in that Sunday school class. Thousands are making the best of these unusual opportunities in the nearly 50 centers scattered over the state of Alabama. We are indeed fortunate to have one in Clanton. Our instructors are among the best.

The school begins at seven o'clock each Tuesday night and scarcely lasts two hours. You can rest assured that the school will begin and close on time.

(Written by one who highly appreciates what the Extension School has done, and is doing, for him.)

CCHS Band In Dire Need Of Additional Help

The C.C.H.S. Band needs your help. Help is needed from every man, woman and child that has any connection with the local high school. If you are interested in having a high school band that will represent Clanton the year round, we need your help.

The band is in desperate need of local interest that will back the members 100 percent. In the past the band has survived only on the interest of a few faithful members and their dream of a big and prosperous band.

The time has come that you are needed to build and support your band. Clanton has over 575 high school students this year. Their interest is high. They want a good band to play at all the football games. Their interest is void unless they can get your support.

How big should the band be? The band should have at least 70 members. How many members are there now? The Junior and Senior bands, including majorettes, have the strength of 38 members. How many instruments does the band own, and how many are in use? The band owns 16 instruments, which are playable and one which needs major repairs. All of the 16 instruments are in use at the present. Does the band have any way to raise money? The band has no means of raising money. Does the band receive any money from the school or county? No. Is any credit given for band? Yes, one-half unit per year. How can Clanton have a good band? Only by your support and interest in your high school.

A band booster club is being organized and will have their first meeting Tuesday evening, September 29, at 3:00 p.m. in the High School Library. Be a band booster, support your band by your presence.

There will be a meeting of the Chilton Association Brotherhood Monday, September 28th, at 7:30, at Liberty Hill Church.

TAX EVADERS

Fall Session Of Singing Convention To Be Oct. 4 & 5th

The Fall session of the Chilton County Singing Convention will meet at the courthouse in Clanton on the first Saturday night and Sunday in October which will be October 4 and 5.

The business of electing officers for the coming year will be disposed of Saturday night, so all local singers, especially, are urged to be present and help choose the officials of the convention for the next year.

Then on Sunday we are looking for our singing friends from all over the state to be with us and to have the greatest convention in the history of Chilton County. The Key Masters Quartet will attend the singing and we are sure they will be enjoyed by everyone attending.

Meet us at the courthouse on Saturday night, October 4th, and all day Sunday, October 5th, and help us to have a great time singing and enjoying gospel songs. — Marvin Lowery, Chairman.

Kiwanis To Sponsor ---

National Kids' Day Celebration Here

National Kids' Day will be observed here Saturday, September 26th, it was announced by a committee from the local Kiwanis Club who sponsor the occasion each year.

The National Kids' Day Foundation was founded in 1948 by Kiwanian Jimmy Fiddler. In 1949 Kiwanians agreed to sponsor National Kids' Day and have done so until now.

The National Foundation furnishes the publicity matter and the local Kiwanis Club put on their own projects and use the funds contributed in their home towns and counties for the less fortunate children.

The Clanton Kiwanis Club has an annual Apple Sale and on this year the sale will be held this coming Saturday.

In cooperation with the school authorities, welfare department, and County Medical Association, the fund paid for ten tonsilectomys in the county last year.

You can make your contribution to this cause by buying apples on the streets of Clanton this Saturday.

JUST WHAT THE DOCTOR ORDERED

These fine Fall days are just what the doctor ordered. Pleasant days, cool, sleepful nights, business picking up and our citizenry waking up from a hot, sluggish and quiet summer.

It's weather like this that puts pep in a man and starts the sap rising with about the same effect on you that it has on a tree in the springtime.

You'll see a little more spring in the step, a little more zip and gayety in the laughter of all of us. Remember what the poet said:

The sun, and skies, and clouds of June,
And all of June together
Cannot rival for one hour,
October's bright blue weather.

OPTIMISM IN THE SOUTH

H. McKinley Conway, Jr., director of the Southern Association of Science and Industry, reported recently that the South had added an average of one new multi-million-dollar factory for each working day over the past two years. Conway predicted if the industrial expansion in the Southern States continued at its present rate, the region would add more than 3,000 new multi-million-dollar manufacturing plants in the next decade.

In addition to these optimistic words, Conway expressed the belief that continued technical and industrial expansion in the next ten years would put the South on a par with the rest of the nation in the per capita income category. Since 1865 the South has lagged far behind the rest of the nation in per capita income.

Conway's report is encouraging to Southern business men and those interested in raising the living standard in the area which President Roosevelt described as the nation's No. 1 economic problem. Whether the next ten years will bring the progress Conway expects is by no means certain, but the record of the last two years is certainly an encouraging one.

NEW EMPLOYMENT RECORDS

The Department of Commerce reported recently that more Americans were working in August than in any other month in the nation's history. August employment reached a total of 63,408,000, unemployment declining to a post-war low of 1,240,000.

Government officials think the unemployment figure is close to the minimum possible to attain. The Commerce Department reported that, in August, less than two per cent of all civilian workers were out of jobs and, more surprising, it is reported that employment in factories, stores and other businesses had climbed from July to August.

These figures, like others recently, indicate business continues to be good despite the talk of recession. They are encouraging to business, and to the U. S. Treasury alike.

Stricter Licensing Procedures Can Cut Down On Wrecks

Stricter state licensing procedures were advocated today by Paul H. Blaisdell, public safety director of the Association of Casualty and Surety Companies, to help end the threat to public safety on the highways by mentally incompetent persons and habitual violators who are totally unfit to drive.

A survey of license revocations and suspensions in 40 states and the District of Columbia in 1952, made recently by Mr. Blaisdell, has revealed that "alarming numbers" of wholly unfit drivers and habitual law violators have been allowed to drive, he said.

They will continue to menace the safety of all motorists and pedestrains, he declared, until all states deny licenses to "moronic or mentally ill" drivers. Tests for driving licenses should be sufficiently rigid to reveal a person's unfitness to operate a vehicle safely, he added, and re-examination of all drivers periodically would disclose those who subsequently became unfit, rather than allow accidents to reveal the presence of dangerous motorists on the highways.

In less than a dozen states a total of 7,050 drivers lost their licenses because of dangerous characteristics for operating a motor behicle — unsound mind, mental or physical deficiencies, habitual drunkenness. In three of these states the number barred from the roads for one or more of these reasons exceeded 1,000. In one state the total was 2,521. As few as eight or 11 drivers lost licenses for these causes in two of the states.

These facts only begin to indicate the extent of the dangerous driver menace on the highways and how lax some states are in revoking or suspending driving licenses of mentally and physically incompetent persons who somehow managed to obtain them, according to Mr. Blaisdell. Most states do not list revocations or suspensions of driving licenses of such obviously dangerous drivers, he pointed out. The problem is not only widespread, but it is growing with the increase of mental illness in the nation. This means that every year more serious psychiatric cases will be permitted to operate motor vehicles and endanger lives on the highways unless all states take prompt action to bar mentally ill motorists from the roads.

Another phase of the unfit driver problem is the "repeater"—motorist who keeps on violating driving laws until the state licensing authority catches up with him and suspends or takes away his license. Mr. Baisdell said his study has revealed that more than 10,000 drivers lost licenses for persistent violations of speeding, driving while intoxicated, reckless driving and other charges in 16 states in 1952. In one southern state driving while intoxicated revocations ranged from 1,243 for the second offense to one for the sixth offense.

He also emhasized the contrasts in numbers of habitual violators punished from state to state. They vary from five in one of the very largest states to more than 1,400 in one of the smallest in point of population. Mr. Blaisdell declared that such contrasts bring out forcibly the urgent need for tightening up of review procedures by licensing authorities to eliminate persistent violators charged with serious driving offenses from the ranks of drivers and thus give the public greater protection from the accidents frequently caused by these dangerous motorists.

Mr. Blaisdell said the "point system," used by some states to try to improve the driving habits of motorists through education, or suspend or revoke their licenses when the total of demerits for violations reaches the "danger point," might prove helpful in making the highways safer if it is more widely adopted. He cited the report of one small state which reviewed 8,733 records under its point system in 1952. Most of these cases were disposed of by warning letters and the remainder was about equally divided between "conference" and "hearing" cases. Of its 149 suspensions, 32 were for an accumulated record, 74 for failure to notify the state of change of address, and 43 for failure to appear at conferences. A much larger state with the point system sent more than 20,000 warning letters to in-state drivers and nearly 11,000 to out-of-state drivers. In one of the largest states the point system cost nearly 1,900 bad-record drivers their licenses in 1952, through suspensions.

THIS WEEK IN Washington

Democratic Optimism—Is It Justified? Sales Tax Hassle—Ike The Traveler—

Washington, D.C. — Democratic officials have worked themselves into a state of high optimism as a result of the Chicago meeting and it isn't difficult to get them to assure you that victory in the 1954 congressional elections is in the bag. Even some of the newsmen who cover political events have succumbed to the fever.

First, the Democrats say that President Dwight Eisenhower has a dragon by the tail in Korea. They say the resignation of Martin Durkin is an indication that labor will be solidly against the Republicans next year, and third, Democrats are whooping up the four percenter scandal, which has been exposed among Republicans.

Despite this optimism, seasoned reporters are doubtful over the so-called optimistic signs in the air. Actually a good manly of them think the Democrats have very little to cheer about. For one thing, they think the truce in Korea will work to Ike's advantage, not his disadvantage.

They point to cuts in the government pay roll, to budget cuts, and to more harmony in the Republican party as facts which must be appreciated by Democrats in the next campaign. Altogether, they think Ike's administration is off to a fairly good start, and contrary to the opinion of optimistic Democrats, they look for the Republican party to make a good showing in the 1954 elections.

It is hard to say of course, whether the Democrats really have much reason to be optimistic. The Democratic party is split right now just as wide as the Republicans. They may have a few issues, but certainly there is no one issue that has the American people in an uproar—like a depression would cause.

Eisenhower seems to be immensely popular with members of both parties and he is just now starting out on a fall speaking tour which promises to win him new supporters. True, the off-year elections usually go in favor of the outs, but the results are by no means certain this early. Chances are that the President will take his program to the people via radio and television many times before the 1954 elections and it is hard to predict the effect of these reports.

It seems that the Democrats will have to have more ammunition if they are to rout the GOP next year. They could get it in the next Congress, if Congress displeases the farmer with a new farm program or if business begins to creak. But neither eventuality is certain, and only time will justify or fail to justify Democratic optimism of September, 1953.

A row is really being stirred up in Washington over Federal sales tax proposals. Of course, the President has not indicated his position of the question as this is written, but reports that the sales tax was one of the major possibilities being considered by the new administration has several Congressmen and Senators in a dither.

It's entirely possible that some Republican members of key committees in Congress will fight such a proposal, if it is made, to the bitter end. And there are indications that the end would be bitter too — in fact, a defeat for any sales tax proposal.

All the polls, or official guesses, seem to foretell a defeat for the tax if Congress is asked to enact it in 1954. For one thing, Congressmen are up for re-election next fall, and if they must enact a new tax of this kind they would prefer to do it in an off-election year.

The sales tax idea, of course, has always been unpopular on Capitol Hill for the simple reason that politicians fear the results might be their skins on election day. But the ideas have been gaining ground steadily for some years now, and is at least a possibility in the near future, even if not a probability.

The President, in the final phase, will have to make the decision whether to recommend such a tax as a means of balancing the budget or recommend some other revenue-raising measure. That is just one of the tough ones he will have to decide in the next two months.

President Dwight D. Eisenhower is going to be one of the traveling-est Presidents the country ever had. In fact, he is away from Washington so much, local reporters sometimes go for as long as a month without seeing him or getting a chance to fire a few questions at him.

Present plans for the President include quite a few winter runs to Augusta, Ga., in the next six or eight months. There, where the Masters Gold Course is located, a little White House is being completed for the Chief Executive.

Colorado is all right in the summer, but when it gets cold, the President is expected to fly South frequently. From Washington, the trip to Augusta takes only a couple of hours by plane.

Alabama Farmers Bulletin Asks: Do You Know?

In the June 15, 1952, issues of the Bulletin, we made an appeal to those who purchase and those who sell syrup in this state asking their full cooperation in not purchasing unlabeled syrup. We set out in that Bulletin, the requirements of labeling of syrup to comply with the Pure Food Law of Alabama and called attention to the fact that the practice of not labeling it had been found to be an economic cheat. Syrup which is being sold unlabeled and claimed to be either cane or sorghum was sampled by our inspectors and found by our laboratory to be mixtures of ingredients which were much cheaper than either cane or sorghum. We also call attention to the fact that practically all the unlabeled syrup which has been found was brought into Alabama by peddlers.

More than a year has elapsed since we made this appeal for cooperation against this illegal traffic in unlabeled syrup. We regret to state that to date, our inspectors continue to find a great deal of unlabeled syrup being sold. This is true in spite of the fact that our inspectors have stopped the sale in a number of instances on trucks and on the premises of dealers. They have prosecuted a number of peddlers selling unlabeled syrup in the state. We have also assisted in getting some of this syrup seized and the peddlers prosecuted by the Federal Food Authorities.

We are again appealing to the purchasers not to buy unlabeled syrup and to the dealers and all those who sell it not to purchase it in order to cooperate with us in breaking up the sale of this product in the state. Thus far, no dealer has been prosecuted for the sale of unlabeled syrup but since the dealer is jointly responsible with the manufacturer in the sale of it under the law, if the dealers do not discontinue the handling of this unlabeled syrup, it may be necessary for prosecutions to be instigated against them. We prefer to have the cooperation of all the dealers and those who sell syrup by their discontinuing to handle unlabeled products. If they will cooperate we believe this illegal traffic will stop and the public will benefit thereby.

We are repeating the minimum requirements of labeling of syrup including mixed syrups in order to comply with Alabama's Food Law. Alabama's Food Law requires that all syrup sold in containers (such as buckets, cans, bottles, etc.) must be labeled. The label must show the net contents, (either net weight or net volume), the kind, and the name and address of the maker or person or firm responsible for putting the syrup on the market. If it is a blended syrup, each ingredient in the blend must be shown on the label.

Only unmixed syrup such as cane or sorghum can be labeled bearing the name of a single ingredient. No mixed or blended syrup can be labeled or sold as cane or sorghum. Mixed or blended syrup must be labeled to show that they are mixtures and each ingredient in the mixtures must be shown on the label, as well as all the other required information, under this law.

We have been reminded by the inspector of this area that the Alabama Food and Drug Laws apply to the proper labeling of all food in package form, including "country butter."

Sincerely,
M. D. (Pete) Gilmer
Assistant Commissioner of Agriculture.

The fertility of the soil and the way the soil is managed largely determine whether a farmer succeeds or fails.

LANDS BIG FISH

Norwich, England—It took Leonard Wright, amateur fisherman with a disabled right arm, almost an hour to land a 17-pound catfish — 50 inches long and nearly 17 inches around — on a line with a breaking point of four pounds. It was the largest fish caught in the history of local angling club.

The most common causes of overweight are too much food anld too little activity.

IF YOUR kitchen towels have seen better days and you aren't quite ready to buy new ones, why not press a worn tablecloth into service? One cloth will make three or four good kitchen towels with plenty of wear in them.

Turkish towels with a worn selvage can be given a lift if you cut off the frayed edge and crochet a simple edging on them. Or, if you don't crochet, use a quick binding tape on them.

Old linen from your linen closet makes the best type of infant's clothing because it's so soft and smooth. Even dinner-sized napkins can make pretty dresses and panties for infants. Tint them a delicate pastel.

Bits of lace on linens can always be used for wonderful trimmings on blouses, jabots, collars and dickies.

Pillowcases need patching? Cut a printed flower from tablecloth or old draperies and applique over the worn places. This might also be used on worn sheets.

If shirts have collars which are too worn to turn, you can frequently make a new collar from the shirt tail and replace the worn one.

OLD HAND WITH CARS

By F. L. Rowley

THE couple that entered my garage on a cool afternoon last autumn looked around as if they expected to find a fire-snorting dragon.

I could see that they were pitifully young to elope; yet this was their obvious intention. The slim girl carried her overnight case just a bit too casually. From time to time she turned her pretty, unpainted face up to the husky broad-shouldered youth at her side for reassurance.

"We'd like to rent one of your cars," said the boy carelessly. "Bill Shipley said you might let us have one."

This put things in a different light. Bill Shipley and I were old motor rivals. I couldn't imagine why Bill would send a couple of nice kids like this over to me. Cars was my hobby—not my business. Why, I hadn't rented a car out in almost a year.

"Plan on getting spliced, do ye?" I asked innocently.

They exchanged glances. Then the young chap put a muscular arm around the girl's shoulders and turning to me with a direct look that I liked, said:

"Yes, we do. Didn't think it showed. Do we get the car?"

"On one condition," I said, walking over to the best of my three old cars, "and that is, don't go over forty-five. By the way, where ye headed?"

"Shelbyville," said the boy after hesitating a second. I believed him. Shelbyville boasted the only Justice of the Peace within eighty miles.

"Here's the key," I said a few minutes later after the car was gassed up. "Now remember, not over forty-five. Pay me when ye get back. Good luck to ye."

There were tears of gratitude in the girl's eyes as she waved from the end of the drive. There was a guilty little lump in my own throat—I hadn't exactly been on the level with them. Hoping they wouldn't hold it against me I hustled over to the telephone.

Bill Shipley answered with a growl. When he heard my voice he simmered down. It was the first time he'd given me a civil word since I had bested him in the summer road test.

"Say Mac, did two kids show up to rent one of your wrecks?"

"Yes," I replied, ignoring the crack, "and I gave them the best in the shop. Do you know them?"

"Do I know them? The husky kid is Whitey McPhail, the governor's son. I'd like to be there when the governor gets his hand on you. I sent them over to you because I know none of your old cars can reach Shelbyville in less than two days. Ha!"

"Why you—" I didn't get any further. Two well dressed men were standing at my elbow. Hanging up on Bill I turned to face them.

"This is Governor McPhail," said the shorter of the two introducing a tall gray-haired man with a worried look. "His son—"

"Yes, I know," I said looking at the clock over my workbench. "It is now one-thirty. At exactly two o'clock the car Whitey rented will run out of gas ten miles this side of Shelbyville. It's up to you gentlemen to be there."

I was eating supper in the garage when the little group returned. It seemed the Governor liked the girl and decided upon a big wedding for his son. Everyone was beaming. Even Bill Shipley had a half-smile on his usually sour face.

"It sure was clever of you to measure that gas so the car would stop when it did," said Governor McPhail opening his wallet.

"Well," I said wryly at Bill, "I'm an old hand with cars."

"Oh, we put lots of gas in the car," said the girl brightly. "We were delayed by a flat tire and some motor trouble."

And that was the first time in twenty years that I heard Bill Shipley laugh out loud. And you know in spite of myself I had to laugh too. Then, shaking our hands, Whitey McPhail invited both me and Bill to the wedding. And we're going too—in Bill's car.

From the Wichita Eagle, Wichita, Kansas: While the nation's wheat producers voted in marketing quotas by a wide margin, there was a quality of reluctance in the decision not readily reflected in the results. Many Americans living outside the country's bread basket will get the hasty impress that wheat farmers rushed indiscriminately to the federal trough. This will be an unfortunate interpretation for actually considerable soul searching to place. But under the circumstances, the wheat areas had no other choice.

It was a matter of sticking with an imperfect, frustrating machine or watching the jalopy shake itself to pieces before your eyes, taking you down with it. Given the alternatives of survival or salvation, the farmer chose to live. But it is a mark of his growing social literacy that up to and after marking his ballot he continues to wrestle with the larger philosophical question of government subsidies and regimentation.

And so the farmer has invited the government to tell him how much wheat he may raise and sell, roughly 20 per cent under his present output. He doesn't like it. Indeed, it is this unmistakable undercurrent of apology and dissatisfaction that should impress itself most cogently on the nation's political and farm leaders. They must redouble their research for a solution to the farm problem which will be morally patable to the farmers themselves.

You will notice that four of the top ten are from the Southeastern Conference . . . Two top games during October are Tennesee and Alabama on the 17th and Notre Dame and Georgia Tech on the 24th . . . Senators Want Tighter Curbs On Red Propaganda

(By Stanley James)
Washington Correspondent

Washington, D.C. — The Senate Internal Security subcommittee proposes new and tighter restrictions on the printing and distribution of pro-Communist propaganda. The Senators recommend that any organization, required to register under the Internal Security Act of 1950, should have to list all printing equipment in its possessions. They also urge that any officer of a foreign government engaged in spreading political propaganda should sign up as a foreign agent.

These proposals arise from secret hearings on "Communist Underground Printing Facilities and Illegal Propaganda." In releasing the 336-page report of these sessions for the first time, Chairman William Jenner, (Republican-Indiana) said:

"Loopholes in our security laws allow the Communist conspirators to flood the United States in peacetime with tons of propaganda and to prepare secret printing plants for continuing their propaganda activities in case of war."

Senator Herman Walker (Republican-Idaho), who conducted the hearings, said: "Many thousands of dollars must have been spent on equipment for the secret Communist printing plants and there is strong evidence that the financing was supplied, almost wholly, from Moscow and through the diplomatic agencies of the Soviet satellites."

Walker said the printing equipment ranges from linotypes and cylinder presses, offset presses and photographic equipment, to mimeograph machines and duplicating devices "hidden away for future needs," along with "huge quantities of paper and other supplies."

He added: "The evidence also shows that the impetus and direction, as well as the financing of the Communist propaganda campaign centers in the Iron Curtain embassies."

Walker said two Americans, serving as publicity men for the Polish Embassy revealed that, since the State Department ordered the Polish Information Office closed, the embassy has taken over the propaganda.

Around OUR HOUSE

by Kathryn Tucker Windham

Little boys will have accidents, skinned knees, cut fingers, bruised shanks, stumped toes and other such assorted injuries are almost routine around houses where little boys live, especially little four-year-old boys.

In the course of a month, we use an unbelievable amount of disinfectant and an astounding number of bandaids. All the bandaids aren't really necessary, but in the four-year-old world they're very important, something on the order of combat decorations, and even the slightest wound must be ceremoniously bandaged.

We reached an all-time high and the four-year-old became the envy of every pre-schooler in the neighborhood the day he proudly displayed twelve "plasters."

Since he and accidents are on such friendly terms, it startled me the other morning to hear the four-year-old shrieking and screaming after his tricycle turned over.

"My toe! My toe" he wailed between loud sobs.

"It couldn't possibly hurt that much," I said. It certainly wasn't broken, and there wasn't even a drop of blood.

"Oh," he blubbered, "but it was my finest and bravest toe."

These brisk September days when the sky is its brightest blue and the leaves have dressed for a gay farewell are perfect for picnics, especially the cooking outside kind.

Our neighbor down the street, the one with the big family, is quite an experienced picnicker, and she has passed along many suggestions for making outdoor cooking more enjoyable.

When she and her family plan to cook out, they take along with them one of the metal racks from the oven of the stove. By placing the rack on bricks or on empty tin cans, they have a steady cooking surface to hold the frying pan and the coffee pot.

They don't use a frying pan, though, not these smart picnickers. "I got so tired trying to clean up a frying pan after we'd cooked hamburgers outside in it that I promised myself never to scrub one again," this neighbor says. "So instead of using a frying pan, we spread a sheet of aluminum foil over our grill and cook the hamburgers on it.

"The meat patties cook evenly, don't stick, and when they are done, all we have to do is to throw the foil away. No washing!"

When this neighbor gets home from an outdoor hamburger cooking, her hands usually smell exactly like two big onions. Her family likes onions and more onions on their hamburgers.

She used to think this oniony smell was a disagreeable part of picnicing she could do nothing about, but our next door neighbor, who doesn't care much for picnics herself, taught her a simple way to get rid of it.

"Just wash your hands with chlorophyll tooth paste instead of with soap," she a'dvised. The odor vanished.

Unfortunately, Ring-tum Diddy can't be cooked on a sheet of aluminum foil, but it's worth washing a heavy skillet for. Try it sometimes when you cook outdoors. Here's how:

Melt about 3 tablespoons margarine in a heavy skillet. Add 2 cans undiluted tomato soup (large can of tomatoes may be substituted), 1½ teaspoons salt, 3 cups cheese (cut fine) and 4 beaten eggs. Cook over low heat, stirring constantly, until thick. Serve on buns which have been toasted.

Select Next Year's Seed Sweetpotatoes At Harvest Time

Select seed sweetpotatoes for next year's crop at harvest time to maintain good interior and exterior color of the Porto Rican variety and to reduce diseases.

"While digging the crop," explains John Bagby, API Extension horticulturist, "choose hills with three or more number one potatoes free from rot, black spots, and shriveled ends. Be sure each potato has a good copper skin color and is free of white streaks.

"Check the interior color," he continues, "by nicking or cutting off each potato about one-half inch from the end. Save only those seed with good salmon pink flesh. Handle seed carefully, and store them separately from stock which is to be sold."

DIPHTHERIA CASES DROP 43 PER CENT

Montgomery, Ala. — A ten-year drop of about 43 per cent in the reporting of Alabama diphtheria cases was announced today by the State Department of Health.

The Department said only 342 cases were reported in 1952, as compared with a 1942 total of 606. However, the 1952 total represented an increase over that for 1951. Only 301 cases were reported in 1951.

Widows And Children Get Education Lift

Montgomery, Ala. — An estimated 200 widows and children of deceased and disabled veterans are receiving an education at State institutions of higher learning and trade schools without the payment of tuition or fees, said C. C. Horton, Director of the State Department of Veterans Affairs here today. The number is expected to increase annually for many years to come, he stated.

These benefits are provided under Acts of the Legislatures of 1951 and 1951, generally cited as the "Alabama G.I. and Dependents Educational Benefit Act." In brief the law states that widows and children of persons who lost their lives in line of duty during World Wars I and II or Korea, or who die or died of service-connected disabilities within certain limiting dates; or who had 40% or more service-connected disability at time of death; or the wives and children of living veterans who have a 40% or more service-connected disability are entitled to free tuition and fees in State operated institutions of higher learning and in State trade schools.

Particulars are available through County School Superintendents or through the Alabama Department of Veterans' Affairs, which has responsibility for determining eligibility and the issuance of Certificates of Entitlement.

Gibson, Jr., Mrs. C. C. Foshee, Miss Gertrude Jones, Mrs. O. F. Wiods, Mrs. C. L. Norris, Mrs. W. B. Crowe, Jr., Miss Janice Freeland, Miss Mary Louise Wright, Mrs. Raymond Cox, Mrs. J. C. Plant Winter Legumes To Get More Cotton

Auburn, Ala. — Cotton growers should plant a winter legume in their cotton middles this fall, advises O. N. Andrews, API Extension cotton improvement specialist.

"One of the best systems to use is the two-year rotation of cotton-vetch-corn," he says. "Farmers have found that this rotation pays big dividends in increased cotton and corn yields at minimum cost."

And a 19-year test at the Sand Mountain Substation at Crossville has conclusively proved the value of winter legumes in a cotton program ads Andrews. Cotton planted on the same land year aiter year and fertilized the same as the cotton-vetch-corn rotation averaged only 1,492 pounds of seed cotton per acre. On land where vetch was planted each year in cotton middles and then followed by cotton, the yield was 1742 pounds of seed cotton per acre. In the cotton-vetch-corn rotation, per acre yields were still higher—cotton, 1,-760 pounds of seed cotton; corn, 54 bushels.

In the cotton-vetch-corn rotation, continues the specialist, a complete fertilizer is applied to the cotton—600 pounds of 8-8-8. Vetch planted in the cotton middles is fertilized with phosphate and potash. Then the vetch is turned in the spring and followed by corn, which receives no commercial fertilizer.

"Lower cotton prices this fall may tempt some growers to cut down on expenses by leaving off winter legumes," concludes Andrews. "This is a false economy because they'll come up with lower yields next year."

New Agriculture At State Fair This Year

Birmingham, Ala. — The Alabama State Fair's new $300,000 Agriculture Building will house one of the most unusual exhibits ever seen in the United States when the gigantic exposition opens a six-day run starting Monday, October 5th.

The world famous Ravca dolls portraying the seven great queens of England will highlight a brilliant coronation scene recreated in all its pomp and splendor in the new Women's Department.

The life-like replicas, hand made in Paris, represent a zenith in miniature craftsmanship seldom seen in the United States. Authentically costumed to represent the time the individual queens reigned, the exhibit will be presented on an especially built stage in the new Agriculture Building.

Jackson Soybeans Now Available, Says Jones

The newest variety of oil soybeans is the Jackson variety developed by the U. S. Department of Agriculture

Being released for the first time this year after outstanding performance records, the new variety is adapted to both central and southern soils in the state and probably to most well-drained soils in North Alabama, according to Ralph Jones, API Extension seed specialist.

This year the API Experiment Station, which has been cooperating with the Department of Agriculture in the production and release of the Jackson soybean, will have approximately 4,000 bushels of seed available to growers throughout the state. The seed will be distributed through the Alabama Crop Improvement Association

Wheat Is Good Hog Feed; Has High Protein Value

Auburn, Ala. — Wheat self-fed to pigs in drylot or on pasture is about three per cent better than corn, pound for pound or bushel for bushel.

According to G. B. Phillips, API Extension animal industry specialist, wheat is very palatable and can be used as a partial or complete replacement for corn for all classes of hogs.

"When wheat is self-fed, free choice," says the hog expert, "pigs chew the grain so thoroughly that grinding increases its value only from four to seven per cent. However, hand-fed wheat should be ground because grinding saves as much as 23 per cent of the grain."

Never hog off wheat, emphasizes Phillips. Too much is wasted.

Eastern Star Hospital Symbol Of Generosity

Montgomery, Ala. — The original Eastern Star Hospital on the grounds of the Alabama Masonic Home is a symbol of the unfailing generosity of the thousands of women in Alabama who belong to this great Masonic body

The Hospital was the idea of Mrs. Callie French who served as Grand Matron of the Eastern Star in this State during 1912-13 and was built during the administration of Sister Belle Ash and completed at a cost of approximately $10,000.

The Hospital at the Masonic Home was dedicated December 2, 1914, with Brother James A. Bilbro, Past Grand Master, acting as Master of Ceremonies. The dental clinic was established several years later and all equipment was purchased by the Order of the Eastern Star. Later the ladies glassed in the screened porch, making it ideal for children who were confined for any length of time. The project was carried out under the direction of Mrs. Nancy Sasser who was Grand Matron in 1938-39

Grand Master Joseph S. Southall expressed thanks on behalf of the 70,000 Master Masons in Alabama to the Order of Eastern Star for their contributions to the Alabama Masonic Home which continue to this day and asks all Master Masons to contribute to the Million Dollar Endowment fund now being raised for the permanent maintenance of the Institution.

Lush Pasture From Bermuda Grass Stands

Auburn, Ala. — Turn old stands of common Bermuda grass into productive areas, advises API Extension Agronomist J. C. Lowery.

"Either graze or mow the grass closely about the middle of October," explains the farm leader. "Then apply lime if needed, fertilize the area, disk, and plant a cover crop.

Reseeding crimson clover should be planted on old Bermuda sods on upland areas, he adds, and white clover on the more fertile bottomlands. Cover the clover seed with a cultipacker or roller.

"These areas will furnish some winter and spring grazing, and the clover will stimplate the growth of the Bermuda grass next spring and summer," concludes Lowery.

Chilton County Tigers Swamp Montevallo 32-0

(By HAROLD SMYER)

The Chilton County Tigers showed great improvement over the past two weeks as they romped to a 32-0 win over the Montevallo Bulldogs. The Tigers blocked and tackled harder and charged faster. Their downfield blocking, passing and pass receiving showed great improvement. Roy Mims, the Tiger triple-threat scatback, ran wild; picking up 250 yards. His 95-yard kickoff return for a TD was nothing short of sensational. But Roy was not the lone star, all of the Tigers, including substitutes, played heads up football.

The Tigers' real test will come this Friday night at 7:30, when they meet the strong undefeated Wetumpka Indians here at Clanton. Wetumpka boasts impressive wins over Prattville and Hayneville. Clanton will have to halt the running of Right-half Jimmy Graham; stop the passing of Quarterback Kenneth Blankenship; and bottle up End Paui Avant on passes and end-around runs, if they expect to stay in the ballgame.

The Tigers' greatest improvements against the Bulldogs were the fact that they did not fumble and that Littlejohn got off kickoffs usually for 52 yards. Montevallo of a long Littlejohn kickoff. The Bulldogs clipped off yardage down to the Tiger 44, then were driven back to their own 49 where they lost possession of the pigskin through downs. Mims scatted for 15 yards, then Minor passed to Curtis Baker for 21 yards. Caton failed to gain on the next play and the first half ended. Score, Tigers 12, Bulldogs 0.

Anthony again made a nice return received the opening kickoff; the Tiger line held for no gains; and the Bulldogs punted out of bounds on their own 48. Clanton drove down to the Bulldog 13, bogged down and lost possession of the ball after a fourth down incomplete pass. Galloway's running and passing advanced the ball to his own 42, where he had to punt. His punt went out of bounds on the Tiger 40. Mims gained four tor the Tigers, then Minor passed to Littlejohn for 32 yards. Mims again gained four; Littlejohn lost one; then Wayne Hardy sprinted 31 yards for a TD. The Tigers failed to convert the extra point. Anthony received Littlejohn's kickoff on his own eight and galloped to his 32 before being brought down. Galloway completed two passes to Pickett and the Bulldogs drove to the Tiger 45. Larry Minor intercepted Galloway's next pass on his own 30 and nearly got away for a TD before being run out of bounds on the Bulldog 28 yard line. Caton, Mims and Hardy gained yardage down to the two yard line, where Mims bucked over for the second score. The Bulldogs blocked Mims attempted place-kick for the extra point.

On the second half kickoff Clanton was offside and penalized five yards, but this was one time a penalty against the Tigers paid off. The Bulldogs kicked off again, this time from their own 45 instead of their own 40 and to their disappointment as Roy Mims received the kickoff on his own five yard line and went "all the way" 95 yards for a touchdown. On Mims' long, exciting run it seemed that he was trapped four or five times, but a Tiger would come up with the needed block or either Mims would spin, twist, or sidestep out of the trap. Minor failed on an attempted quarterback sneak for the extra point.

The Bulldogs received the Tiger kickoff and advanced to the Tiger 45 yard line before Hardy intercepted a Bulidog pass. Hardy, Mims and Caton picked up yardage to the Bulldog 45, then Minor lost 10 yards. Mims kicked to the Bulldog 13; the Bulldogs were driven back to their own 10 and punted. Mims received the punt on his own 45 and drove to the Bulldog 33. Mims gained 15; then Hardy gained 6. Mims gained to the four yard line and Caton scored from there. Mims kicked for the extra point. Score—Tigers 25, Bulldogs 0.

Anthony received Littlejohn's kickoff on his own 7 yard line and returned it to his own 30 yard line. The Bulldogs marched down field to the Tiger 26 yard line where the Tiger line became a stone wall and the Tigers gained possession of the ball through downs. Hardy and Mims gained ground for the Tigers up to their 42 yard line and Mims was forced to punt. Mims kicked out of bounds on the Bulldog 25 yard line. Two plays gained only one yard for the Bulldogs and Phil Sims intercepted their third down pass. Mims faded back to pass for the Tigers, found his receivers covered, and elected to run. He went around left end for a 31 yard touchdown, but the play was called back and Clanton was penalized 15 yards for clipping on the 15 yard line, putting the ball back on the 30 yard line. Mims attempted a pass, which was incomplete. Then Minor rifled a pass to Mims which was good for 30 yards and another TD. Mims kicked the extra point. The game ended after the Tigers' kickoff to the Bulldogs.

For the Tigers, Mims accounted for 250 yards; Hardy 69; Caton 34; Minor 32; Littlejohn 31; and Baker 21. For the Bulldogs, Anthony accounted for 112 yards; Galloway 56; Pickett 44; Nannini 24 and Hicks 13.

ON FOUR LANE HIGHWAYS

An investigation recently showed the accident rate on the Shirley Memorial Highway was only 25 per cent of that on another four-lane highway, which is undivided. The Shirley Memorial Highway is a divided four-lane highway leading into Virginia.

Its construction replaced an older highway, which was overly congested. The results of the survey showed that the death rate on a measured section of U. S. Highway No. 1, south of Washington, was 17.9 per cent per 100,000,000 miles. On the Shirley Highway, the death rate was only 4.4. The injury rate on U. S. No. 1 was 443 and on the divided four-lane highway only 129.

This seems to be another conclusive argument in favor of the new, divided four-lane highways. Judging from the results of this study, it is not illogical to assume that if divided four-lane highways were adopted as standard requirements on routes handling a heavy volume of traffic, the accident rate on these highways could be, perhaps, halved. This might save ten thousand lives a year, and the results would be well worth the expenditure involved. This community, and this state, should take notice of these figures.

FIRE PREVENTION WEEK

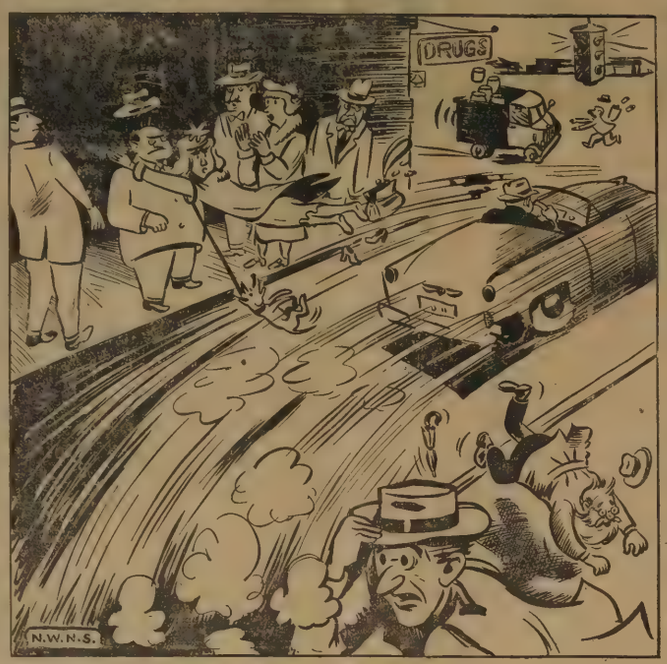
It is appropriate that the observance of National Fire Prevention Week comes in the first of October, when many people are faced with the necessity of heating their homes again after the summer months. It is during this period that many fires occur, due to faulty heating systems and unsafe furnaces and chimneys.

To call the public's attention to the danger of such tragedies, National Fire Prevention Week is set aside from October 4th through October 11th this year. Observance of this week is also intended to remind citizens of the many deaths, and huge property losses, which result each year from carelessness in the use of fire.

We urge all readers to make a resolution to exercise extreme care to prevent tragedies resulting from fires in this community. A little thought about this danger, as cold weather approaches, will pay dividends and possibly prevent unnecessary deaths.

Carefulness in the woods at this time of the year will also save many millions of dollars worth of timber, which is consumed by forest fires every year. When one realizes that several farms in the United States burn every hour, the seriousness of Fire Prevention Week will be appreciated. Too often only those who have experienced a fire appreciate the warning issued every year at about this time, and we hope readers in this community will concern themselves with this problem during Fire Prevention Week.

MAIN STREET ROULETTE . . .



YOUR Health

"Your Health" is presented by your physician as a health service of The Medical Association of the State of Alabama.

Self-Medication

Just why so many persons today succumb to the temptation of self-medication is difficult to understand, yet many continue to ignore all the warnings against the practice even though they have been brought face to face with tragedy as the result.

Someone once said that he who treats himself has a fool for a patient and even a greater fool for a doctor. How true. And yet hundreds of gullible persons succumb to the lure held out fallaciously for all sorts of patent medicines and nostrums to cover not one but numerous medical conditions.

Together with self-medication, there is self-diagnosis. How often have we heard someone relate his symptoms in great detail, only to have someone else say, "That is just exactly what I had. Let me give you the medicine that absolutely cured me."

Misguided knowledge and ignorant dissemination of advice are two sources that have contributed heavily to the toll not only of extensive damage but even death.

There is also the person who thinks if one dose of medicine is good, whether it be a pill or an extract, a double dosage will be even more effective. Some medications, if taken in overdosage, produce toxic effects and poisoning which can be serious. A physician's prescription should be refilled only when the physician so orders, and the drug itself should never be passed on to anyone else.

Some patients have a tendency to develop tolerance to drugs; that is, they require progressively increasing amounts to produce the same effect. If not properly supervised, drug addiction can develop. This is true of numerous drugs in the barbiturate family. Preparations to reduce weight are also included in this category of self-medication. Serious and frequently irreparable harm to the body and nervous system can ensue.

Modern drugs, such as the sulphonamides and the antibiotics, have contributed extensively to controlling disease; but indiscriminate use can produce as much or more damage than good. Vitamins have their vital role in maintaining good health, but only if a vitamin deficiency exists. And this knowledge cannot be determined by self-diagnosis.

Remember that you are an individual, just as is your friend. What can be one man's meat may be another's poison. It is wise to understand one's self by avoiding self-medication and self-diagnosis.

DAIL CARNEGIE

GLADYS WOLFE, 121 Nelson Avenue, Jersey City, New Jersey, says that she awoke one morning and realized that she had lost her religion. The preceding evening she had attended funeral services for her family doctor. To her he had been much more than the family doctor. He had been friend, confidant and buddy. He had succumbed at the age of 44 because he had ignored his own serious heart ailment, and had continued to work long hard hours to keep people well and healthy. Why had this wonderful man been taken, when thieves, murderers and dope peddlers walked the streets in good health? Was this the will of a good and just God? Her answer was "No!" and she turned her back to her church and to her religion.

CARNEGIE

During the days following she found it difficult to concentrate on her work. At night she lay awake pondering and worrying about her loss of faith. She felt inferior to her fellowman, and she did not wish to confide in anyone because she was ashamed of her thoughts.

Months passed without the happening of any incident to change her feelings. Then Good Friday arrived. That afternoon, for the want of something else to do, she found herself walking into church. She sat down, watched the worshippers coming and going, and presently felt herself relaxing in the quiet, serene atmosphere. As she sat there, a phrase kept running through her mind—"The Lord in wondrous ways. His miracles doth perform."

All at once she realized that she would never know a moment's peace until she stopped trying to find cold scientific answers to questions concerning matters over which she had no control.

She walked out of church that afternoon five years ago with a feeling of buoyancy that she had never before experienced.

She realizes now that religious faith satisfies a craving in mankind that no other form of self-expression can equal; that when adversity causes material things to be swept away, and friends prove to be false, religious faith is the only thing to which we can cling and find strength and solace.

EMBARRASSED CLERIC

Elmira, N. Y. — A local clergyman notified police that one of the doors of his church was missing. Police investigated and discovered the "missing" door had been opened—and the minister was unaware that it was the sliding type.

Long distance telephone calls of 25 cents and more have a 25 per cent federal excise tax. Such luxury items as furs and jewelry have only a 20 per cent excise tax.

Heaviest telephone cable used in Alabama by Southern Bell Telephone Company weighs 31.6 pounds per foot. It contains 3,030 individually insulated wires.

BLIND BOAT-BUILDER

SCHOOL PLANT PLANNING

The Division of Administration & Finance assists local superintendents and boards of education in planning long-range school building programs. If the local school officials are to meet their responsibility in providing school facilities where needed and in expending public funds wisely, the development of a master plan covering present and future school building requirements is necessary. Local superintendents and boards of education are assisted, through State survey service, in the development of master plans. Survey Staff members do field work in gathering materials. They interpret data and write reports in which recommendations are made to local school officials.

This Division renders further assistance relative to the building program by aiding in planning the educational design of individual school buildings. Local school officials are encouraged to prepare educational specifications as guides for local architects in designing buildings to house specific programs. An important function of local school officials concerning school plants is the organization of committees to study the functional plant needs of individual schools and to prepare educational specifications. The Division furnishes advisory service in this type of endeavor.

—By Ben

Thanks to the Selma Times-Journal and John VanDerveer for the splendid cooperation for our National Newspaper Week feature on page three. John, as you know, was a long-time employee of the Chilton County News, having gone to work for the newspaper when Billy Smith was the editor. We sincerely appreciate their help.

Despite the cry of the recklessness of the younger generation we know that the young folks of today are better than ever. We know ours are better than we were at their age and much smarter. If "Pop" would only admit it most of them could make the same statement.

A friend from Montgomery was telling us the other day that he listened to a speech made by Albert Rains, the Congressman who is much discussed as a candidate for Governor next year. We asked him what kind of a speech he made and he answered with: "A typical political speech. He was for everything that is good, and against everything that is bad."

Probate Judge M. D. Tingle has proclaimed the week of October 4, through the 10th as Fire Prevention Week in Chilton County and calls on everyone to cooperate in observing the week. Arson through carelessness or intentional, is a billion dollar racket and deserves the attention of each and every one of us. You, and you, and you, can help by being careful.

Next Tuesday night is Father's Night at the Clanton Elementary School Parent-Teachers Association meeting. Father is the fellow who is put on the pan if he doesn't bring home the bacon, you know. All you fathers want to make plans to be there. A big time is planned for you. And, too, you might learn something. Nowadays it's a wise father who knows as much as his children.

See where the after dinner speaker complained because there were so many rude interruptions that he couldn't hear himself speak. A voice spoke up: "Don't let it bother you. You ain't missing a thing."

With this we will call it quits: A motorist asked a farmer how far it was to the next filling station. The farmer told him it was about a mile as the crow flies. "Well," answered the motorist, "how far is it if the darn crow has to walk and carry a gasoline can?"

These Are The Facts ---

While three-quarters of a million dollars sound like a gigantic sum of money to a layman, Mr. Howard Boockholdt, County Superintendent of Education, will readily show you that it is insufficient to adequately educate Chilton's 6,300 students.

This sum of money, which comes from federal, state and local funds, must cover salaries, supplies, new buses, operation of buses, building repairs, etc. From this fact it is readily understood why the school buildings are in need of repair. When the money is insufficient to meet the expenditures, building repairing is the only item in the budget that is expendable.

Only a very small proportion of school money comes from the federal government. Federal funds pay for a small part of school lunches and also a part of salaries and travel expenses for vocational teachers. These two items bring in around $1,100 for Chilton's schools.

The majority (85.68%) of school funds come from the state since education is considered to be primarily a state function.

The four major sources of state school funds are: Sales Tax (64%), State Income Tax (17%), Tobacco Tax (9%), and State Advalorem Tax (6%). Eight other tax sources make up the rest of state school funds.

On the county-level the Board of Education has received from the past year's taxes: $1,900 from Poll Tax, $53,673 from 4-mill County-wide Tax, and $40,276 from the 3 Mill District Tax. This gives the Board more than $95,000 in funds from Chilton County.

While it is true that the majority of school funds are supplied by the State of Alabama, the county appropriations are based on last year's attendance records. With the current trend of an increased number of students each year, this puts the counties short of funds before they begin.

TO THE NEWSPAPERS OF THE NATION:

National Newspaper Week prompts us all to renew our awareness of the remarkable national service rendered daily by the newspapers of America.

Our free press does more than tell our people the history of our times. It explains that history, interprets it, and, so doing, often actually helps to create that history.

A free press and a free society are essentially one. As the press can know freedom only in a democratic state, so democracy itself is fortified by a free press.

This strengthening of our society is, or course, the antithesis of the ignoble service performed by the press of totalitarian countries. The effectiveness of a free press is virtually to be measured by the integrity, candor and responsibility of its criticism.

On this occasion I am happy to send warm greetings to the reporters, editors and publishers of our Nation's newspapers. I know — as they must themselves — that they are custodians of a majestic trust, a solemn responsibility; to help arm our people with the knowledge and understanding without which free choice, free government, free men could not be.

Employment Office Closed Sept. 30th

Due to a Congressional cut in Federal funds, the Clanton Employment Security Office were closed out September 30, it was announced today by Clair Norris, manager. The Clanton office is one of 14 in the state which are being shut down in order for the Employment Security Division of the Industrial Relations Department to come within the limits of allocated funds.

Under the Congressional slash, which affects all 48 states, Alabama gets approximately 14 per cent less this fiscal year than it had last year for administration of its employment services and unemployment compensation laws.

Beginning October 8th, claims for unemployment compensation will be taken by a representative of the Calera Employment Security Office. His schedule will be from 9:00 a.m. to 12 noon every other Thursday in the City Hall.

Mr. Norris quoted a statement by Industrial Relations Director Joe L. Coleman, Montgomery, to the effect that determination of offices to be closed was made by the Bureau of Employment Security in Washington by deleting the cost of operating such offices from the Alabama budget, and that the closing of these offices is "contrary to the wishes and the interest of this administration, but it is absolutely necessary." Mr. Norris also pointed out that the shift in claims taking schedules from weekly to every other week is another economy measure required by th budgtary reduction.

NEWS OF SOIL CONSERVATION

Leo Headley, of the Mt. Pisgah Community, is in the process of planting one hundred acres of oats and harrowing almost that much land where reseeding crimson clover is volunteering. Rescue grass is to be overseeded on all his Sericea Lespedeza. Leo states, "With Fescue, Rescue, oats and reseeding clover for winter grazing, and Sericea, Common Bermuda and a little Bahia Grass my summer grazing is taken care of. Now it looks like Kudzu would be my best bet as an insurance crop between summer and winter grazing." Leo further states, "I want to get this land in something that I won't have to plow each year, because I don't mind fertilizing if I don't have to plow and seed each year."

C. C. Carlton, Superintendent of the Chilton Area Horticultural Experiment Station, has just planted 400 pounds of Chilton White Lupine that was developed or selected for winter hardiness at the Thorsby Nursery. This legume was multiplied by C. L. CHECK YOUR HEATING SYSTEM

It's sound advice when you are reminded by your mayor to check your heating system about this time each year. Bad stoves, pipes, connections, etc., can be mighty expensive in the form of a destroyed home or place of business.

Now is the time to give your heating apparatus a check-up before the cold weather sets in. A few minutes now can pay big dividends.

CHILTON COUNTY'S FOURTH

The fourth traffic fatality of 1953 has been recorded in Chilton County. Three of the four have occurred within the past three weeks, and it is interesting to note that not one of the accidents involved more than one vehicle. Either the car or truck left the road, turned over in the middle of the highway or in the case of the small boy crushed to death by a truck.

That puts it up to carelessness mostly, doesn't it? Of course the mechanism of the machine could be at fault, but that still was a form of carelessness on the part of someone, or the machine would have been checked before it was allowed to go out on the highways.

We have read where there is no such thing as an accident. That, we are not in a position to argue, but we can argue that many, many lives could be saved each and every year if the drivers of trucks and automobiles would have a competent mechanic give their machines a thorough going over every now and then.

6. Newspaper advertising can be started or stopped overnight, can be prepared between days to meet sudden developments and to obtain immediate results.

7. Newspaper advertising enables manufacturers to check advertising results and costs in every market which they enter.

8. Newspaper advertising costs less than any other kind.

Drivers Must Learn To Take It Easy If They Want To Grow Old

Traffic Authority Outlines Safety Program

The direct relationship of "super-speeds" on the highways to rising tolls of death and injury in crashes in rural areas was outlined today by a traffic safety authority who declared "drivers must learn to take it easy on the open highway if they want to live longer."

A downward turn in the toll of accidents, now near record levels, cannot be expected until average speeds on rural highways diminish, according to Thomas N. Boate, accident prevention department manager of the Association of Casualty and Surety Companies. Deaths and injuries have increased in rural areas in direct proportion to the steady climb of speedometer needles in open highway travel in recent years, he contended.

Not until the average driver is deterred from traveling at excessive speeds because he fears loss of his driving license or severe punishment in the courts for this major offense against public safety, will a general improvement in the rural accident situation occur, Mr. Boate said. Fear of an accident has a momentary rather than a lasting effect on a driver's conduct at the wheel, and those who are normally law abiding often "go along" with the habitual speeders at paces far faster than the law allows. The resulting accidents in which speeding figures thus continue to account for at least one-third to one-half of the rural deaths and almost as large a proportion of injuries, in the opinion of this expert.

Mr. Boate called attention to the punishment meted out recently to a speeding driver in an eastern state who was sentenced to serve two and a half to five years and fined $1,000 for causing an accident in which he escaped unhurt, but cost of the lives of five persons, as the kind of punitive action which helps to deter wild drivers. The erratic driving of this motorist resulted in his car touching the bumper of another vehicle and sending it across the center island of a parkway into a head-on collision with two other cars. The guilty driver, who had been weaving in and out of traffic at high speed, was denounced by the court as "an unnatural person who should not be at large in "society" because he could "cause untold trouble to a lot of people."

Mr. Boate said he also had in mind as "adequate punishment" for speeders the action taken by another state in revoking or suspending the licenses of nearly 1,400 drivers who were found guilty in 1952 of speeding over 75 miles an hour, although the speed limit is 55. "Forthright action of this kind helps to deter the urge to speed," he declared, "but unfortunately there isn't enough of it to make a lasting impression on drivers generally and the way they act behind the wheel." He added that in 1952, according to a survey made by the Association, only about 75,000 drivers lost their licenses temporarily or permanently for speeding offenses.

"The higher the speed permitted, the higher the death rate is the way the experience generally goes," Mr. Boat declared. "The public's conscience must be fully aroused to the growing toll on the rural highways, where from seven to eight of every ten deaths occur because high speeds can't be controlled in split-second emergencies."

He cited the study of rural fatal accidents in one southwestern state "with plenty of wide open spaces" to bear out his contention that speed is by far the biggest killer of all on the open highway. Twenty-eight percent of all fatal rural accidents were head-on collisions "in which speed of definitely resulted in lack of control on the part of one or both drivers," Mr. Boate said. In 29 percent more of the fatal accidents in open country, the cars ran off the roadway, and four percent more overturned on the highway. These accidents, he added, are usually the types in which speed is the predminant factor or contributes greatly to the severity of the mishap. Eight percent more of the fatal accidents resulted from hitting a fixed object—still another type in which speed is often blamed.

"The speed limit of this state is 60 miles an hour," commented Mr. Boate. "But I am certain that the vast majority of the vehicles in these fatal accidents were going that or faster. It's no wonder that nearly 70 percent of that state's fatal accidents can be traced almost definitely to the speed factor. When drivers in that and other states learn to take it easier and are thus better prepared to keep control of their cars in a sudden emergency on the open road, fewer of them will be killed and maimed and they will cause far fewer deaths and injuries."

SCHOOL TRANSPORTATION

The School Transportation section is a part of the Division of Administration and Finance. This section was established by the State Board of Education in the year 1939 for the purpose of aiding school officials in improving school transportation in the State of Alabama. The job of transporting rural school children is an important one. During the last 25 years this service has grown tremendously and is now one of the essential parts of our public school program. Since school transportation is relatively new, it has not received as much study and attention as many other phases of public education. Consequently, administrative principles of transportation are important to the school administrator, who is likely to be charged with the responsibility of arranging transportation for boys and girls from their homes to consolidated schools.

The School Transportation section is charged with the responsibility of aiding school administrators to better understand the essentials of a sound transportation program. To bring about this understanding, this section offers assistance to local school administrators in the following areas:

Safe operation of school buses.

Planning for adequate transportation service.

Economical operation of buses.

Preventative maintenance for the school buses.

Using school buses for instructional trips.

Integration of transportation with a general school program.

Consultative service to school officials and boards of education.

From Smith's Camp, about 1 1-2 miles from Wilsonville, on the upper waters of Lake Lay, Mr. Jack Story, Jack's Hardware Shop, reports that unusual catches are being made. L. F. Harris and brother, J. T., of Birmingham, used live minnows and crawfish to boat 42 pounds of Bass and Drum. Ed and Billy Brown, W. T. and J. T. Aycock, all of Birmingham, fished a trotline and cane poles to catch 112 pounds of assorted fish.

Jeff Miller, J. O. Miller's Novelty Store, Clanton, reports: H. O. Headley, Clanton, fished the upper reaches of Jordan Lake and brought in 6 Stripes and 3 Smallmouth Bass. The largest Smallmouth weighed in at 5 pounds even. A Buck's Fluffy Tail and Reflecto Spoon combination lure was used as bait in making the catch.

Have You Ever Paused To Think What Goes Into The Making Of A Newspaper?

Ever stop to think what it takes to produce even the smallest newspaper!

Let's consider the Editor for a moment. On a small newspaper, at times, he is the adman, job printer, Linotype operator, press feeder, buyer, solicitor and perhaps the photographer. He is a Jack-of-all-trades if ever there was one. He fills in many times in numerous places.

Newspapering has become a complicated profession. The editor must be able to sense the public pulse, evaluate the news, and relay the events of the day to the reader in such a manner that he will fully understand what is taking place at home and abroad. It is his responsibility, too, to interpret the news, advise on matters of local concern and stand up for the people's rights. He must "know something about everything and everything about something"—the latter being the newspaper business.

It is his duty, also, to display the news in his publication in such a manner, typographically, as to attract the reader's eye to the more important news. At the same time, he must not overplay an unimportant event, or underplay in important happening. He weighs the news as carefully as the butcher weighs the apples, or the filling station attendant measures the gasoline. Did you ever stop to think of that?

What about the adman? Did you know that he probably spent several years learning to plan ads that would appeal to you as a reader, sell merchandise for you as an advertiser, and bring buyer and seller together? Did you know that he studied merchandising, layout, copywriting, selling—and continues to study those things—so that he can advise intelligently on advertising and can be a merchandising counselor, so to speak?

Do you realize that the reporter must be a person of broad training, with a great knowledge of many things? Did you ever stop to think of the multitude of assignments he covers? Of the complicated subjects he is called upon to report?

Sit down some day and try to write a story about a meeting you attended. For example, the city council, the medical society, the bar, the ministerial alliance, the PTA. Ever try to write up a trial, a football game, a drowning, a funeral, a fair or festival—all in the same day? That's a fair sample of the reporter's job. Oftentimes, in addition, he has to cover the police station, the city hall, the court house, the chamber of commerce—and write a feature about the biggest melon, or the smallest midget, or the newest automobile. It's fun. No doubt about that. And you meet the finest people, the worst people, the prettiest, the zaniest—all those who make life what it is. That is the reporter's job—bringing you life as it is—for he is the mirror of all that happens.

There are society reporters, police reporters, sports reporters, feature writers—each with a separate task to perform—on the larger newspapers. On the smaller publications the reporter does it all—like a one-man band.

Writing a story is one job. Getting it into print is another. Enter now the mechanics of publishing a newspaper.

That story, that ad, that headline—all must be set in type. A few, very few, newspapers still are set by hand. On those, every small letter in the newspaper is picked out individually from a type case, and set in its proper place in the columns. On most newspapers, typesetting is a mechanical chore performed by a Linotype—a machine which sets, as its name indicates, a line of type at a time. The Linotype operator, the compositor, the makeup man, the pressman—all have their jobs to do in the backshop, and all have spent years training for those jobs. Theirs is newspaper "to bed" and into the hands of the readers.

Publishing a newspaper is BIG BUSINESS...whether it be be in Podunk Hollow or New York City. No longer can a newspaper be established with a "shirttail full of type." The day of the "bedroom print-shop" passed long ago. ANY newspaper, regardless of its size, represents as great an investment as almost any business in its town. Type is very expensive. Metal is extremely high. Newsprint has skyrocketed in price. A Linotype machine alone costs thousands of dollars, to say nothing of the complicated presses. And they represent only parts of the mechanics of producing today's newspaper. For there are the melting pots, the saws, the trimmers, the strip casters, the chases, the typewriters and the thousands of little items that go to make up even the smallest plant.

This is written to encourage you to visit the newspaper plant in your home town. To see how it functions, what makes it tick—and to have a greater understanding of the job that newspaper is doing for you and your community.

"THE EDITOR"

R. M. (Ben) Tucker, who came to Clanton in 1938 and after getting the dust of Chilton County on his shoes has been unable or uninterested in shaking it off. Coming from a newspaper family he has spent most of his life in and around a weekly newspaper.

"DEVIL"

Kenneth Patterson who is the "Printer's Devil," a term given to the youngest in the shop and gets to do all the dirty work that no one else wants to do. No, seriously, the "Devil" is the apprentice and a sort of assistant to the make-up man. Ken, as he is called around the shop, has been with the News for about a year. In the above picture he is making sterotype plates.

"THE LAYOUT AND ADMAN"

Vernon P. Payne grew up at the Chilton County News office. He worked after school and on weekends around the shop until his graduation at Chilton County High School. He served two years in Uncle Sam's Navy on Guam and after being discharged came back to the ews where he has remained

"THE LINOTYPE OPERATOR"

Calvin L. (Dock) Robinson, has been with the News force for the past 12 years off and on. Dock is a native Chilton Countian and has some 17 years' experience in his trade.

"SECRETARY-BOOKKEEPER"

Mrs. Cecil (Amy) Murrah, another native Chilton Countian who has served three years at the News office. She returned to the News in March 1946 and after a year resigned to return in 1951 to her old position.

"THE MAKE-UP AND PRESSMAN"

Robert M. (Bob) Tucker, like Vernon Payne, grew up in and around the News office. After graduating at Chilton County High School he tried college for a time but soon decided he was ready to return to his work here.

Thorsby Institute News—

"They tell the story of an American traveler in the Sahara Desert in the 1920's who coveted the beautiful woven camel blanket of the Shiek guiding the Caravan. He bargained for it, and the price was fixed at twenty dollars.

The traveler pulled a twenty-dollar gold piece out of his pocket and offered it to the Shiek. The Arab regarded it suspiciously and shook his head violently. In despair, the American produced an American Express Travelers Cheque. Smiling and nodding, the Shiek immediately handed over the blanket."

This tale is told in the book, American Express, which is published in honor of the century of service given by the American Express from 1850 to 1950—of the men who built it—of the events which shaped its history—of the vital role the company plays in world travel and trade today. (The preceding quotations taken from the book, American Express).

Visitors welcome.

We were happy to receive as new members Mr. and Mrs. Charles W. Hamm of Calera. Mr. Hamm came by adult baptism and Mrs. Hamm by profession of faith. We cordially welcome them into our church.

One of the saddest exepriences in a minister's career is the time when he changes his field of labor and goes to another congregation. I have received and accepted a call to become the pastor of Trinity Lutheran Church, Anniston, Ala. We plan to move from Thorsby this Monday morning.

I would like to say, therefore, that I have thoroughly enjoyed my work in Thorsby and Chilton County. During the past several years we have made many friendships that will never die but last for years to come.

I would like to express my heartfelt gratitude to the editors of our two county papers for their kindness in granting space for our church announcements and articles. Whenever we are back through this part of the country, we will certainly stop in and visit with our friends here.

As to services at the Lutheran Church in Thorsby, they will probably be supplied out of Birmingham and Montgomery until the mission committee of the Georgia-Alabama Synod can obtain a full-time pastor.

Farewell, for now, to Chilton County and all of our friends until we meet again. — Rev. and Mrs. William Morgan.

Rev. and Mrs. Joe A. Davis and Mrs. Charlie Smith attended a BTU Mass Meeting at Liberty Hill Church last Monday night. A large crowd attended. Rev. W. D. Holladay of Plantersville brought the message.

Mr. and Mrs. Preston O'Neal and Mrs. Wood of Demopolis, Ala., spent the week end with Mr. W. M. D. O'Neal and Mr. and Mrs. Earl O'Neal and family. Mr. and Mrs. O'Neal returning to their home late Sunday afternoon and Mrs. Wood remaining for a longer visit.

The Eastern Stars of Plantersville are just about to complete their new building. This building is of block. The 'Stars' have worked hard for this building and a dedication program will be held by this chapter.

Of interest in this and adjoining communities was the marriage of Mrs. Julia Olivia Appersonand James Walter Murse of Edcouch, Texas, Wednesday morning, Sept. 23, at a quiet ceremony solemnized in the office of the Hon. Circuit Probate Judge Lee Roy James in Wallace pastor of the First Christian Church of Selma, officiated in the presence of a small assemblage of relatives and close friends.

The bride wore a suit of navy faille with white blouse and navy accessories. Her corsage was of white carnations.

Witnessing the ceremony were Mrs. Willie D Levins, Mr. and Mrs. Palmer Levins, Mrs. Prude Perry, Miss Betty Hines, Mrs. Alice Reynolds and Miss Ruth Hicks.

Mr. and Mrs. Murse will reside in Edcouch, Texas, where the groom has made his home for some years past. Both are former residents of Jones, Ala., in Autauga County.

The Pulpit Committee of the Baptist Church has invited a Ministerial student of the New Orleans Seminary to bring both messages next Sunday. These students are doing an excellent work. Hear these messages next Sunday.

The Alabama State Fair opens October 5th in Birmingham, at the fair grounds.

Mr. J. H. Burton, president and active manager of the Selma Compress Co., at Selma, died last Friday morning at 11:05 in a Selma hospital. Mr. Burton underwent surgery in Birmingham some time ago and was admitted two weeks ago to a Selma hospital.

Mr. Burton had been connected with the Selma Compress since its organization in 1928. The widely known Selmian was born in Eaton, Ga. Funeral services were held at 3:30 Sunday from the Breslin Service Chapel. Rev. Ellis Andrews and Rev. James G. Wallace officiated jointly. Burial was in New Live Oak Cemetery.

Much enthusiasm and interest was shown by the 150 people who converged on a tour sponsored by the Dallas County Home Demonstration Council, Friday, Sept. 25. This tour showed the contrast between old and new homes and churches of historical interest in North Dallas County. There are five home demonstration clubs in the north section of the county and stops were planned with each club. The tour began with the Friendship Club stopping at Harrell's Chapel where club hostesses also gave our programs directing the group to all other points of interest on the tour. Two stops were made with the Summerfield Club at the home of Mr. and Mrs. T.J. Templin and the L.E. Godwin Wholesale Grade A Dairy. Two stops were made with the Valley Creek Club at the historic Valley Creek Church and the home of Mrs. Glenn Hicks. Two stops were made with the Plantersville Club at the home of Dr. and Mrs. T.M. Martin and at the Plantersville High School.

It took six years to complete the home. Forty virgin long leaf pine trees were used in getting timbers for the four columns on the front porch. The sills were hewn from long leaf timber in virgin forest and measure 16 in. by 16 in. The joints were all mortised and pinned with heart pine pins. Nothing but heart timber was used in the entire structure. All boards and siding were dressed by hand. The carpenters were Nelson Mitchell, Massena Godwin, and others.

Two outstanding features of this home are the stairway leading from the front hall to the upper story and the fret work in the hall and two front rooms. A man trained in this work was brought from France to do the decorating. The home was built by Thomas Stanford Driskell from Virginia. He and his sons lived in the home for 65 years. Dr. Martin purchased it in 1915.

This home is of historical interest because it was used by General Wilson (Federal) as his headquarters during the Battle of Selma, in March and April of 1865. The room on the second floor above the present living room was 'Yankee Headquarters.' Because of this, the home was not burned by Wilson's Cavalry as they fought from Ebenezer Church (near Stanton) to the capture of Selma.

The Plantersville Home Demonstration Club members were hostesses to the group in the Plantersville gym at lunch. The president of the club, Mrs. C. C. Gay, Sr., and the decorating committee, Mrs. Henry Houston, Mrs. John T. O'Neal, Mrs. Prude Perry, Mrs. W. D. Holladay and Mrs. Shewbart were responsible for the decorations. These decorations were unique, colorful and realistic.

After lunch a short business session was held. Mrs. James E. Jones read a memorial tribute to Mrs. C. E. Shuptrine, who was an outstanding member of the Safford Home Demonstration Club, sponsor of the Safford Community Club and a leader of the Dallas County Farm Bureau.

An impressive candle-lighting installation service was used to install the 1954 Home Demonstration Council officers.

Mr. Houston Cummings, principal of Dallas County High School, welcomed the group to Plantersville and expressed pleasure of the Plantersville faculty and the community in having the opportunity of being hostesses for the group of home demonstration women and guests. Mr. Cumings invited this group to tour the high school building which has been recently renovated, the school lunch room and the vocation buildings. The Dallas County faculty and Decorating Committee were invited guests for lunch. From Plantersville the tour preceeded through the Burnsville Community stopping at the homes of Mrs. Henry King, Mrs. B. W. Duke, Mrs. J. C. Brady, Mrs. Ralph Pugh, and Mrs. J. C. Long. Mrs. C. C. Gay, Sr., wishes to take this opportunity to thank each and everyone that helped make this day a success.

Mrs. Erin Durbin Barnes of Vida announces the engagement and approaching marriage of her daughter, Ruby Durbin, to S-Sgt. Marvin Parker, USAF at Selma, son of the late Mr. and Mrs. C. M. Parker of Winston Salem, N. C.

The bride-elect is the daughter of the late Bunyon Durbin of Vida. She was graduated from the Billingsley High School and is now employed by the Southern Bell Telephone & Telegraph Co. in Selma.

Sgt. Parker has served for four years with the Air Force in Germany. At present he is stationed at Craig Air Force Base.

The wedding will be solemnized at 4 p.m. on the afternoon of Saturday, October 10th, at the Base Chapel. While no formal invitations are being issued, all friends of the couple are invited to attend.

JEMISON NEWS

(By MRS. GEORGE NAISH)

October—

O, sun and skies and clouds of June, and flowers of June together,
Ye cannot rival for one hour October's bright blue weather.

by Helen Hunt Jackson

Autumn days are glorius, with colorings so bold,
When nature with artistic touch, turns leaves to red and goid.
The magic of the wooded trails and fields of golden rod,
Acclaim in scenic splendor, the omnipotence of God.

by Lloyd Rime

Swiftly time has brought us to the beautiful month of October. The month for corn stalks, golden fruit and fields of cotton. The days of Indian Summer, when nature has put on a colorful garb.

The birds begin to fly South to winter quarters, the animals of the forth prepare their homes for the cold weather. The housewives have and in a supply of canned and dried fruits and vegetables for the table during the long winter days.

We are reminded of the blessings that are ours in a free country, while in many places across the sea there is great suffering and heartache. When we look into the past we see that many sacrifices were made that these blessings might be ours. We realize that our fore fathers thought of the future and so planned and worked that freedom might be ours.

May we look to the future and plan that we may help those who are to follow in our path.

Columbus Day—

Columbus gained a golden place in modern history
Because he had the courage to explore beyond the sea.
He braved the water and the wind to prove the world was round
And when he landed on these shores he knelt and kissed the ground.
He found a new and brighter world in which to work and pray
And that is why we honor him and celebrate today."

James J. Metcalf

Why do we call the Twelth of October Columbus Day? Because it was on that day in 1492 that Columbus discovered America and landed on a little island he christened San Salvadore, a place we now know as Watling Islands. Columbus believed he was on his way to India and by so doing he would prove the earth round. He died believing he had landed on the coast of India. The world knows he was a brave man and people in America especially.

Mrs. Marvin Dawson, president, called the meeting to order. The club collect was read in unison as a prayer. Members responded to roll call by giving the name of a contemporary author. POPLAR SPRINGS NEWS

Our attendance was better for Sunday School and worship service. We had a real good Sunday School lesson. Also, we had a great message from God's word by our pastor.

We really appreciate every visitor coming to our service last Sunday night. There were too many to list all of their names. To each one, we want to say, we were so happy to have you. And especially do we thank the Boone Family Quartet from Montgomery and the Rythmets from Liberty for coming and rendering us many good songs. We are sure every one present enjoyed their singing. We do hope they will come back again. The worship service Sunday night was so good, and yet it was sad, for it was the last service with Bro. Cook as pastor. The good message he brought from John 3:16, was used as his closing message. It was also the same text he used when he preached his first sermon in our church. God only knows the blessings he and his family have been to our homes, our church, and our community. We can never thank God enough for the many blessings that have been ours to have had him for our humble pastor for these years. May God ever bless and guide them.

Our WMS will meet with Mrs. Willie Minor Thursday afternoon at one o'clock. We hope every lady who possibly can will be present.

Be sure to come to prayer service each Wednesday night.

Our new Sunday School and the Training Union Officers will begin their new year's work next Sunday. Please, every one who can, come and let us start off the new church year to do greater things for God's glory.

Next second Sunday will be our regular worship service. Bro. W. S. Cox will begin his work then as our pastor. So, may we all pray for him, that he will lead us out to do greater things for our dear Savior. And may we all fill our places in service each time the church doors are opened.

Mr. and Mrs. Jerrell Miller and children and Mr. and Mrs. Dock Hilyer attended the birtday dinner at Mrs. Mary Ann Hilyer's Sunday.

CONGRESSIONAL Quiz

Q—The Democratic Congressman from my district told me the other day that the Republicans are undermining Civil Service by taking away job protection and opening positions to patronage appointments by calling them "policy-making jobs." How many federal jobs have lost tenure protection in this way?

A—From April 1, when President Eisenhower ordered the transfer of some jobs from protected to unprotected status, until Aug. 28, a total of 527 positions were placed in Schedule C—the policy-making category. The Civil Service Commission rejected 627 additional requests for transfer.

Q—Sen. John M. Butler (R. Md.) complained recently that veterans of the armed forces are not getting the employment breaks they should in the federal government. What proportion of federal civilian employees are veterans?

A—Latest figures (for March) show that 48 per cent of the federal government's civilian employees throughout the world are veterans. In the continental U. S., 1,072,412 male veterans work for the government, constituting 61 per cent of the domestic federal payroll. In addition, 47,772 women employees—eight per cent of all women in federal service—enjoy veterans' status, either as veterans themselves or as wives or widows of veterans.

A—Secretary of State John Foster Dulles and Secretary of Commerce Sinclair Weeks (both Republicans), each served less than a year in the Senate under appointments to seats vacated in mid-term. Dulles represented New York, Weeks Massachusetts.

Q—What happens to fields prepared for wheat seeding before acreage allotments and marketing quotas were put into effect?

A—Wheat farmers in designated areas may apply for permission to plant winter wheat in excess of their allotments provided they do not let it mature, but instead use it for pasture, hay, silage, or cover crop purposes to combat wind erosion.

Folks and Things ABOUT TOWN

—By Ben

The Fifth Annual Bazaar and Dinner at the Clanton Methodist Church will be held on November 10th. We understand serving methods will be changed this year and instead of having to wait in line as is invariably the situation on this occasion, dinner will be served by pretty waitresses. Oh Boy!

Run into Dr. S. J. Ezell down at Mullins & Scott the other afternoon and sold him a suit of clothes. Dr. Ezell is looking fine and as full of life as ever. We don't suppose Clanton and Chilton County has ever lost a citizen who had more friends or was more welcome back when he returns than Dr. Ezell.

Funny thing about competition. Last week when the new and beautiful Jitney-Jungle Store operated by Jack Mims opened it's doors it was packed and jammed all the time through Saturday night. Over on the other corner the A & P Tea Company was just as packed and jammed and we doubt so far as competition was concerned could tell the Jitney-Jungle had held their opening. What we are trying to show you is that competition, if it is clean competition, never hurts anyone. It just makes more business for everybody.

We have heard many times compliments on our C.C.H.S. Band and think it deserves better backing than it's getting. Seems to us that what it needs is volumn and if the students would join in and help Lamarr DeLoach would give the school as good a band as it has ever had. Anyway, we want to congratulate Lamarr on the fine showing his band is making this year and hope the students decide to cooperate and "jine-up."

While we're talking about the high school we got to compliment whoever is responsible for the new fence around the athletic field. It certainly is an improvement over the old wooden fence and adds lots to the appearance of the field.

The teacher asked the little boy if she gave him two apples would he give the little one or the big one to his brother. "Do you mean my little brother or my big brother," the little boy asked.

Green Peppers Add Color And Nutrients To Meals

Green peppers contain generous amounts of vitamins A and C—and they also furnish plenty of color and flavor in family meals.

Dorothy Overby, API Extension consumer education specialist, adds —"One medium-sized green pepper furnishes more than the daily requirement of Vitamin C. And it also provides small amounts of riboflavin, thiamine, and niacin, as well as some calcium, iron, and phosphorus.

"When buying peppers, look for those with a bright, shiny surface that are firm, mature, and well-shaped. Try them in salads, sandwich fillings, and relishes. Stuffed peppers make an excellent dish that's popular with many people as a luncheon or supper meal."

In Alabama, forest industries produce more dollar income each year than any other industries except steel and textiles.

DECREASE REPORTED IN TRAFFIC TOLL

Montgomery, Ala. — Alabama's 1953 reported traffic toll stood last week at 523, State Public Safety Director L. B. Sullivan said, 15 less than the score for the identical period during 1952.

Sullivan said the 1953 figures were incomplete in that they did not contain urban traffic fatalities of August and early September.

(The Alabama Safety Council said no Alabama city complies with a state law requiring reporting of traffic accidents to the state. This practice delays counting of cities' traffic fatilities by several months.)

Through July, Sullivan said, urban traffic deaths were 12 higher this year than during the first seven months of 1952—82 this year, 70 last year. Rural fatalities during the same period were off 21—417 this year, 438 last year.

NOT SO FUNNY

Gastonia, N. C. — A car, carrying two men and a woman, rushed up to the emergency entrance of a local hospital and the men rushed in to announce, "We've got a woman here who's going to have a baby." Nurses hurriedly prepared the delivery room but when the woman was wheeled in, there was not the slightest sign of a baby. The three were arrested on drunkenness charges.

Salt is one of the essential minerals most likely to be lacking in the diet of grass-eating animals; heavy milking cows need more salt than other animals to compensate for salt lost in perspiration and in milk.

Clanton Kiwanis Elect Officers

Members of the Clanton Kiwanis Club elected officers for the coming year at their regular weekly meeting last Thursday night.

B. N. Studdard, who has served as vice-president for the past year was elected president for the next term. Sam Powers was elected Activity vice-president and Reedie Taylor was elected Program Vice-President.

Other officers elected were Board of Directors: J. D. Bell, Douglas Bullington, Clint Carlisle, C. C. Carlton, Dewey Crew, Dubb Huddleston and Buddy Willingham.

The above officers will select a secretary at a later date. The new officers take office January 1, 1954.

Before Heifers Freshen Put Them With Milk Herd

Auburn, Ala. — Now's the time to pay special attention to dairy heifers that will freshen this fall.

"At least a month before freshening," says John Parrish, API Extension dairyman, "put heifers with the milking herd so they will get used to the management practices and to the stanchions. Brush them daily, and rub udders and teats lightly so animals won't be nervous when the milking machine is attached."

Parrish adds that for two or three weeks before freshening, heifers should have a bulky feeding ration, including plenty of hay, to keep udders from swelling and becoming unduly subject to injury.

Scanning the News

WHEN congress reconvenes in January the American people will begin to hear a great deal about small business and small business problems.

A recent survey by Congressional Quarterly of federal economists and organizations representing small businessmen reveals that nine of every 10 U. S. firms fall into the small business category. Studies are now underway of small business problems and will, largely, sound out reaction to recently announced plans of the Small Business Administration.

A new plan of financial aid, just launched, has stirred controversy among lobbies representing small business. Under this plan, maximum emphasis will be placed on private, local lending sources in supplying loans to small firms.

One school of thought among small business lobbies regards this as merely "delaying action" in working out a truly effective policy for helping small enterprise. But another says it is the only real answer to small firms' credit needs, Congressional Quarterly reports.

Among critics of SBA is the small business group which claims the largest direct individual membership (100,000), the National Federation of Independent Business. But another powerful small business group, the Smaller Business Association of New England, favors the SBA and its program.

America's independent businessman may be small, but he packs a big wallop when it comes to influencing legislation. Today, more than a dozen pressure groups are active on Capitol Hill in the interest of small business.

Much will be heard about them and small business shortly after January 1.

● Contrary to what administration spokesmen say, the attack on the Republican farm policy by the Democrats has built a fire under a number of GOP senators and policy makers. They are troubled about criticism from farm sources rather than the Democrats.

In this connection, it is interesting to note that Secretary of Agriculture Benson reports, after a conference with President Eisenhower, that the administration would be ready with a new farm program when congress reconvenes in January.

This, in itself, is sufficient proof that the administration is concerned over the growing farm problem and realizes a solution cannot longer be delayed.

Benson told newsmen that charges by Democrats that the Eisenhower administration is running out on 1952 campaign pledges to the farmers are "ridiculous" and were made by "irresponsible individuals". The irresponsible persons in this case, although Mr. Benson did not name them, are former Secretary of Agriculture Charles F. Brannan and Governor G. Mennen Williams of Michigan.

ANOTHER SALUTE TO NATIONAL NEWSPAPER WEEK OCT. 1-8

TELFAIR J. MASHBURN, JR., Bay Minette, Alabama, Department Commander, Veterans of Foreign Wars of the United States.

Montgomery, Ala. — Another Salute to National Newspaper Week (Oct. 1-8) was given today by Telfair J. Mashburn, Jr., State V.F.W. Commander, who voiced his department's sentiments in collaboration with a National Salute given earlier by Commander-in-Chief Wayne E. Richards of the Veterans of Foreign Wars of the United States.

Commander Richard's Salute to the Press of America appears in a full page paid advertisement of the October 3 edition of Editor and Publisher and reads in part: "On the Occasion of the observance of Newspaper Week, it is indeed appropriate that the oldest of the nation's veteran organizations extend to the press of America its sincerest felicitations. We salute the publishers, editors, reporters, artists, photographers, linotype operators, pressmen and newsboys who keep before the people of our land a daily reminder of the inherited freedom of expression. This reminder serves to sustain our other freedoms intact. And we know that without a free press we should not enjoy the other freedoms."

"We of Alabama's V.F.W. are cognizant and appreciative of the constant battle waged by the Press to uphold and protect the freedoms for which we fought, Mashburn added, "The newspapers of our state are to be commended on the patriotic manner in which they unselfishly strive to keep our people abreast of world events," he concluded.

PLEA BACKFIRES

Erwin, N. C. — David Avery was one of the Hartnett county grand jury which successfully plead for the employment of additional rural policemen by the county. One of the first jobs of the increased force was to pounce on Avery as the farmer tended two 400-gallon stills. He was charged with illegally manufacturing liquor.

LAST DAY TO BUY AUTOMOBILE TAG OCTOBER 15th

The last day for you to buy your automobile tag without penalty will be October 15th, according to Probate Judge M. D. Tingle. This announcement was made Monday morning and corrects a statement made last week that the last day to make payment of your automobile tag license would be November 15th.

To date sale of the 1954 automobile tag has been heavy, according to clerks at the probate office, and Judge Tingle urges everyone to make their purchase before the final date which is October 15th, so that no penalty will be incurred.

TIME TO ORDER FOREST TREE SEEDLINGS

Montgomery, Ala. — State Forester J. M. Stauffer announced here today that it is time to order forest tree seedlings for planting this winter.

Stauffer said seedlings available include loblolly, longleaf and slash pine, catalpa, black walnut, and yellow poplar. All species except loblolly, longleaf and slash pine will be in short supply.

Seedlings this year will cost $3 per thousand, f.o.b., from one of three State nurseries located at Auburn, Autaugaville and Atmore. Orders should be directed to the State Forester, 1029 Houston Street, Montgomery, on forms available from the County Forest Ranger, District Forester, Cooperative Management Forester or from the State Forester.

The shipping season for seedlings usually begins about December 1 and ends February 15.

Stauffer said planting seedlings is one of the most valuable means a landowner can use to reclaim eroded and unusued land. Concerted planting of forest trees in the past few years has helped greatly in bringing back Alabama forests, controlling erosion and benefitting wildlife.

Three negro men were jailed Saturday night and charged with robbery, according to Sheriff J. Luther Kendrick. The negroes were Felix Dickerson, Dick Dickerson and Mart Nixon. They are alleged to have robbed Jacob Craig, but all three deny guilt in the charges.

The Sheriff's office also reports eight jailed on drunkenness charges and for fighting. Reports from that office indicate a very busy week end for the Sheriff and his deputies.

STATE PARKS GO ON REVIEW AT ALABAMA STATE FAIR

Birmingham, Ala. — Alabama's wildlife, forests, seafoods and state parks go on review when the 1953 Alabama State Fair opens here October 5th.

One of the largest exhibits at the fair is presented annually by the Alabama Department of Conservation as a means of acquainting the public with the conservation program in the State. Wildlife exhibits show most of Alabama's native game animals and birds, the four poisonous snakes of the State, waterfowl, furbearers and several species of game fish.

This year, for the first time, a live seafoods exhibit will show shrimp, oysters, and crabs as they grow in the Gulf of Mexico, where Alabama's seafoods industry flourishes in two coastal counties.

A forestry exhibit will show the effects of fire on our woods, the benefits to be had by good forest management and many other important points prominent in Alabama's forest conservation.

Model state parks and a miniature public fishing lake will demonstrate to the public the types of recreation provided through Alabama's parks system and public fishing lakes program.

Undefeated Tiger Team Ties Wetumpka Indians 7 To 7

(By HAROLD SMYER)

The Clanton Tigers, at least a two touchdown underdog, were lucky last Friday night and tied the strong Wetumpka Indians' eleven. "Quick-kick" Wetumpka went home a very sad team. Captain Wayne Hardy's 62 yard punt return will long be remembered.

The Tigers play the Columbiana Wildcats here at Clanton Friday night at 7:30. The largest crowd thus far this season is expected to attend.

The game started Friday night with Wetumpka receiving Clanton's kick-off. Johnston returned the kick-off 17 yards to his 32. The Tiger line held and forced Maddox to punt. His wobbly kick went out of bounds on the Tiger 47. Three runs ended with a loss of one yard and Mims punted to the Indians 16. Graham took off for a 43 yard punt return to the Tiger 41. Johnston failed to gain; then Graham picked up three yards. Blankenship then passed to Avant for a first down on the Tiger 23. Johnston gained two; Boyett five; and Blankenship's pass to Avant went incomplete. Nelson intercepted the next pass on his 13 and was tackled on the 15. Curtis Baker went around end for 18 yards. On two running plays Mims gained to the 41 yard line. Littlejohn lost two yards on an end-around play and Mims punted 40 yards and out of bounds on the Indian 21 yard line. Graham, Schroeder and Johnston failed to gain enough for a first down, and Maddox punted to the Tiger 39. Three plays failed to make any net gain for the Tigers and Mims punted to the Indian 30 where Graham received and ran back to his 47. Maddox punted to the Tiger 7 yard line after three plays gained only 5 yards. Mims returned the punt to his 15 and Wetumpka was penalized 15 yards, putting the ball on the Tiger 30. Mims gained two yards, then Baker gained six. The next play was costly as the Tigers attempted a pass from their own 38 with it being their third down and two yards for a first down. The pass went incomplete and Mims got off a poor kick which went out of bounds on the Indian 42 yard line. Schroeder, Blankenship and Graham made a march of 58 yards to score; Schroeder scoring from the two yard line. Blankenship passed to Avant in the right flat for the extra point. Score, Indians 7, Tigers 0.

Mims received Maddox's kick-off on his 10 and juggled the ball up field, fumbled, and Caton of the Tigers recovered the fumble on the 28 Eubanks intercepted Minor's first down pass on the 32 and ran it to the Tiger 21. Blankenship passed to Johnston for 4 yards, but could not complete his next three passes and Clanton gained possession of the pigskin on their 17. Baker gained two yards on the end-around play and Mims passed to Littlejohn for 8 yards as the first half ended.

Clanton received the second half kick-off and could not make a first down and punted out of bounds on the Wetumpka 25. Wetumpka made a first down and drove to their 49 before punting. Mims made a 13 yard return of the punt to his 30. Caton failed to gain; Littlejohn gained two; then Mims passed to Minor for six yards. Next Mims punted 48 yards out of bounds on the Indian 15. The Indians gained to their 34 where Blankenship fumbled a hand-off and Obra Wilson recovered for the Tigers. Minor passed to Mims for 21 yards to the 14 yard line. Hardy failed to gain; Caton gained two; Mims gained 4 to the Indian eight yard line. Mims fourth down pass to Littlejohn was incomplete and the Indians took over. The Indians gained to their 28 where on third down they shifted into short punt formation and quick-kicked. The ball went over Mims' head and bounced to the Tiger 33 yard line, but on the last bounce the ball went backwards into the arms of Hardy on the 38 yard line. Hardy, a speedy 185-pound fullback, took off to the sideline and with the aid of a beautiful key block by a Tiger, sprinted 62 yards into the end zone. Hardy went untouched except for Blankenship diving for his flying heels on the 20-yard line. Mims went around right end to score the extra point which tied the score, 7 to 7.

Littlejohn's kick-off went over the goal line and the ball was put in play on the 20. The Indians drove down to the Tiger 33 yard line where the passing of Maddox failed and the Tigers gained possession through downs. Mims passed to Caton for 25 yards; Littlejohn gained two; Minor passed to Mims for 7 yards; Minor passed to Littlejohn for 14 yards and it looked as if the Tigers were going to break the tied score. Caton gained 4 yards to the Indian 15 yard line where two passes went incomplete and the Indians took over. After making one first down the Indians threw a long pass which was intercepted by Minor on the Tiger 37 yard line and returned three yards as the game ended.

For the Indians, Graham accounted for 85 yards; Johnston 77; Schroeder 57; Maddox 34; Matthews 31; Blankenship 29; Avant 21; Boyett 11; and Eubanks 11.

For the Tigers, Mims accounted for 87 yards; Hardy 59; Baker 32; Caton 31; Littlejohn 22; Minor 9; and Nelson 2. Hardy played the entire game with a broken right hand.

Government Says Chilton Needs $3,162,000 To Spend For Educational Buildings And Equipment

While the above sum may sound like a fantastic sum of money, it's the figure the Federal Government estimates that Chilton County's Board of Education must spend to bring it's educational buildings and equipment up to today's standards.

As is the case in nearly every county in Alabama, education has progressed faster than its needed facilities. This is brought about by the lack of appropriated funds for schools.

One of the most hindering factors in Cilton County according to Mr. Howard Boockholdt, Superintendent of Education, is the shortage of adequate space.

Not only is this shortage evidenced in classrooms, but in other desirable space that goes to make up the facilities needed in a good educational program.

At present, the county is in serious need of 23 additional classrooms to carry on its educational program. In addition to these regular classrooms, 15 additional rooms are needed for special use, such as music, band, shops, etc. A conservative figure on the cost of construction of desirable classrooms is $7,000 per classroom. The special rooms mentioned will average $5,000 each.

A gymnasium or playroom has come to be considered as almost essential to a full-rounded school program. Although many of our schools are considered too small for much outlay for this purpose, at least 6 such buildings are needed today. These would cost around $50,000 each.

Auditoriums play an important role in the total school program. At least 4 auditoriums in addition to the playrooms are needed today in the Chilton County Schools. These will cost from $50,000 to $75,000 each.

New and enlarged vocational buildings are badly needed in 4 of our high school centers. To obtain desirable vocational departments in these schools would require an expenditure of around $180,000.

Modern day living calls for sanitary toilet facilities. The health and welfare of our entire population is dependent upon the sanitation of the schools. This year, approximately 1760 pupils are attending 17 schools that must rely on the old-fashioned pit toilets for sanitation. In many cases, these are in bad condition.

These needs listed here are basic needs, and do not represent what may be termed "frills." These are essential to the proper operation of schools.

NATIONAL NEWSPAPER WEEK

The first week in October is being observed as National Newspaper Week this year. It is not necessary to tell our readers how much newspapers have meant to the people of the United States since the founding of the Colonies.

One of the main reasons the average American is better informed on domestic and international question than his counterpart in foreign countries is because of freedom of the press, and objectivity, observed in the United States. While our newspapers contain editorial opinions, in the news columns they print an unbiased and non-partisan account of the major news events. As long as the newspaper reader can follow events accurately in the news columns, he is able to come to his own decisions and may, or may not, agree with the opinions expressed on the editorial pages.

It is interesting to note that even though various new media have brought the news to many American families, the newspaper remains the primary source of news and provides readers a permanent record which may be kept as a source of reference. It is also interesting to note that newspaper advertising and general growth has continued, even as radio and television have taken their places in the presentation of news.

It has often been said that the people in any area are only as informed as the newspaper, or newspapers, which serve them. In our country the press has the obligation to print informative and accurate news, impartially. This newspaper has, and will continue, to discharge this obligation properly and invites all readers to submit their thoughts, or news items, for inclusion in these pages.

CHIVALRY'S REWARD

Gilbert Taylor, an English painter, recently saw a girl's raincoat blown from the parapet of a suspension bridge on which he was working. The coat had landed in some of the stone structure of the bridge and, as Taylor reached for it, he lost his balance and fell 100 feet to the ground.

Taylor landed on his feet, although he barely missed several trees and sharp rocks in falling. Despite his fall, chivalry survived, and the painter suffered only two broken ribs and shock. His escape is miraculous, in view of the fact that he fell from a height comparable to that of a ten-story building.

The moral of this story is that a gentleman can go to almost any extreme in pursuing the almost-discontinued custom of chivalry, seldom suffering serious adverse effects.

GI's REFUSING REPATRIATION

The average American should not be disturbed by reports from Korea that 23 Americans have refused to be repatriated to the United States, having been converted to Communism.

It must be taken into consideration that the lives of some of the reported Communist converts may not have been what they should have been. Personal problems sometimes outweigh other considerations and it is possible that some of these men are not eager to return to the United States for personal reasons. Whatever the cause, however, the fact the Communists have managed to convert only twenty-three Americans to Communism, in spite of their great effort and exertion to achieve better results, is encouraging.

We predict, moreover, that some of these men will change their minds in the coming years and seek to enter the United States once again.

Around OUR HOUSE

by Kathryn Tucker Windham

It had been an unusually busy week around our house. Fact is, most weeks seem to be unusually busy ones! Anyhow, it seems I had neglected my baking duties entirely.

The four-year-old came in from play to fortify himself sufficiently to fight off another 500 Indians before dinner time. He looked in the cooky jar. It was empty. He lifted the cake cover. Not a crumb was there.

"Mother," he said in a disappointed tone, "I can't find any cookies or any cake."

"We don't have any," I answered.

"Well," he said reproachfully, "I thought all mothers were supposed to keep lots of cookies and cake all the time for their little boys. Isn't that what mothers are for?"

Less than an hour later, the cooky jar was full again and there was a cake baking in the oven. I don't want to lose my job!

As I've mentioned before, our next door neighbr seldom throws anything away. She can find a practical use for almost anything.

The other morning when I stopped by, she had a stack of old scratched and wornout phonograph records on the kitchen table. Some of the records she was going to save to use for holding the cakes she bakes for cake sales, and the rest of them she was going to turn into flower pots!

She had been baking pies, and although her oven was off, it was still hot. Into her hot oven she put a large fruit juice can with a record on top of it. The heat of the oven made the record turn down around the can, and when she took it out of the oven, she had an unusual flower pot, complete with a hole in the bottom.

I keep wishing the disc jockeys on the local radio programs would turn some of their records into flower pots!

Our neighbor down the street, the one with the big family, used to fret over the wasted egg whites that certain members of her brood refused to eat for breakfast. Every time she scraped the uneaten whites into the garbage can, she got upset over the waste.

She doesn't fret any more though, not since she figured out how to turn the uneaten whites into delicious angel food cakes. She doesn't cook the whites for the non-eaters any more, just cooks the yolks and stores the whites in a covered jar in the refrigerator. They keep fresh for days, and when she has enough, she makes a fluffy angel food cake at almost no cost. And everybody happy.

Speaking of eggs, all cooks know that they beat easier and have more volume when they're at room temperature, but even the best cooks sometimes forget to take them out of the refrigerator until they're ready to use them.

This same neighbor has a good suggestion for such forgetful cooks. She places her cold eggs in a pan of warm water for a few minutes. When she removes them from the shell, they're at room temperature and ready to beat.

If your cooky jar is empty, here's a quickie:

Mix ½ cup peanut butter with 1 1-3 cups sweetened condensed milk. Stir in 2 cups cornflakes. Drop by teaspoons onto greased baking sheet and bake in moderate oven for 12 minutes.

YOUR Health

"Your Health" is presented by your physician as a health service of The Medical Association of the State of Alabama.

The immediate cause of diabetes is a defiency of insulin normally present in the body and produced by the pancreatic gland and its related tissue. With the advent of insulin, the life expectancy of the diabetic was greatly extended, making possible longer and more detailed studies of the factors involved.

Thus it has been possible to prove that heridity plays an important role in the development of diabetes; and because the life expectancy has been increased to the age when obesity more readily develops, overweight has become a serious problem. Next to heridity, obesity ranks as the most important predisposing factor in the causatinn of diabetes. The tendency to become overweight after the age of forty is probably related to the frequency of diabetes at this time. In children obesity is not the prominent factor in the development of diabetes that it is in adults. Needless to say, however, the overweight child with a family history of diabetes should be placed on a reduction diet.

How does obesity influence diabetes? Actually the increased amount of food that the obese person consumes places a metabolic strain on the insulin producing cells of the pancreas. Eventually a deficiency is produced in the person with a hereditary background and diabetes is the result.

It is estimated that there are at least one million known diabetics in the country, and an approximate number of unknown diabetics. For this reason, education is directed to locating the unknown or potential diabetics so that existing methods of controlling the coindition may be instituted.

If detected early, the diabetic person can be helped to a longer life. While some dietary restrictions may be imposed, this does not mean that a useful and gainful existence cannot be enjoyed, socially and occupationally. While injections of insulin are thus far the one established means of controlling diabetes, they are not always necessary in the obese if regulations in the diet are watched carefully.

SUNDAY'S SERMON

God's Design for New Men
Lesson for October 11: Jeremiah 31: 31-34; I Peter 1: 13-16, 22-23
Golden Text: Ezekiel 36: 27

According to Jeremiah, God makes a new covenant with his people that he may make new men. Whereas, the people had broken the old covenant made with them in bringing them out of Egypt, God would make a new covenant with them, writing his law on their hearts. And all, from the least to the greatest, should know Jehovah.

Peter calls upon his readers to gird up the loins of their minds, and with hope in the grace that will be given them through faith in Christ, to flee former lusts and become obedient unto God. They should be holy as God is holy. This means that men are to be holy because God is holy and it is his will that men be holy. The only basis of morality is the righteous will of God.

Having the soul purified in obedience to the truth, men are to love one another from the heart fervently. This will be possible through the word of God, which liveth and abideth. The Bible has one grand peculiarity that distinguishes it from all other books—it is the revelation of God. We do not read far in the great Book without coming face to face with God. And we are to read and study the great Book and make its truth our own for our own growth in grace and the knowledge of Christ. Every need of life may be supplied in the Bible. Through its revelation of God we may look up to Him and call him Father.

"I REMEMBER"

From Mrs. Pearl Babcock, Elkhart, Indiana: I remember when as a child I saw my first team of oxen. They were hauling wheat. I was so frightened of the great animals I hid until they were gone.

From James M. Bailey, Sheridan, Indiana: I can remember when my father raised a few acres of buckwheat. We had no way of thrashing it. He built a bin about two feet high, put fence rails over the top of it and we used hickory poles to beat the grain which fell in the bin. I also remember helping my father build a barn. We went into the woods cut the trees and he hewed the lumber for the building on the spot. From there we hauled it to the barn site.

From Lula Ballng, Thomas, Oklahoma: I remember helping my father shell corn by hand and hauling it to mill to be ground into meal. And I remember how he hauled saw-logs with an old span of steers.

DALE CARNEGIE

AS A BOY of fourteen Charles H. Brantley, Huntsville, Alabama, once made preparations for the annual trip to the boy scout camp. Thirty boys from his home town were making the trip, and they were to meet at a designated place and there board a chartered bus for the trip to camp.

Between Charles' home and the bus were several houses which he had to pass carrying his sack filled with supplies. Since it was Sunday he did not want to be seen carrying that sack, he was afraid of what people might say about him. Very soon a fellow Boy Scout came by and he agreed to carry Charles' sack in addition to his own for five cents.

Such little incidents as that occurred many times in the years that followed, and Charles soon found that his fears were getting the best of him and he was worrying about almost everything. After graduating from high school he enrolled in college twice, only to give some excuse for not attending when the day arrived.

CARNEGIE

In 1945 he entered the army and was sent to a camp a thousand miles from home. Practically all the men in camp were many miles from home and most of them had worries. Since it was next to impossible to avoid being part of a group at all times, Charles made up his mind that he would make the best of everything. Instead of telling everybody about his own problems, he listened to the other fellow. Since he was willing to listen, nearly all the men eventually came to him with their stories.

His reason for telling this to you is to suggest that you do all you can in any situation, then forget it, for be applied this advice to his own problems and found that it worked.

No longer does he worry about what people think of him, for he is firmly convinced that most people are too busy worrying about themselves to take the time to give him a thought, and, if he has done the best he can, worrying about what people might think of him certainly won't make them think any differently.

Turkey Prices For '53 Look Good, Says Weeks

During the 1953 marketing season turkey producers should receive prices equal to or slightly higher than those of last year.

Present indications are that 100,000,000 fewer pounds of turkey will be marketed from now through the remainder of the market period, explains API Extension poultryman John Weeks.

He reminds producers that early turkeys should be finished at 24 to 28 weeks of age and marketed as soon as they reach a good finish. Birds should not be held after they are mature.

"Small turkeys to be marketed during the Thanksgiving season," concludes Weeks, "should be frozen and held if they reach finished condition before Thanksgiving."

Reinforcements To Indo China— Both Sides Move Troops— New Navy Carrier Device— Swedes Ordered To Shoot—

Washington — It may be coincidence but, within a few days, the French announced they were reinforcing their army in Indo-China and the Chinese reported the withdrawal of two armies from North Korea. Moreover, two more Chinese armies are being readied to pull out of the Korean theatre. The Chinese armies are small by comparison to U. S. armies and total only between 30,000 and 40,000 troops.

Where these Chinese armies are being sent was not announced, but the removal from Korea of about 150,000 first-line Chinese troops will enable the Communists to strengthen their forces in other parts of China and to send more troops to the Indo-China border, if they desire. The troops coming from North Korea have been thoroughly tested in battle and the U. N. command admits they are efficient figters.

Meanwhile, Admiral Arthur Radford, Chairman of the Joint Chiefs of Staff, has issued a warning designed for Chincse ears, that any further aggression in Indo-China by the Chinese might bring about serious consequences.

The French decision to send more regular army troops to Indo-China came only after President Dwight Eisenhower okayed the transfer of these forces from Europe. Evidently, the U. S. command beheves the situation in Europe is less critical than it has been for several years. For one thing, there are growing signs of general unrest in Eastern Europe, especially in Poland, where the stream of prominent Poles seeking refuge from Communism continues to impress the world.

In addition, the NATO command is soon getting atomic artillery and some of the U. S. Army's latest weapons. This bolsters that front against Red aggression more than a few extra divisions would.

The Navy now has a device which determines the speed of planes approaching carriers for a landing. Though little has been heard about it, the problem of landing fast jets on carrier decks has caused considerable anxiety in some quarters. Since the latest jet planes used from carriers cost the government as much as $500,000 the loss of such aircraft, and the damage accidents do to the carriers is a serious consideration.

Jet planes have only a narrow air speed range in which they can land on carriers. Moreover, the problem of quickly accelerating speed is different in jets trom what it was in the conventional engine planes.

Now that the Navy has the new device, an officer on the flight deck of a carrier can be informed of the speed of the approaching jet as it nears the carrier, and if that speed is dangerously high, or low, he can signal the necessary corrective instructions to the pilot at once.

In the Swedish war games, recently held off the coast of Sweden, that country's fighter planes were instructed to operate with live ammunition and to fire on any aircraft which attempted to interfere. This order is the result of incidents last year in which Russian aircraft shot down two Swedish planes.

At that time, the Swedish planes were unarmed. They were flying over international waters but the Russians said they were over Russian territorial waters when shot down. To avoid another defenseless loss, the Swedes gave their pilots orders to shoot if molested in the recent war games and they were not molested. This is a stiff attitude for the Swedes, whose traditional love of peace has kept them out of both world wars in the last thirty years.

Teachers To Be Honored

MONTGOMERY, Ala. — Alabama teachers will be honored Oct. 5 at the State Fair in Birmingham, following a custom set several years ago by R. H. McIntosh, General Manager of the Alabama State Fair Authority. Gov. Gordon Persons, seated, is shown signing the proclamation which designates Oct. 5, Alabama Teachers Day, as Dr. W. J. Terry, State Superintendent of Education, looks on. This year's fair dates are Oct. 5-10. McIntosh explained that the special occasion "is to focus attention of the entire state on the services, loyalty and devotion to duty of every single member of Alabama's educational profession." The Birmingham Classroom Teachers Association will act as host organization for the guests of honor and visitors on that date. Almost every Alabama educational group, and leader, has approved the observance.

This An' That

Every day now, that is every Saturday, more and more of the big teams are having bad luck on the gridiron. The first upset and really hard luck story of the season was when Mississippi Southern upset mighty Alabama 25-19 . . . The five-in-a-row pennant parade of the New York Yankees is unprecedented in major league baseball. No other club in either league had been able to win more than four straight flags until Casey Stengel's men made the grade this year. Incidentally, Stengel is reported to have said recently that next year's team will be his greatest . . . The Yankees won their first flag under Miller Huggins in 1921. The win this year makes it their 20th . . . With the Dodgers in possession of the National League pennant, do you remember what some of the managers of this league had to say about the race in the spring? Charlie Grimm, Milwaukee Braves: "Brooklyn will never—never, I say—have another year like last year." And Leo Durocher: "This could be a big year for us."

Laws On When, Wnere And How To Fish

Montgomery, Ala.,Oct.--- Earl M. McGowin, Director of the Alabama Department of Conservation, announced here today regulations under which commercial fishermen can take non-game fish in navigable streams and public impounded waters of the state.

Under provisions of Act 784 of the 1953 Legislature, McGowin set up regulations to govern use of hoop nets, fyke nets, gill nets, slat traps or slat baskets, trammel nets, trotlines, setlines, and snagglines. These types of fishing gear were legalized by the legislative Act, but conditions under which they can be used were left up to the Conservation Director.

Commercial fishing in most of the state's larger streams and bodies of water are opened by the regulations to any fisherman who pays $10 for a resident or $20 for a non-resident annual commercial fishing license. Fish dealer licenses sell for $25 to a wholesaler or $10 to a retailer of fresh water fish.

The new regulations specifically prohibit use of hoop nets and fyke nets, the mesh of which is less than one and one-half inches from knot to knot with a stretch or spread of not less than three inches after it has been tarred and shrunk.

Use of gill nets is prohibited unless the mesh is larger than four inches from knot to knot and with a stretch or spread of not less than eight inches after the net has been shrunk. Trammel nets cannot be used unless the mesh is at least three inches from knot to knot with a stretch or spread of not less than six inches after said net has been shrunk.

No person can place a hoop net, fyke net, gill net, trammel net or slat trap or slat basket in any waters in such a way that it extends more than halfway across.

Dragging any net through the water is a violation.

All nets placed in any public impounded water must be at least 25 feet from the water's edge.

The regulations state specifically that slat traps and baskets must be made in box-like or cylinder shape having at least two inches between slats and using slates not wider than three inches. Use of any wire basket, wire trap or other similar device for taking fresh water fish is prohibited.

Use of any seines (except minnow seines), wire baskets or fish traps other than the slat trap or slat basket for taking fresh water fish is prohibited.

Any live box or holding box must bear the name and address of the owner and shall be subject to inspection by officers of the Conservation Department.

Use of nets in certain areas shall be legal only if done between sunrise and sunset and if the net mesh is not less than one and one-quarter inches from knot to knot, or a stretch or spread of not less than two and one-half inches. These areas include Bay Grass, Grand Bay, Pole Cat Bay, Choccolotta Bay, Gustang Bay, D'Olive Bay, Big Bay, John Big Bay Bateau, Little Bay Bateau, John's Bend, Bay Delvin, and Bay Minette Basin and Bay. All game fish caught by net must be released immediately back into the waters from whence they came. No net can be dragged but must be set only in the waters specified above.

No person shall fish by trotline from any boat, skiff or other floating device propelled or drawn by boat in the following bodies of water: Chuckfey Bay, Polecat Bay, Bay Grass, Bay Delvan, Choccolotta Bay, Little Bateau, Big Bateau, Gustang Bay, Bay Minette Bay, Bay Minette Basin, Grand Bay, Little Bay John, Big Bay John's Bend, and D'Olive Bay.

Gigs, spears and grabbling are prohibited except in the Gantts ville, Pickwick, Wheeler and Wilson Reservoirs in the Tennessee Valley. They may be used at times only between sunrise and sunset and only for taking game fish.

Use of nets, trotlines, setlines or snaglines is prohibited from the first of May to the 31st of October each year in a section of Marshall County.

This area extends from the bridge across Big Spring Creek upstream from a point at the Scout camp on the bluff on the South side of Short Creek, thence North across to the North bank of the lake, thence following the meanderings of the lake on the North bank to George Houston bridge, thence with the bridge and the Western shore of the lake up Big Spring Creek to the North Carolina and St. Louis R.R. Bridge, the point of the beginning. Fishing with rod and reel or hook and line in that area is not prohibited

In 1819 at the beginning of statehood, the legislature provided for the incorporation of a seminary of learning to be known as the University of Alabama. In a message to the legislature, Gov. William Wyatt Bibb, the first governor of the state called attention to the liberal donations of public lands which had been made by Congress to Alabama for educational purposes.

Blue Plate or Potluck?

Dropped by Charlie's Diner last night and saw something new on the menu. There's the usual list of blue plates, but also, there's another one of Charlie's smart ideas. It reads:

"Potluck Dinner: Appetizer—Might be Soup or Juice. Entree—Could be Pot Roast or Ham and Eggs. Steak — If you're lucky. Dessert—Maybe Apple Pie."

Asked Charlie how it was going. "Just fine, Joe," he said. "Some folks chance it with potluck, some play it safe with blue plates. The thing is, I don't waste any good food and I can give my customers a better price."

From where I sit, ideas that pay off for a business usually pay off for the customer, too. It works that way with the beer retailers in this state. They voluntarily co-operate with the Self-Regulation program sponsored by the Brewing Industry to make their places attractive for you. In their business, neatness and cleanliness are always the "order of the day!"

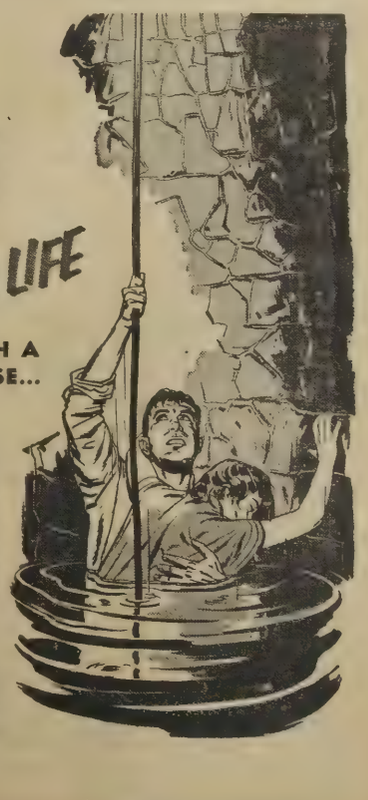
JOHN T. COLEMAN, a Southern Bell telephone man, rushed to the rescue when a lady fell into a 25-foot well at Anniston, Alabama. She was clinging—almost exhausted—to the well in 10 feet of water.



HE SAVED A LIFE WITH A GARDEN HOSE...

Making quick use of what was at hand, Mr. Coleman tied a length of garden hose to a tree, lowered himself into the well and supported the lady above water until she could be raised to safety with a rope. Then he applied first aid before an ambulance arrived.

A courageous act? Yes. But equally important, quick thinking in an emergency. It speaks well of the type of men and women who provide your telephone service — often going beyond the call of duty.

CONGRESSIONAL QUIZ

Q—What is the current rate of U. S. deliveries of military aid to our allies?

A—During the first half of 1953, deliveries totaled $2,363,000,000 in value, according to Harold E. Stassen, Director of the Foreign Operations Administration. Deliveries reached $1,447,000,000 during the second six months of 1952, and $880 million during the first half of 1952.

Q—When he announced the $2 billion cut in estimated federal expenditures during fiscal 1954, did Secretary of the Treasury George M. Humphrey predict a balanced budget?

A—No. He estimated that the fiscal 1954 deficit will be $3.8 billion. Humphrey said, however, that the Administration will be "well under way" toward balancing the cash budget before next June 30, barring "unexpected" developments.

Q—Which three matters do members of Congress consider the key issues of the second session, which will convene in January, and of the 1954 election campaign?

A—A large majority of the 223 members who voted in a Congressional Quarterly poll tabulated Sept. 4 called Korea the top issue, followed in order by tax reduction and economy in government.

A—Senators and Representatives introduced 10,695 measures, of which 9,900 were bills (public and private) and Joint resolutions, which have the force of law when passed by both houses and signed by the President. Five hundred and fifteen became law. The all-time record for introduction of legislation was set during the two years of the 61st Congress (1909-11), when 44,363 measures bulged the hoppers. So far, the pace of the 83rd Congress is less than half that of the 61st.

FEDERAL APPROPRIATIONS

Since 1872, when the House Appropriations Committee began keeping year-by-year statistics, Congress has appropriated $1,162,000,000,000 — well over half of it to the military. More than half of the staggering total was appropriated during the last ten years, with the all-time high being the $147,000,000,000 allotted in 1942, the first full year of World War II.

TARIFF REDUCTIONS

President Eisenhower has created an economic study group which will consider the proposal for mutual tariff reductions by the free nations. If successful, the plan would replace the present reciprocal trade program.

From The Fort Mill Times, Fort Mill, S. C.: General Johnathan M. Wainwright, the hero of Bataan, will remain a bright page in our military history for his courage in the face of the most hopeless assignment any American commander has ever had to accept.

"For a while," General Wainwright used to say, "we were careless of our nation's safety. We let our guard down."

At this very moment, this very critical moment, in our history, we face increasing opportunities for letting our guard down. It could be as disastrous in the plushy perilous of the United Nations as it was in the hell of Corregidor.

From the Clinton County Republican-News, St. Johns, Mich.: Vice president Nixon went far beyond the grudging words of the Republican platform of last year when he spoke of Korea in his address at the American Legion convention in St. Louis.

"Let's recognize right now," he said, "that the decision to go into Korea was right. It was right because the Communists had to be stopped. And let me say that in the past I have had occasion to disagree with the former President of the United States, Mr. Truman, on some issues, but on this issue President Truman was right, and he deserves credit for making that decision."

In this passage the vice president did much to convince the world that in our essential foreign policy we are united. We think he deserves credit for his sportsmanship and candor on this occasion, particularly in the presence of an audience which often seems to take a dim view of international cooperation.

He also took occasion, while defending the work of congressional investigating committees, to suggest that "it is only when these investigations are conducted fairly and objectively that they are most effective." Senator McCarthy and a few other wild men may not like such sentiments, but they will be correspondingly approved by the more liberal elements of the Republican party.

Folks and Things ABOUT TOWN

—By Ben

Visited the Bank of Maplesville this week with Semmie Scott to take some pictures and they sure do have a beautiful new bank over there. Well it may not be a new bank, but it's so covered up with pretty that you can't tell the difference. Mr. John Maples told us they were going to hold "Open House" within the next few weeks and invite all their friends to come to see their pretty new home.

Talked to the Town policeman while we were over there. He liked to have run us in for a minor parking infraction. Seems like policemen get on our tail light when we drive through a town and sit there until we pass the city limits just to make sure we don't run-down any fire hydrants or cover up any parking meters. Anyway, as we were saying, we talked to W. M. Walker —the town policeman—and he was very nice about it all. Trying to help us get automobiles moved for picture-taking and the like. He told us about finding a half-gallon fruit jar full of whiskey behind one of the stores there the other day. When he started to move the whiskey a great big snake was coiled up close against the jar. Now we have heard the stuff called snake poison and the snake could have been trying to get a drink to commit suicide because of some financial difficulty or trouble with another snake. However, it also could disprove the old saying that whiskey is good for snake bites and really deep down in the heart of a snake he really likes the stuff. Be that as it may, we will leave such weighty matters as figuring out what the snake had in mind while he lay close to the hidden whiskey. Suffice it to say, Policeman Walker confiscated the snake and the liquor and from reports we have heard Maplesville is pretty well cleaned up. Several weeks have gone by without even a single arrest over there and the bootlegger is laying mighty low. We congratulate Mayor McCain on his very clean and orderly little town.

We have asked all the football coaches in the county high schools to get us their football results each week end after the games are played. If they will cooperate with us in this we can have a story on all the high school games in the county each Tuesday. Hope they agree and make a lot of football fans happy.

Heard from Mr. and Mrs. Jess Motes the other day. You know after he left the county employ he bought him a chicken farm and has been raising chickens for the past few years. According to the Motes it hasn't all been easy either. Anybody who has raised chickens knows that it can be a heart-breaking business. However, the story has a happy ending, the Motes are winning. The other day they sold 99 dozen eggs in one day. We don't know how many hens they have, but to get a turn-out like that we'll venture to say none of them were laying around. In fact, even the roosters must have been helping.

"Who's that stranger, mother dear—
Look, he knows us, ain't he queer?"
"Hush, my own, don't talk so wild;
That's your father, dearest child,"
"That's my father? No such thing!
Father died away last spring."
"Father didn't die, you dub;
Father joined a golfing club.
Now the club is closed, so he Has no place to go, you see.
No place left for him to roam,
That is why he's coming home.
Kiss him, he won't bite you, child;
All them golfing guys look wild.

Scouts To Launch Funds Campaign

The Annual Finance Campaign to support the program of the Boy Scouts of America in Chilton County will be launched throughout the County Monday, October 19. Howard Boockholdt, County Superintendent of Education, has been selected to serve as Campaign chairman for the drive. Boockholdt will be assisted by co-chairmen Reedie Taylor, Gordon Robertson, Clint Carlisle, J. B. Fort and B. G. Godwin; Mrs. Otis Littleton, Thorsby; Mrs. Andy Beaman and S. L. McNeill, Jemison. A chairman for Maplesville will be selected later. All chairmen will select men and women to help with the solicitations.

The Boy Scouts of America is dedicated to enriching the nation by helping its boys and young men to grow physically, mentally, morally and spiritually. Scouting is a practical training ground for building the citizens of the future. It teaches integrity, loyalty, tolerance and sportsmanship. Boys who spend their important formative years in the Boy Scout Movement and are exposed to its lessons become better men and better citizens, with a true reverence for our country and all it stands for.

The Scouting program has as its fundamental purpose the development of character and training in citizenship. In Scouting every boy gets a high moral code and the chance to practice its ideals. He is given every opportunity to learn leadership and good social qualities. In Scouting the boy is taught reverence. Although the number is non-secterian, the Boy Scouts of America maintain that no boy can grow into the best kind of citizenship without recognizing his obligation to God.

Scouting teaches a boy to use his hands. In the advancement program he has over 100 subjects to choose from. First, Aid, Life Saving, Camping, Pioneering, Handicraft, being among the subjects offered.

The program has grown rapidly in Chilton County the past two years. Further expansion is planned for the coming year. Active units are now functioning in Clanton, Stanton, Jemison, Maplesville and Thorsby.

Courts of Honors and Pack Meetings are held in different communities in the county where recognition is given to scouts who have earned it in the advancement program.

Scouting affords boys between the ages of eight and eighteen an opportunity to have fun and good fellowship under the guidance of carefully selected men and women. Cub Scout ages are 8-10, Boy Scouts 11-13 and Senior Scouts 14-18.

Scouts will continue to render community service when called upon.

Boats To Be Inspected At Lake Jordan

A three-man Coast Guard boarding party will be at Lake Jordan on Saturday and Sunday, October 17th and 18th, for a routine examination of pleasure craft, Captain Frank A. Leamy, Commander, 8th Coast Guard District, announced today.

Consisting of one officer and two enlisted men, it is the first such party ever to visit Lake Jordan. They will board pleasure craft to determine whether or not proper safety equipment is being carried and to insure that Coast Guard safety requirements are observed.

Captain Leamy added that the inspection is being carried out to enforce the Motorboat Act, which requires all vessels to be properly equipped with certain safety devices approved by the Coast Guard, and to promote safety of life on navigable waters; not with the intent of assessing and exacting fines.

The boarding will be done in conjunction with Coast Guard Auxiliary Flotilla No. 202 of Lake Jordan which will supply boats to the Coast Guardsmen. The Auxiliary is the civilian component of the Coast Guard which promotes safety at sea, and otherwise aids Coast Guard activities.

The Coast Guard Auxiliary conducts a Courtesy Examination program that offers the boating public a thorough check of safety equipment and general vessel conditions, upon request of the boatowner, without a penalty for failing to pass. They also advise boat owners of Coast Guard recommended items not required by law, but conducive to safety afloat. Boat owners whose craft do not pass this examination are not reported, and no official action is taken; however, examiners will not award an Inspection Decal to boatowners until necessary safety precautions are taken. Boats bearing such Auxiliary Inspection Decals will not ordinarily be boarded by Coast Guard boarding parties, unless there is reason to believe a law violation exists.

Among other items, the Coast Guard boarding party will look for life preservers, fire extinguishers, and proper running lights. Persons not familiar with requirements of the Motorboat Act for safe operation of their boats should check with the U. S. Coast Guard or the Coast Guard Auxiliary for the information.

33 Draftees Threaten To Confiscate Greyhound Bus

Thirty - three Inductees from Moulton, Alabama, threatened to take a Greyhound Bus from the driver Thursday afternoon north of Jemison, Alabama.

The trouble started, it is reported by the driver Tommie Clark, by the young Inductees ringing the bell and trying to get him to stop the bus. When told that Thorsby was a bus stop and he would stop there the men insisted on stopping the bus immediately and told the driver that they would take the bus away from him if he refused.

He got to Jemison and stopped the bus and called Clanton police officers to meet the bus at the Greyhound Bus Station here. In the meantime the Highway Patrol called Maxwell Field at Montgomery and reported the trouble.

However, before the transportation from Montgomery arrived an Air Force Sergeant, whose name was not learned, chanced by the bus station and volunteered his services to get the men to Maxwell Field in the Greyhound Bus if the bus driver would consent to take them on. This Clark did, and the bus with it's load of future soldiers left Clanton about 4:30 p.m. after more than two hours of waiting.

It is reported the young men were en route to the Induction Center at Montgomery.

Band Boosters Held First Meet

The Band Boosters held their first meeting Tuesday, September 29th At this meeting two major problems were the main topic of discussion. Both problems were solved by committee action.

The Band Boosters are being organized by patrons and interested town's people who want to see Clanton have a band they can be proud of.

If you saw and heard the band at last week's ball game, you can tell the vital need of town aid. This aid can only come from you. You can help your children have a band they will enjoy being a member of.

The band has grown to 44 members in view of the many obstacles that confront them. Lack of cooperation, lack of interest and lack of aid. The band cannot hold this many members unless you, the merchants, town people, and parents show them you are behind the band 100 per cent.

You may ask, how can I help: I am interested in the band, but what can I do? If you want to help your band grow, be at the Band Boosters meeting Monday night, October 12th, at 7 o'clock p.m. in the High School Library. If you are present you will learn how we can have a band and keep a band through the years. Show that you are interested by your presence. Be a Band Booster.

Driver violations, including drunken driving, figure in 83 per cent of Alabama's traffic accidents, and in 78 per cent of its fatal accidents. Vehicle defects are traceable in only 13 per cent of all accidents and 11 per cent of the fatal smashups.

Sixty-four per cent of Alabama's fatal traffic accidents occur during week ends—between 6 p.m. Friday and midnight Sunday. Fifty-four per cent occur during daylight hours, and 23 per cent during inclement weather.

Of 100 working hours, an average Alabama Highway Patrolman spends 20 investigating accidents, 75 on enforcement patrol and five in court and on special assignments.

CHRISTOPHER COLUMBUS

In a few days, the 461st anniversary of the discovery of the New World by Christopher Columbus will be observed. On August 3rd, 1492, Coumbus left the port of Palos, Spain, with three ships. One of them was the Santa Maria, of 100 tons and 52 men, and the other two were the Pinta and Nina, of 50 tons and 18 men and 40 tons and 18 men, respectively.

In the early morning hours of October 12th, Rodrigo le Triana, on the Nina sighted land. Although it was the hurricane season, Columbus and his vessels had made the voyage without being destroyed by one of the great September hurricanes which occur periodically in the area. The land sighted was the island of Guanahoni, Bahamas. This is now called San Salvador, and the first fort built in this part of the New World was built there.

Columbus is certainly one of the greatest explorers of all times. The Genoese navigator is also ranked as one of the world's first sailors and navigators, and it was his conviction that the world was round which brought about the discovery of the New World just 461 years ago. Most historians, however, believe other explorers set foot on the North American continent many hundreds of years before Columbus. These explorers and seamen came across the North Atlantic and failed to discover the warmer area to the South. And, records of these voyages were unknown in Columbus' day and had not the Italian explorer obtained permission from the Queen of Spain to lead an expedition to the New World, the development of this hemisphere would have been considerably delayed.

Few adventures can match those of Columbus on his first crossing. The courage required and the conditions overcome make it one of the great and inspirational stories of all time.

INVESTIGATIONS played an important part of the work accomplished by the first session of the 83rd congress. The amount of time and money spent in "operation gumshoe" is much greater than is generally realized by the American people.

Congressional Quarterly reports that congress this year granted its committees $3,958,471 to conduct these investigations. And it is likely that additional amounts may be added as needed when the congress convenes its second session in 1954.

During the first session which ended early Aug. 4, the House authorized $1,797,050 for probe spending. Of this, $1,582,050 went to the regular, or "standing" committees, and $215,000 to special investigative committees.

To finance Senate investigations, the upper chamber authorized $1,593,000, all for its regular committees. With carryover funds of $568,421 from the last congress the Senate committees have available $2,161,421 for investigations.

During the two years (1951-52) of the 82nd Congress, the Senate and House together authorized $5,700,870 for investigations.

Investigation allowances of $300,000 or more have been made available to three committees in the present Congress. Those committees are:

House Government Operations, $355,050; House Un-American Activities, $300,000; and Senate Judiciary, $521,367.

Each chamber makes investigations money available to its committees by authorizing them to spend from its "contingent fund"—a sum replenished from year to year by appropriations from the U.S. Treasury.

Under the contingent fund procedure, only the chamber conducting the investigation has to approve the spending. A regular appropriation, such as one adding new money to the contingent fund, must be approved by both House and Senate and signed by the President.

● Washington observers are saying that the relations between the administration and organized labor, very taut since the resignation of Martin Durkin from the President's cabinet, have not been helped by Vice President Nixon's recent speech at the A.F.L. convention in St. Louis.

Vice President Nixon admittedly had a difficult job of explaining the administration's viewpoint concerning the 19 amendments to the Taft-Hartley Act which Durkin said the President failed to act on after promising to do so. His explanation was unacceptable to the convention delegates and as a result Mr. Durkin's accusation of broken agreement took on a great deal more substance.

The Wall Street Journal in a special report from the convention said that one delegate, who was affirmed to be actually a Republican, is quoted as having said of the Vice President: "With ham you got to have an egg. He laid it."

My PET PEEVE

By W. Scott Boyd

CONTRARY to any impression readers may have gathered from this column, I do love my wife. There are times, however, when I wish I could lock her in some dark room in a remote corner of the house. One of these urges possessed me last Saturday afternoon.

I was relaxed in my favorite chair with the radio turned to a football game I would have given anything to see when she marches into the room with yards of material.

"Isn't it beautiful," says she.

"Sure was," says I. "He kicked out on the one-yard line. Boy, what I would give to have see that."

"I wasn't talking about your old football game," says she. "It's this material. Isn't it beautiful."

"Please, honey," says I, "just be still a minute. Let's see what they'll do."

"Stand up," says she. "I want to drape this on you. Maybe I could get an idea."

"THEY'RE LINING UP IN REGULAR FORMATION. NOTRE DAME IS NOT GOING TO KICK. THERE THE SNAP . . ."

"Turn off that thing," says the wife. "Now, let's see."

"THERE'S A FUMBLE AND A BIG PILE UP . . ."

"Please, dear. Go away!"

"I will not. Stand up."

"THEY ARE UNPILING THIS MIGHT BE THE BREAK THAT WILL MEAN THE GAME . . ."

I stood up and as I did so lunged against the table and the radio. The portable crashed to the floor. There was a squawk and silence.

"Now look what you've caused me to do," I shouted.

"Don't shout at me, you beast," says she. "And besides, I've told you over and over to have the big radio fixed. Serves you right!"

With that she marched out of the room trailing the yards of material. That's when I had the urge to lock her in a dark room.

GOVERNOR KILLS SINGLE-SHOT VOTING IN ALABAMA ELECTIONS

Montgomery—Gov. Gordon Persons pocket-vetoed a legislative act which was aimed at putting an end to "single shot" voting in Alabama elections.

By refusing to sign the bill within the 10-day period allowed after adjournment of the 1953 session, the governor let the measure die automatically. Several other bills also received the same treatment. They would have:

Cut the state tax on aviation gasoline from six cents to one cent a gallon.

Established a Department of Alcoholism at the State Medical College to study the effects of drinking on the human body and human behavior. He said the $100,000 appropriation isn't available in the state treasury.

Taken Talladega and Houston Counties and the City of Dothan out from under the state insurance fund.

Compelled the governor to accept the choice of the Talladega County Democratic Executive Committee in filling vacancies in the Talladega County court. The appointments are made by the chief executive now with no restrictions.

The "single shot" voting bill would have required candidates in multiple office elections to run for places designated by number instead of all in one lump.

CONVICT PLEASED WITH ALABAMA PRISON CONDITIONS

Montgomery—State Prisons Director J. M. McCullough these days is proudly displaying a clipping from the Cleveland, O., Plain Dealer.

The writer, concerning an Ohio man serving in Kilby State Prison, is conclusive evidence that improved prison conditions in Alabama are gaining nationwide attention.

Frank Woodall, a former Clevelander, has notified his hometown newspaper that he was not only alive and well, but was reasonably pleased with his treatment.

Woodall escaped from an Alabama chain gang in 1941. He was retaken in Cleveland in 1948, and after a four-year legal fight, was returned to Alabama last January. His mother, Mrs. Willie Mae Woodall, of 2350 E. 61st Street, Cleveland, feared for his safety after she had not heard from him since May.

Joseph M. Goldwasser, Cleveland businessman, became interested in the case and came to Kilby Prison here to see Woodall. From the warden's office there, Goldwasser called the Cleveland paper and reported reforms in Alabama penology under Gov. Gordon Persons.

"They no longer allow strap whippings and there are no more chain gangs," Goldwasser said. "The food is excellent. Woodall tells me he has been treated very well."

Woodall, 35, got on the phone himself to confirm all this, the Cleveland paper said. He said he had not written because of trouble in finding someone to write his letters. He sent his mother a letter Tuesday.

Teach Children Safety Rules

Montgomery, Ala. — "Children's traffic habits, more often than not, are the result of the example their parents have set."

Mrs. D. D. Black made that statement this week on behalf of the Alabama Congress of Parents and Teachers, which is cooperating with the Alabama Safety Council September traffic program for child safety.

"Good traffic habits and attitudes of parents will do a lot to keep children safe in traffic," the state P.-T.A. president said. "Also important is the extent to which parents try to teach children safe traffic practices."

Parents can best cooperate with the program of the Alabama and National Safety Councils by following these five simple rules, according to Mrs. Black:

1. As pedestrains, always set good examples to children. This includes crossing streets only at intersections, waiting for signals, and looking both ways before crossing.

2. Learn what your schools are teaching and, in cooperation with schools and traffic officials, help children develop safe traffic habits and attitudes.

3. See that children play only in approved play areas—never in the street or near moving traffic.

4. Teach children safe use of outdoor toys such as roller skates, tricycles, bicycles, scooters and wagons.

SUNDAY'S SERMON

Rev. Robert H. Harper

God's Design for a Better World. Lesson for October 4: Isaiah 42: 5-9; Mark 1: 14-15; John 3: 16-17; Revelation 21: 1-5. Golden Text: Revelation 21: 5.

Evidences of God's design for a better world are found in the several passages grouped in the lesson text. The God of the universe is He who designs for men a better world and has wisdom and power give assurance of such a world; a world in which disease shall be healed, the prisons emptied of occupants, and men shall rejoice in freedom from sin.

In the passage from Mark we find Jesus preaching the kingdom of God. This is a kingdom in the hearts of men and it is not subject to the limitations and barriers of earthly kingdoms. It transcends all the barriers known to men. Its reign is that of love in men's hearts. It is to be entered by repentance and faith in the gospel.

The passage from John tells of the supreme gift that God has made to men in Christ. God so loved the world that he gave his only begotten Son as the Saviour. Thus the better world must come through faith in Christ.

The kingdom of God is not limited by death. The grave is no barrier to the kingdom's continuance. For, as the inspired seer looked off from Patmos, he saw the New Jerusalem and all the redeemed. And he heard a great voice declaring that the tabernacle of God should be with men. So love will survive death and glorify the kingdom in its eternal setting in heaven.

A Peek at THE STARS

By LYN CONNELLY

WALTER O'KEEFE, the quizmaster of "Wizard of Odds," who knows that the odds can always be beaten, has a bit of advice for the university-bound gal . . . "A college education can do a lot for a girl," says O'Keefe. "But if it's a husband she wants out of life, she'd better stop and think . . . Only 70 per cent of college graduates marry, while 90 per cent of high school graduates make the grade in the marital department." Dean Martin and Jerry Lewis gave a free show for 1,000 kids who could not get into the Glasgow theater where they played and so chartered a special train to London . . . Asked how Universal will age him in "The Glenn Miller Story," Jimmy Stewart replied, "Just keep taking off the makeup."

A standard basket of white gladioli was flanked by cathedral candleabra holding burning white candles. The candles were lighted by Robert T. Carter and the Rev. William Carter, brothers of the bride.

Solemnized on Wednesday evening, Sept. 30, at four o'clock, at her home on Chapel Road, the marriage of Miss Barbara Davidson and Chas. William Wade III, was marked with unusual beauty and impressive dignity.

The bride is the lovely daughter and only child of Mr. and Mrs. William C. Davidson of Clanton. Mr. Wade's parents are Mr. and Mrs. Charles Wade, Jr., also of Clanton.

The wedding setting in white and green was exceptionally beautiful. A background of Southern smilax, palms and greenery banked against the fire place formed an arch. Standards on each side of the arch held white gladiolus, mums and astors. Graduated white tapers burned in cathedral candleabra, greenery completed the sancutary.

Dr. J. Gilbert Hutchinson, pastor of the First Baptist Church, was the officiating minister. The double ring ceremony was performed in the presence of the immediate family and a few close friends.

Nuptial music was presented by Mrs. Raymond P. Mims and Miss Bobby Gray. Mrs. Mims sang "Because" and "I Love Thee." The Lord's Prayer was played just above a whisper as the vows were read.

Guests were welcomed at the door by Miss Elizabeth Wade, sister of the groom. Nuptial preludes were played by Miss Gray during the receiving of the guests.

The bride entered on the arm of her husband-to-be, her brunette beauty was enhanced by the ice blue afternoon dress of botany wool, trimed in seed pearls, she had chosen for her wedding. Her accessories were navy and she wore a single white orchid surrounded by white tulle.

A reception was held following the ceremony. In the dining room the bride's table was covered with an imported linen table cloth elaborately embroidered. In the center on a mirrored plaque was the white wedding cake, in three tiers and beautifully embossed with ornamentation of callas, the cake was encircled with a ruffle of crisp net and valley lilies, on top was a bride and groom figurine.

The punch bowl from which orange punch was served, was decorated with valley lilies and greenery. Three branched candelabra holding white tapers were on each end of the table. The dainty white napkins carried the inscription, "Barbara and Buddy."

Mrs. Walter Norman Barton of Jasper, aunt of the bride, served the cake after the bride and groom had cut the initial slice, and she was assisted by Miss Judith Ann Williamson and Miss Grace Lawrence of Clanton.

ARE you getting the most out of your vacuum cleaner?

The slower you operate the upright type of cleaner over the rugs in your home, the better the cleaning job it will do. Tank-type cleaners should be operated rapidly, about twice as fast.

Keep the bag clean if you have this type of cleaner or you may find that the suction of the cleaner is impaired. When you empty the bag, and this should be done after each cleaning, make certain no dirt clings on the inside of the bag.

Belts on upright cleaners make the brushes revolve. If too loose or not in the pulley, the brush will not move. Check to see if the brush is in place, as well as to see if it has sufficient tension.

Brushes in vacuum cleaners wear down after usage and cannot do a proper job of sweeping. Lay the edge of a playing card across the nozzle of the cleaner. If the tufts protrude slightly over the edge of the card, no adjustment is needed.

Keep the brush roll on your cleaner free of matted hair, lint and thread. This can be done by clipping the matting with scissors every so often.

If tank cleaners do not pick up properly, always check to see that the hose is clear. Pass a broom handle or a thin stick through the hose to remove obstruction

The first provision for rebuilding the University of Alabama was made by the state legislature in 1865. This provided for a loan of $70,000 from the state treasury. In 1884, largely through the efforts of Sen. John T. Morgan, Congress passed an act which granted to Alabama 46,080 acres of land to be applied "to the erection of suitable buildings for the University of Alabama and to the restoration of the library buildings which had been destroyed by Federal troops."

THE STRANGER WENT AWAY

By Madge O. Adams

"HAIRCUT, Charley," I said as I climbed into the barber chair the other evening after I'd closed up the depot for the night.

Charley usually starts ribbing me right away, about getting fatter and a little greyer. But tonight he didn't seem to have much to say. I glanced around the room and saw that the stranger was sitting over behind the stove. So that was it, I thought—Jacob Tinser. At least he said his name was Jamb Tinser.

He'd worn old grey pants with a tear in the knee and a dirty brown suit coat the day he came to town. His white shoes had been ripped out at the sides and torn loose along the soles. But now, since Christmas, he wore a good pair of corduroy pants and clean shirts and a shiny pair of new black shoes. The postmaster had taken up a collection for him.

I was as curious as the next one about just who Jacob Tinser was, and what he was doing in our town.

"Is Jacob still sleeping in the Doctor's barn?" I asked Charley as we walked down the street to get a cup of coffee after he'd closed the barber shop.

"Yep," Charley said.

I guess I knew what was worrying him. Charley isn't much for keeping books. It's awfully easy to stick a dollar in his pocket when a fellow gets a hair cut and forget to put it down. This fellow might be a treasury agent for all any of us knew.

"Folks around town still feeding Jacob?" I inquired.

"I guess they are, Percy."

"I still can't help but think that there's something about Jacob's bifocals that look—well, phony. If I could only figure them out then maybe I'd know what he was up to!"

"Some folks in town'd be willing to pay you if you could. Some folks ain't a sleeping so good at nights," Charley nodded wisely

The next day was warm, like spring was peeking around the corner. Jacob came down to the depot and sat on the platform enjoying the sunshine. I tried to engage him in conversation but he wouldn't say much. He never had said much, all winter long. When the 10:18 came through I had a good chance to use a scheme.

"What was the name on the side of that last refrigerator car, Jacob?" I yelled out at him.

"Why—why, I wasn't paying any attention," he stammered.

But I had been watching him. He had been looking right at the refrigerator car as it went past! Then it hit me . . . I remembered I'd never seen him pick up a magazine or a paper the whole winter long! Jacob Tinser couldn't read a lick, as sure as taxes! I let that all soak in for a while. Then the pieces of the puzzle began to fit together. If Jacob couldn't read then he couldn't be a Russian spy or a movie star incognito or any other of the fanciful things people were saying he was. Jacob was just what he looked like.

But I didn't have any more time to think about Jacob Tinser. Just then a railroad detective arrived at the depot. He was investigating the coal robberies.

After I'd helped him all I could he stood around for a while, just visiting. "Say, wasn't that old Jake Tinser I saw going down the tracks as I came in?" he asked.

I nodded. "Do you know him?"

The detective threw back his head and laughed. "I've had Jacob Tinser and his silly reading glasses thrown off more freight trains than a goose has feathers! From this time of year till cold weather! They say he holes up in some little town every winter. I never could figure out how he eats He's never been known to work a day in his life!"

"I guess he knows human nature pretty well. And, of course the glasses help," I decided

"How could his glasses—?"

"Well," I explained "Nobody around here ever saw a bum wear bifocals—before!"

These Boys Have Found Happiness And Security

Montgomery, Ala. — Ever since the Grand Lodge of F & A M of Alabama was organized on June 11, 1821, with Thomas F. Farrar, as the first Grand Master, until the present time, 132 years later it has occupied a position of distinction in the civic and fraternal life of this State.

Establishment of the Alabama Masonic Home and farm near Montgomery is one of the great achievements of the Grand Lodge, F & A M of which the 70,000 Master Masons in the "Yellow Hammer" State are justly proud.

Under the able leadership of the present Grand Master, Joseph S. Southall the Grand Lodge of Alabama as called upon members of the Craft to support a Million Dollar Endowment Fund for the permanent maintenance of the Masonic Home in order that widows and orphans of Master Masons and elder brothers may be assured of security and contentment in future years as they are today.

Members of the Endowment Fund Committee are: Jesse E. Lanier, Chairman; Bessemer, Ala., R. B. Gibson, Birmingham; P. Guy King, Mobile; Richard C. Cain, Jasper; Ency F. Yielding, Florence; James Sanford, Wylam; George W. Hargraves, Auburn; and Joseph L. Appling, Decatur.

The accompanying illustration sows four of the younger guests, orphans of Master Masons, at the Alabama Masonic Home who will be cared for and educated through all the grades of public schools and posibly through college.

"These boys and girls and their elders are our own people" Grand Master Southall states, and "it is the duty of every Master Mason in Alabama to make positive that they are always well housed, well fed, and well clothed. This will be made possible if the Masonic Home Million Dollar Endowment Fund is properly supported."

ALABAMA HIGHLIGHTTS

The Rev. Alva Woods, who at that time was the president of Transylvania University in Kentucky was selected as the first president of the University of Alabama. The university formally opened its doors to students, April 16, 1831, with an attendance of 35 boys. By the end of the session, 95 students had been enrolled.

John A. Nooe was the first graduate of the University of Alabama, and the school had a steady growth until the beginning of the War Between the States. In 1861, many University of Alabama students resigned to enter the Confederate army. Those who were qualified were ordered to military camps as instructors for recruits. Due to the military training offered, the University of Alabama did not close its doors during the war period as many other institutions of the South had to do.

One of the most dramatic episodes in connection with the history of the University of Alabama was the destruction by fire of its buildings, including the laboratory and library. This was done by order of General John T. Croxton, during a raid of the Federal soldiers, April 4, 1865. The home of the president, the house which as since become famous as the home of the Gorgas family, and the observatory were the only buildings spared by the enemy.

In 1873, a law department was established at the State University; in 1859, a medical department was added to the school. However, the latter department was located in the city of Mobile until 1920. At that time the medical school was removed to the campus of the University of Alabama at Tuscaloosa.

'Coon And 'Possum Hunters, Get Ont The Equipment

Montgomery, Ala., Oct. 1—'Coon and 'Possum hunters in most of Alabama's counties received the go-ahead here yesterday to begin hunting these animals with light, dog and gun, but in a few counties use of gun in nighthunting is still prohibited.

Earl M. McGowin, Director of the State Conservation Department, stated that the Department at this time will hot authorize use of guns for nighthunting in counties where most of the State's deer and turkeys are located.

"The recent legislature enacted a law permitting the use of guns for taking coons and possums at night in counties designated by the Director of Conservation. The intent of this was to permit nighthunting of coons and possums in areas where the game supply warrants and does not conflict with the preservation of other game such as deer and turkey. In issuing this regulation we are trying to comply with the broad purpose of the Act."

Counties in guns, lights and dogs may be used include: Lauderdale, Limestone, Madison, Jackson, Morgan, Marshall, DeKalb, Cullman, Blount, Etowah, Cherokee, Franklin, Marion, Lamar, Fayette, Pickens, Tuscaloosa, Shelby, Sumter, Greene, Hale, Bibb, Chilton, Coosa, Tallapoosa, Chambers, Dallas, Autauga, Elmore, Lee, Wilcox, Lowndes, Montgomery, Macon, Russell, Bullock, Butler, Crenshaw, Pike, Barbour, Covington, Coffee, Dale, Henry, Geneva, Houston.

Counties where lights and dogs may be used, but guns are not permitted include: Lawrence, Winston, Walker, Jefferson, St. Clair, Talladega, Calhoun, Cleburne, Clay, Randolph, Marengo, Choctaw, Clarke, Washington, Monroe, Conecuh, Mobile, Baldwin, Escambia. Any person hunting on lands which he does not own must have written permission of the landowner.

GOOD AMERICAN CLUB HELD MEETING SEPT. 30

The Good American Club held its meeting on Wednesday, Sept. 30. The meeting was in the form of a party in honor of John Ryland, who was moving to Florida.

The President, Timmie Parker, opened the meeting. After a short business meeting the program committee took charge. John Ryland was allowed to choose a cast of players and they put on two skits.

Profits of U. S. industry for the first six months of this calendar year were the second highest in the history of the nation. In the second quarter, the output of goods and services ran at a record annual rate of $372,000,000,000, a gain of $37,000,000,000 over the annual rate the year before.

Legends of INDIAN Summer

NO one seems to know the source of the phrase "Indian summer." The most popular belief is that the unreliability of the soft, balmy spell of weather that returns to most sections of North America after the first heavy frosts suggested to the first American settlers the uncertainess of the Indians and thus the name. Others say the term was derived from: 1) the fact that the Indians depended upon the warm, hazy spell to conclude their final preparations for winter; 2) that it provided the Indians a last convenient time to raid the settlements; 3) that it was the Indians who first predicted to the emigrants that warm weather, after the apparent onset of winter, would return. Then there is the more picturesque version of an 1823 writer, W. Faux: "Indian summer is caused by millions of acres being in a flaming; blazing, smoking fire. . . . These fires seem to originate with the native tribes."

The meteorological explanation for Indian summer is less clouded. It arrives in a period of weather transition—late October or more often November—that may alternately assume characteristics of either summer or winter. In the late fall the atmosphere is subject to less violent agitation than in the spring—when air is strongly circulated between heated south and cold north—and areas of pressure pass less swiftly. Thus when Indian summer comes—and there may be two or three periods of Indian summer—it is a result of a stagnant weather high and usually remains several days. The hazy atmosphere is smoke hanging low from fires of fall because of lack of vertical air current to dissipate it. TODAY Indian summer provides man with another opportunity—the last chance to prepare the car radiator for winter. Late model cars, unlike those of a few years back, have thinner cores and walls to better cool today's hotter running motors. These thinner cores, advise experts of The Du Pont Company, are more subject to clogging with rust and scale. They definitely recommend that before you add a drop of antifreeze, you flush your radiator with a reliable cleanser then pour in a sealer, even though your system seems tight (freeze plugs, for instance, may otherwise corrode and leak). Possibility of anti-freeze waste isn't a costly worry. What is important is to insure the engine against damage due to overheating or block freeze-up following unsuspected evaporation of temporary type coolant in an unclean radiator.

A good Indian summer to you.

Azalea Trail's Silver Anniversary To Be Gala Celebration In 1954

Mobile, Ala. — The Silver Anniversary of the Azalea Trail will be held in 1954 and this historic city is going all out in its plans for a gala celebration.

On the agenda of the seven-week entertainment program, scheduled February 10 to March 31, will be daily guided tours of the 35-mile floral route where the visitor sees literally millions of blossoms ranging in color from pure white through every shade of pink, to deep red and crimson; tours of historic homes decorated with beautiful iron lacework; outdoor art exhibits; tours of several of the South's finest gardens; sports events and many other varieties of entertainment.

It is traditional, too, to have the reigning beauty of the land—Miss America—as Queen of the Azalea Trail.

The annual Azalea Trail Festival has attracted as many as 500,000 visitors from the 48 states and fifteen foreign countries.

An especially interesting and colorful feature of the festival period will be the annual celebration of Mardi Gras, the gay, exciting carnival Mobile has enjoyed for one hundred and twenty-three years.

Mardi Gras parades will begin around February 15 and continue daily until Mardi Gras (Fat Tuesday), March 2nd.

The City of Mobile, which had its first azaleas brought over from France in 1754 by Fifise Langlois, adopted the azalea as its official flower in 1913 and a little later local horticulturists developed a new species, a watermelon pink azalea which they named "The Pride of Mobile."

In 1932, Walter D. Bellingrath, one of the city's leading citizens, opened his sixty acre fishing camp 20 miles south of Mobile to the public. Today, Bellingrath Gardens, a year-round attraction with 250,000 azalea bushes, representing 150 varities, are world famous and the gardens are at the peak of their beauty during the Azalea Trail Festival. Camellias also star in this floral exhibit and are in bloom from September to April.

Sale of azaleas each year in the Mobile area runs well into the millions of dollars and the city is generally known as "The Azalea Capitol of the World."

Mobilians are old hands at the Azalea Trail Festival, which was originated by and is conducted today by the Mobile Junior Chamber of Commerce, and visitors who come to this historic city during the Silver Anniversary Festival will see why Mobilians thump their chests about the Azalea Trail, "America's loral Extravaganza."

FLOWERS FOR TILLIE

By John Connolly

JANET opened the door almost before the bell had stopped ringing. She smiled pleasantly at the short, thin young man with the startled expression who stood in the hallway.

"Oh," said the young man.

"Why you must be the Killer," said Janet excitedly. "Come in, come in. Sit down a minute and I'll get your flowers."

"Killer? Flowers?" the young man stammered. "I'm looking for Miss Tillie Rogers."

"Oh, I forgot," Janet said. "You don't know yet, do you?"

"Don't know what?" the young man asked as he stepped inside. He looked fully puzzled.

"Well, you see, it's this way," Janet began chattering away. "My name's Janet Clark, and Tillie and I work in the same store downtown. She's been looking for another place to live for months; and we had an agreement that if she found one I could move in here."

"Then she's moved."

"Yes," Janet continued. "Yesterday she found the cutest little apartment, just what she wanted. She had to occupy the new place right away, so we helped move each other this morning. Now Tillie's out of here and I've taken over." Janet smiled happily as she talked, as if moving into a new apartment were one of life's more joyous occasions. "Your flowers came this afternoon," she said. "The delivery boy just handed them over and I thought they were for me, so I opened them by mistake. They're very nice, Killer."

The young man sat awkwardly on the divan, his cheeks growing redder while Janet talked.

Janet rattled on. "If I could only remember her darned new address, but I have a terrible memory. And the landlady doesn't know either. I guess we'll have to wait until tomorrow unless she phones me or something," she said contritely. Then, looking appraisingly at her visitor, she added, "I must say you don't look much like a heavyweight boxer, Killer. You don't have any marks on your face or anything, and you don't look very heavy to me. I suppose a fighter's looks are deceiving when he isn't in the ring and wearing trunks and all. Still . . ."

The young man fought a visible struggle with his vocal apparatus and finally found his voice again. Showing signs of the strain, he said in a high voice, "Listen, there's some misunderstanding here. This killer business and the flowers, I don't know what you're talking about."

Janet's eyes widened as she looked at him, and she almost shook her head chidingly. "You just sit where you are," she said. "I'll get them for you."

Janet left the room through the swinging kitchen door and returned a moment later with a long narrow box bearing the flourishing imprint of "Vogel's," the finest florist in town. She removed the cover and handed the box to the young man. "Like I said, I opened them by mistake. I'm truly sorry. I thought you'd be around to pick up Tillie, so I kept the flowers for you."

The young man stared at the flowers, dumbly at first, and then he took a card out of the box.

"Dearest Tillie," it read. "American Beauties for my favorite American beauty, the most beautiful of them all. Hugs and kisses and all my love, "Killer" Kovarsky. P. S. If that jerk Roger bothers you again, phone me at once and I'll take care of him."

The young man stopped reading and snapped his head sharply, as if to clear it. "I've got to be going," he said in his thin voice.

"Why Killer," Janet exclaimed as he opened the door.

"I'm not Killer," he said before bolting out. "I'm Roger."

As the door slammed behind him, Janet sank into the divan in a fit of laughter. When she had herself under control she shouted toward the kitchen, "Okay, Tillie. The roses worked, you can come out now. The all clear just sounded."

My PET PEEVE
By W. Scott Boyd

MY SECRETARY handed me a list of what she called the 10 commandments for employers as drawn up by 100 secretaries of New York business executives.

This is the list:

1. Thou shalt take a course in penmanship.
2. Thou shalt not invade the sanctity of thy secretary's file cabinet
3. Thou shalt not mumble.
4. Thou shalt not chew the pencils and expect thy secretary to sharpen them.
5. Thou shalt remember that thy secretary is human and therefore not expect the impossible.
6. Thou shalt not commence to dictate after 4:30 p.m. (a penciled notation with 4 p.m. for my office).
7. Thou shalt keep sacred the coffee hour.
8. Thou shalt not bear false witness against thy secretary for things own errors.
9. Thou shalt not covet thy secretary's stapler nor her cigarettes.
10. Honor thy wonderful, intelligent, indefatigable, indispensable and beautiful secretary with a raise.

You know, I would fire that woman if I thought I could get anyone else to work for me.

Last Friday night Maplesville met Perry County High on the football field here. The game got off to a good start and was an interesting game all the way with a final score of 12-7 in favor of the Maplesville Red Devils. MHS band was on hand to give the boys a little music to pep them up. This was the first game they had won this season, and maybe the band being there was the cause. What about it boys? If they can win one time, they can do it again, if enough time and effort are put forth. band or no band. Perry County brought their band along and played also. Maplesville will be playing Holtville here this Friday night, Oct. 9. So be sure to go out and see if our boys will win again.

MACEDONIA NEWS

Sunday night just before BTU we had a special song, "Jesus Loves Me," by four of our young ladies, Misses Peggy Thacker, Emma Jean, Sue and Betty Ann Rasberry. A song very well sung and truly enjoyed by everyone.

The deacons met after church and discussed the buying of new song books. The church decided to buy the "Modern Hymnal" book.

There will also be a meeting Saturday night, Oct. 1, at 7:00 p.m. at the home of Mr. Pratt Crumpton. This is to be the Sunday School Adult Class and deacons. A preparatory meeting for next year. Mr. Pratt is our Adult Class teacher and wishes to plan with his class a way in which everyone will get a greater blessing from our Sunday School lessons each Sunday.

The Friday visitors of Mr. and Mrs. Jimmie Ward were Mr. and Mrs. T. I. Ward of Birmingham.

Mr. Hoyt and Miss Miriah Freeman's Sunday visitors were Mr. and Mrs. L. F. Kincaid and Betty, Mr. W. D. Nix and Mr. and Mrs. Stanley Hayes of Maplesville.

Mr. J. D. Hayes and Mr. Harold Hayes enjoyed a nice trip to North Carolina Wednesday to visit Mr. and Mrs. Douglas Hayes. Mrs. Hayes returned with them to spend two or three weeks with home folks while Mr. Hayes is out on field work. He is serving with the U. S. Marines.

Mr. and Mrs. Jimmie Ward and Mr. and Mrs. Ezra Moore and family from here, and the remainder of her children from elsewhere all gathered at the home of Mr. and Mrs. W. L. Garner of Maplesville to celebrate her seventy-first birthday. Everyone enjoyed themselves tremendously.

Mr. and Mrs. Carl McCarty visitd with Mr. and Mrs. Leonard Lenoir Sunday.

Rev. and Mrs. Clyde Finnley and Stevie and Mr. and Mrs. Pratt Crumpton had lunch with Mr. and Mrs. Elmer Crane Sunday.

Those from here attending the W. M. U. Association meeting to install new officers for the coming year were: Mesdames E. H. Crane, Coy Rasberry, Jimmie Ward, Doyle Thacker, and Miss Miriah Freeman.

There have been fourteen new members by baptism and two by letter to come into our church this year. Let us welcome these into our church and into our hearts for it is you and I who make a church.

Excessive speed is a contributing factor in 47 per cent of Alabama's traffic accidents which kill one or more persons.

New Men and New World
Lesson for October 18: Matthew 5: 13-16; II Corinthians 5: 17-19; James 2: 14-18
Golden Text: Matthew 5: 16

The lesson easily divides itself into three divisions, each dealing with an important phase of Christian life. The first is the life of the Christian in his influence over others. Salt is a saving thing in the curing of meats. So is a Christian a saving person in the presence of others, saving them from evil and leading them to the right. Light has been a symbol among men from remote ages, being used to illustrate life. As the light dispels the shadows as it drives the night away, so the good man's life, his manner of living can light the way to God. It is often better to see how a thing is done than to hear a hundred instructions. A Christian shows men how to live and they glorify God in the new way they live and in their gratitude and joy.

The second section of the lesson concerns the character of the man who is a Christian. In Christ he becomes a new man—old things are done away and all things become new.

The third section concerns man's relation to the needs of others and his responsibility to serve them in any way possible. James shows that there is an intimate connection between faith and practical godliness. Faith should lead to good works and without works faith is dead, being alone. The men who can stand the test in these matters will do much toward making a new world.

Farm Fires Take Heavy Life And Property Toll

Auburn, Ala. — Every day 100 farm fires take the lives of 10 U. S. farmers.

And at least 90 per cent of these fires could be prevented by eliminating dangers around the farm, says S. R. Doughty, API Extension soil conservationist.

He lists eight principal fire hazards and their remedies as a guide in cleaning up farmsteads during this national fire prevention week.

(1) Careless smoking habits. Make sure cigarettes are out before discarding them. Don't smoke in barns or other places where there are inflammable materials. (2) Accumulatiins of debris. Clean up the house and other buildings.

(3) Improper storage of gasoline and kerosene and the use of flammable cleaning fluids. Store gasoline and kerosene away from main buildings, preferably underground. Use non-flammable cleaners. (4) Careless handling of matches. Keep matches in metal containers where children can't reach them.

(5) Dirty or defective chimneys, lamps, engines, and machinery and defective electrical appliances and frayed cords. Keep equipment clean and make repairs promptly. (6) Flammable wood shingle roofs. Use fire-resistant asphalt shingles or asbestos, slate, or other fire-resistant roofing. (7) Improperly cured hay in barns. Cure hay thoroughly and keep it dry. (8) Lightning. Use lightning rods with good ground and metal connections on all main buildings.

COLLEGE DRAFT TESTS

The fourth series of college qualification tests will be held November 19, 1953, and April 22, 1954, at more than 900 testing centers throughout the country, according to Selective Service announcement. Some 438,000 Students already have taken the tests with about 162,000 deferred from the draft to finish their education. Some 500,00 will have taken the tests by next spring, it is forecast. Information about the tests can be obtained at local draft boards.

The age group of 25 to 34 years is the most susceptible to traffic accidents in Alabama. It is hardest hit by deaths and injuries, and also in drivers involved in accidents.

LAFF OF THE WEEK

"I dare you to say that to my face and see what kind of meat you get, Mrs. whoever-you-are!"

Here Are Some New Uses For Old Picture Frames

"They can often be remade into new frames for copies of good pictures or inexpensive, decorative prints," suggests the home leader.

"You can remove finish and repaint, cover with cloth for an interesting effect, remove ornamentation, restore natural wood, or give them an antique finish.

Homemakers can cut old frames down, trim off broken edges or undesired moldings, or even cut apart a very ornate frame to make two or three new ones. "Since it is difficult to cut and put together an attractive picture frame," concludes Miss Peavy, "it pays to have it done unless you are equipped with a suitable workshop."

Sideswiping collisions of meeting cars are the most common type of two-vehicle rural accidents in Alabama. Rear-end collisions are the second most frequent.

$90 Spent Annually By Average American Family Due To Highway Carelessness

Direct or hidden costs of street and highway accidents caused by too much speed and careless driving and walking habits are draining $90 from the average American family's purse every year.

In 31 states the costs are above national average of $89.60 for a family of four. The figure runs above $100 for the average family group in 17 of these states. And it ranges all the way up to -399.44 in Nevada, or well over $1 per day per family in that state, according to Paul H. Blaisdell, public safety director of the Association of Casualty and Surety Companies, who has made a state-by-state study of the economic losses in automobile accidents and how they affect every American family.

Families in all but five states are laying out an average of more than $1 a week as their share of the direct or indirect costs of highway accidents, even though specific bills for these losses are never sent to their homes, Mr. Blaisdell pointed out. The charges are passed on to the average family through increased taxes, wage losses, costs of insurance, medical and hospital bills, automobile and property damage repair charges and other items, he said, whether or not the accidents they are paying for reached into their own family circle.

"The average American family is totally unaware that the highway accidents they read about every day represent economic waste that eventually they are called upon to help pay for at the rate of about $95,000 for every person killed in an accident," said Mr. Blaisdell. "In 1952 there were 38,000 fatalities, which, besides the huge loss of human life, entailed economic costs running to nearly $4,000,000,000 that we must all pay for.

"If the motor vehicle death toll exceeds 40,000 in 1953 or 1954, which seems likely unless drastic steps are taken to stop the ever increasing highway slaughter, the 2,000 additional fatalities will increase the overall costs of accidents to American families $190,000,000 a year. This amounts to about $1.25 additional per person, or $5 per family of four annually, on top of the 1952 costs of nearly $90 per family."

Alabama ranks No. 13 in the 48 states: 603 motor vehicle deaths in 1952; $74.80 accident cost per family of four.

PLATTER CHATTER

COLUMBIA: Percy Faith comes up with a fine instrumental arrangement of "Elaine" . . . Back has "Rosa Maria," not to be confused with the operetta tune, "Rosemarie" . . . Champ Butler does a creditable job on "Ya Ha Bibiti Baby" . . . Back has "It Happened Once Before" . . . Jimmy Boyd and Frankie Laine team up again in a real cutie, "Let's Go Fishin' " . . . "Poor Little Piggy Bank" is on the flip side . . . Sammy Kaye comes up with a beautiful new ballad, "In the Mission of St. Augustine" . . . "No Stone Unturned" backs it.

Continuing on Columbia, Andre Kostelanetz does his usual polished job on "Time On My Hands" with "Playing Around" on the reverse . . . Morton Gould does a super job, too, on "Music Box Tango" and "Wedding Dance" . . . A good pop that should hit big is "Rags to Riches" and it's very well done by Tony Bennett . . . It's backed by "Here Comes That Heartache Again."

CAPITOL: Dean Martin's latest is "Don't You Remember" with a rare sound these days—a saxophone slap-tongued throughout . . . Reverse has "If I Could Sing Like Bing" . . . Ferlin Huskey does well with a ditty called "How Much Are You Mine" . . . Flipover has "You'll Die a Thousand Deaths" . . . Boots Woodall peps up "It Might Have Been" . . . "Only Three Days" backs it . . . Leon Payne does an instrument in the "Sister Sue Polka" . . . Reverse has "If I Took the Time" . . . Both tunes were written by versatile Leon.

To plan thrifty meals for a whole day, keep in mind the following questions: Who is to eat this food, what kind of foods do they need, how much do they need, and what foods are already on hand?

Excepting dairy products, no other animal food is so necessary in the diet or so universally used as pork and pork products.

More Proof

Better Sow Ration Produces Healthier Pigs

ONE sure-fire way to get more profits from your market hog program is to do a better job of feeding your sows before the little pigs arrive.

Sows poorly fed during gestation can be counted on to wean a small litter of runty pigs. On the other hand, the right feed for sows goes a long way toward getting big healthy litters of money-making pigs.

G. B. Phillips, API Extension animal industry specialist, says these facts were given more proof by work of the USDA Experiment Station at Beltsville. Studies of 94 spring and fall litters from 50 sows revealed these facts:

1. Thirty per cent of the pigs from sows fed a 15 per cent protein gestation ration died before weaning time. One out of every four pigs died during the first week.

2. But those sows fed a 15 per cent gestation ration fortified with an antibiotic vitamin B-12 supplement had only half as many —15 per cent—of their pigs to die. An average of only one pig out of 10 died the first week. Results equally as good were gotten by feeding 20 per cent protein not fortified with the antibiotic.

3. Little pig losses were cut still further by adding the antibiotic supplement to the 20 per cent protein ration.

Phillips points out that these results prove the value of both higher protein feed and antibiotic supplement. "Perhaps the 20 per cent unfortified ration gave the same results as the 15 per cent fortified ration because the higher protein level was reached by adding vitamin-rich soybean meal, tankage, fish meal, and linseed meal. Better results from 20 per cent protein ration plus antibiotic supplement probably were due to the antibiotic's power to kill harmful bacteria."

Hog producers once thought (and some still do) that a little protein supplement hand-fed during the last one-third of the sow's gestation period was enough to turn out healthy pigs. But, says Phillips, research at Beltsville proves beyond doubt that adequate protein throughout the sow's entire gestation period is necessary for her to wean big litters of healthy pigs.

The Bureau of Agricultural Economics has estimated that 50 per cent of Alabama's 1953 corn corp is planted to hybrid varieties. In 1940 less than one-half of one per cent of our crop was planted to hybrids. The percentage has increased consistently each year since 1940. This is another figure representing progress on the farm fronts throughout Alabama.

Pretty Dairyman—

Eleven - year - old Linda Swann of Auburn Rt. 1 demonstrates how easy milking can be when it's done in a modern parlor type barn. The Lee County lass, a member of the Auburn 4-H Club, puts the machine on her prize animal that took grand champion honors in the county dairy show last year. The modern three-stanchion dairy parlor on her father's farm was built in 1952. Linda is the daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Fred Swann.

New Trends In Fall Fashions

By KATHLEEN THOMPSON, API Extension Clothing Specialist

EVERY woman wants an attractive wardrobe that flatters both her figure and her pocketbook. And this year's trends are tailor-made for the ladies to accomplish both these desires. Shoppers with an eye on brand new clothes and those with a plan to create a new outfit from last year's basic suit should be able to locate just what they want in today's stores.

Tailored and glamorous accessories are available for budget-minded women to put together a stylish outfit with a dress or suit that's already hanging in the closet. They can dress the garment up with a fashionable hat, belt, scarf, or pin and make it look like new.

Very popular this fall are jeweled scatter pins or single large pins which lend just the right finishing touch when placed near the shoulder of a dress. Wide, fitted leather belts for a tailored effect and belts equipped with dangles for dressing up an afternoon garment are also very popular this season. Colored jewelry and earrings of all shapes and sizes are excellent to furnish just the right amount of brightness to an ensemble.

As for colors, various shades of brown are the dominant selection for daytime wear. Black in polished fabrics and white are good for evening wear. Some shades of brown and black are being combined very successfully. Greens, blues, and reds are also evident on this year's fashion scene, and monotone color combinations are still good.

Wool and cotton tweeds, jerseys, and corduroys are appearing everywhere this month, and the trend is toward soft, polished fabrics. Dresses are fundamentally slim and often bloused above the waistline with contour belts. There is more design to necklines, and an "all-day" wear look is predominant. The lastest thing in suits calls for a fitted jacket, either stopping at the waistline or extending a little longer than last year's styles. Belts are being used with slim jackets. Box suit coats are straight and nipped off. A blouse matching the coat lining usually completes the stylish suit. Coats are gently flared or fitted, and the cardigan and chesterfield influence will be apparent.

Skirt lengths are about one inch longer than last year—ranging from 11 to 14 inches from the floor. However, each woman should select a length flattering to her and to the style of the garment. Pencil slim skirts should be worn a little longer than full skirts. Any significant change in skirt lengths is expected to enter American fashions gradually.

To top off the fashion scene are small head-hugging hats designed to fit this year's slim silhouette. Turbans, pillboxes, cloches, and the pixie crown are most popular, and wool jersey is the chosen fabric for trim, turbans, and snoods.

Alabama was the first state to make the sale or use of live virus in hog cholera vaccination illegal. State veterinary officials recommended the use of hog cholera vaccines to replace the deadly virus. These officials report that as a result of the anti-virus law, Alabama growers suffered less loss from cholera during the last year than in many years.

CHECKING THE RECORDS—The new club building in Chilton County's home demonstration field is setting a fast pace these days. According to Home Demonstration Agent Mary Louise Wright, three new clubs have been organized during the last two and one-half years. And she said plans are to start three more before this year is out. Shown checking the roll at a recent meeting of the newly organized Mt. Pisgah club are Mrs. Leo M. Headley, secretary, and Mrs. J. DeLoach, Jr., president of the organization.

For Best Results, Remove Grease Spots Immediately

Kathleen Thompson, API Extension clothing specialist, advises removing grease spots from clothes soon after they appear. Don't wait until the garment becomes even more soiled over the greasy area, making spot removal more difficult.

Animal fats or cooking oils spilled on nonwashable garments can be safely removed by the homemaker with carbon tetrachloride, probably the most practical and effective remover for this purpose. Carbon tetrachloride can be purchased at drug stores and is recommended because it's non-inflammable and not dangerously toxic when used in small amounts. Before using, test the spot remover on an inside seam of the garment to see if it produces undesirable effects, warns the clothing expert.

Miss Thompson continues by saying, "Carbon tetrachloride should be used in well ventilated rooms though, so a minimum of fumes will be inhaled—breathing them in close quarters may cause illness. Remember to keep the bottle tightly closed and out of reach of children."

To apply the remover, continues the clothing expert, lay the grease spot face down on a clean cloth pad over several thicknesses of cleansing tissue. Sponge it lightly from the back with cotton soaked in the carbon tetrachloride—this prevents rings. Sponge around the stain unevenly and work from the outside to the center with a whisking motion. Remove from pad and allow air circulation to evaporate the cleanser. Several small applications are usually more satisfactory than one big dose.

Spots of automobile grease or oil may also be satisfactorily removed by this method, she says.

Miss Thompson concludes by saying the above treatment can also be used to remove grease spots on dark cottons, even if they are washable.

For The New Home

Buy Furniture Wisely; It Should Last A Long Time

MOVING into a new home? Need to stretch your money to buy furnishings?

Then here are some tips from Alice Peavy, API Extension home furnishings specialist, that'll be of interest to you.

The home expert begins by saying that your first purchase should provide the necessities of lighting, sitting, and sleeping.

In the case of the living room these might include a good sofa, a comfortable chair, and an effective reading lamp. Unfinished or second-hand chairs, which you can use later in another part of the house, can be inexpensively finished to serve a double purpose. They make excellent extra chairs for the living room and can also serve as dining room chairs. A strongly constructed card table is quickly turned into a suitable dining room table.

She points out that small throw rugs may be used in the living room until you can substitute a large rug of good quality. Then shift the small rugs to the bedroom or to another appropriate setting. Eventually draperies may replace less expensive curtains in the living room, and another comfortable chair and an additional lamp may be purchased.

In the bedroom, adds Miss Peavy, turn your attention first to a good mattress and springs. Then with legs especially made to attach to springs you can make a comfortable, fashionable Hollywood bed. For an attractive dressing table drape an unfinished table or an old one with material that matches the bedspread.

Be content to use fewer good pieces until more can be fitted into the budget, says the house furnishing expert. Don't try to buy everything at once and have to settle for poor quality. And spend just a little money for things intended only for temporary use.

Miss Peavy concludes with this advice—be guided by simplicity. Try just as hard to keep the wrong things out as you do to bring the right things in. Clutter and confusion resulting from too many objects in one room spoil the entire effect. Almost any sparsely furnished room may be made comfortable and attractive with a few tasteful alterations.

American farmers, gardeners, and lawnkeepers used an all-time record of 22,432,418 tons of fertilizer in the 1951-52 crop year—1,441,024 more tons than they did the previous year.

A FREEZER FULL— Mrs. Leo Headley and her daughter, Mira Sue of Mt. Pisgah, have made sure the family will have plenty of good fresh vegetables, fruits, and meat next winter. They were busy putting these foods in their home freezer all summer. The Chilton County mother-daughter team froze 438 pounds of vegetables, 110 pounds of fruits, and 70 pounds of fryers. THESE two figures loom big to me: (1) prices received by U. S. farmers have declined 17 per cent in two years and (2) prices paid by farmers have declined only 3 per cent. It is clear, therefore, that farmers are in a hard squeeze.

The price situation is forcing them to buy less and increase their debts. Already this pressure on farmers is being felt by business and manufacturers, especially those of farm equipment.

No one knows when this squeeze will end. We hope that it'll be immediately. It threatens serious repercussions in general. It is similar, but not as big, as what happened in the twenties.

HUGH COMER of Avondale Mills, Sylacauga, is an ardent booster of irrigation. He knows its importance, and he is aware of the big opportunities for irrigation on Alabama farms.

I agree heartily with Mr. Comer on this. We have neglected irrigation too long, and it's cost us a lot of money.

Time and again I have seen parched fields and gardens in Alabama. The owners could have turned these losses into profits by irrigating, and that's the main reason why I agree with Mr. Comer in his appeal for much more irrigation on many more Alabama farms.

Many farmers either have water available from streams or can impound it from rains for a good job of irrigation. The equipment is expensive, but it'll pay big if done wisely and properly.

FARMERS of Cullman County have a new agricultural project—pimento pepper. They've been growing it several years. This year they have between 4,000 and 5,000 acres, which is a big increase over last year. County Agent H. G. Pinkston says that it is a profitable crop. Most of it is processed at a local canning plant, which cans and preserves peppers, tomatoes, peas, okra, and beans.

Those 4,000 to 5,000 acres were expected to bring the farmers about $1,500,000 this year. This is based upon three tons of paprika per acre and $100 for each ton.

Worth Its Money

Hybrid Corn Varieties Up State's Corn Yield

ALABAMA farmers made a whopping corn crop this year. Right now, farm experts estimate the yield will average 23 bushels an acre—the highest on record.

Playing a big part in this increased production were hybrid varieties. According to Ralph Jones, API Extension seed specialist, 50 per cent of the total corn acreage in Alabama this year was planted to hybrids. In 1946 only three per cent was in hybrids.

And as farmers continue to make 15 to 20 per cent more corn from adapted hybrids than from good open pollinated varieties, Jones believes the hybrid acreage will continue to increase.

Pointing out the advantages of hybrids, he says vigor that's bred into hybrid corn enables the plants to make more efficient use of the plant food and water in the soil and thereby increase the yields over those of open pollinated varieties.

He emphasized, however, that farmers must buy new seed each year, for seed from the corn they grow does not have hybrid vigor. Considerable research has proved that farmer-grown hybrid seed corn, when planted from the crib, will cut yields about 20 per cent the first year. So it's obvious that good hybrid corn is worth the difference in price.

But good hybrids don't just happen, says Jones. "It takes lots of time and hard work to develop them. And that's why hybrid seed cost more than open pollinated varieties. For instance, developing Dixie 18, one of the leading varieties for Alabama, involved hundreds of trial selections and finally six to eight years to purify the inbred lines before they could be used. After development of the parent lines (most of our commercial hybrids are made up to four inbred parents) lots of work still remained."

Jones' report on hybrids continued:

"First, single-cross parent lines had to be made. This was a technical operation; consequently, the parent was produced by the Alabama Agricultural Experiment Station. (Foundation seed stock organizations also develop hybrid parents.) And when the single-cross parents were finally placed in the grower's hand, many tedious operations still had to be carried out that required lots of labor and supervision.

"The corn field was isolated so the producer could control pollination. He then planted six rows of the female parent and two rows of the male parent in alternate sections. The corn field was handled just like any other corn field until tasseling time. It was then the extra care was given to hybrid seed production.

"To keep female plants from inbreeding, tassels were cut before they started shedding pollen (as soon as they appeared). This operation was performed from three to 10 times on various farms throughout the state. By cutting the tassels out of the female plants, all of the seed corn was collected from the two rows of male plants, thus giving the proper cross. All corn made on the male rows was discarded and used for feed.

"Gathering seed corn got under way early in August. The corn was gathered and placed in drying bins where warm air was blown through it until it was thoroughly dry. Then the corn was shucked and shelled and run over the grader where the various grades were selected. From the grader the corn was bagged and tagged ready for market.

"During the entire growing and processing operation the corn was inspected by a member of the Alabama Crop Improvement Association. The inspector was charged with the responsibility of seeing that all growers carried out specifications of the association so the seed could be certified through the organization. Seedmen who followed recommendations were issued tags for their seed which bore the seal of the Alabama Crop Improvement Association.

"During 1953 eight producers grew approximately 4,000 acres of hybrid corn for use by farmers next year. Through the cooperative program conducted by the association and these growers, farmers can be sure they will get the best hybrid seed available for use in Alabama."

FOR LEISURE MOMENTS—When housework becomes a grueling job for Mrs. Curtis Wilkins of Troy Rt. 2, a short rest period in her cypress-paneled living room gives her the energy she needs to finish the work. This attractive room is part of a complete remodeling job done on the Coffee County home four years ago. It is also a good place for seven-year-old Linda Jean to do her school homework. Mrs. Wilkins and Linda Jean are shown here with a good book taking advantage of a few idle moments.

READY FOR MARKET—This stack of Dixie 18 hybrid seed corn (lower left) in the Riemer seed plant at Foley was tagged with Alabama Crop Improvement Association tags which indicate the seed were grown and processed according to the specifications of the organization. Through the cooperation of the Association and growers farmers are sure they are getting the best seed available for planting. Examining the seal on the tags are Bill Riemer (left) and R. R. Jones.

POND owners who have found small numbers of catfish and crappies in new ponds should try to remove them by trapping during fall and winter. Traps can be made two feet in diameter and five or six feet long of one-inch welded wire with inverted funnels. Such traps can also be used to harvest small numbers of bluegills for the table during fall and winter. The best bait is soybean cake. Traps should be checked daily or the fish may die and thus be unfit to eat.

GRAZING TO SPARE—One of the most important things in a successful cattle raising program is having plenty of home-raised feed. And of course good pasture is the cheapest feed that can be had, says George Baker (right), of Eutaw. He tells County Agent W. H. Johnson that his cattle have not been able to keep up with the grass on his farm this year. The dallis grass-white clover in this field produces calves that grade good to choice when they go to market.

THE BARN IS FULL TOO—George Baker of Eutaw makes sure his beef cattle have some feed during winter even if the pastures don't grow. Here his tenants are busy putting baled Johnson grass hay into the barn. The Greene County cattleman says plenty of feed is one of the important things that will help farmers make a profit on their cattle during low prices.

GOOD CATTLE ARE IMPORTANT—Raising good calves for market is a must when the prices are down. George Baker of Eutaw believes it's safer to grow calves than it is to buy steers. This nice grade cow and her calf are proof that plenty of good grazing along with fine animals adds up to a profitable business.

Cheer Up

There's Still Money In Beef Cattle

ARE you a southern cattleman who's discouraged over beef cattle prices? Are you wondering about your future in the business?

They're selling low. Sure. But suppose the market doesn't go up any time soon? Maybe it'll even come down some more. Then what will you do?

It's impossible to foresee just what's going to happen, but at least some of the best cattle raisers in Alabama believe southern livestockmen can produce beef as cheaply as folks in any other part of the country. In fact, they see prospects for profits in the beef cattle industry even at present prices.

One such optimist is George Baker near Eutaw, Alabama. He's well qualified to make such a prediction too, for he has been a successful cattleman since the early days of the beef business in this state.

Back in 1939 he started out on an old run-down farm, hoping to get $40 a head for his first calf crop. That fall he saw his baby beef sell for $2 per head under his goal. This didn't discourage him though; he went right on growing more calves. Each year the West Alabama cattleman kept putting his money back on his pastures in the form of fertilizer.

And it wasn't long until Baker's cattle growing system was paying off. The market got better and better, and in 1951 he sold his calves for an average of $156 around. That year he made a net profit of $56 per head.

All this has led him to believe that Alabama cattlemen can grow beef as cheaply as farmers in any other part of the country.

Mr. Baker says these nine points will be followed on his farm during the next year in order to continue making profits from his herd. And he believes they'll work for you.

1. Either buy or save good grade heifers with high milking qualities to replace cows which will be culled.

2. Don't overstock pasture. Balance the feed and cattle to maintain plenty of grazing for cows in case a dry spell comes.

3. Use plenty of fertilizer to grow good pastures. Fertilizer is much cheaper than beef. Get the maximum benefit from fertilizer by testing the soil to determine the amount and kind to use.

4. Breed cows to good type, fast growing, rugged bulls. This will produce calves that grow fast.

5. Put up three tons of grass silage or one ton of hay per brood cow. When the pasture gets in its peak growing season, save the surplus grazing for insurance against dry spells.

6. Stay on the brood cow and calf system of growing beef. It's usually safer.

7. Grow all calves out until they weigh at least 500 pounds. Breed cows for a minimum of summer calves.

8. Follow a good health program. Vaccinate calves for blackleg, malignant edema, and Bangs. Spray for external parasites and treat for worms.

9. Grow plenty of temporary grazing crops for the herd during summer and winter.

Mr. Baker concludes his advice to cattlemen, saying, "By all means do a good job with the points outlined here, and your chances of making a success in the beef production business are still very good."

Several more months of grazing may be obtained on sericea areas by overseeding them with rescue grass. The rescue grass should be planted on sericea immediately after frost, when competition from sericea ends. Try a few acres of this combination this fall.

COTTONSEED saved for planting next year's cotton crop should be stored in a dry, well-ventilated building. Just as soon as seed are dry and cured, a sample should be sent to the State Seed Testing Laboratory, State Department of Agriculture, Montgomery, Alabama, or to a private laboratory for a germination test. Then if seed show low germination (below 80 per cent) you will have time to secure seed from some other source.

SAVE Dixie Runner peanut seed, or arrange for certified seed of this variety for next year's crop. Try to plant a winter legume or other fall seeded crop on every acre where peanuts were dug.

INDICATIONS are that there will be a big demand for lespedeza sericea seed in the spring of 1954. If you have sericea which has produced seed, watch it closely and save all seed possible. Do not let seed shatter badly before harvesting.

CLOVER-GRASS permanent pasture seed can still be planted in most sections of the state during the first half of October if the seedbed has been properly prepared ahead of time. The right amounts of liming materials and fertilizers should be applied ahead of planting. Do a good job of distributing the seed and cover with a cultipacker or roller. Finish seeding clover-grass permanent pasture mixtures during the month of October. It is not too late to plant ladino clover or Louisiana type white clover on a well-prepared seedbed for hog grazing, particularly in central and south Alabama.

HATCHING eggs have been in very short supply each year during late summer. To supply eggs during this period, make plans to start a flock of pullets during the next few weeks.

ALABAMA cattlemen normally sell more calves in October than in any other month. Figures over a period of years show that it would pay to hold these calves for 60 days and give them a little grain in a creep and sell them after the fall market rush is over.

OCTOBER is usually one of the driest months of the year. So see that cattle always have plenty of clean water. Do not let them drink from mudholes—it may spread disease. This is a good time to fence off the pond and run a pipe over the dam to a trough below from which the cows may drink.

ALL cattle should be thoroughly treated with a spray containing DDT and BHC. This spray will help control screwworms, rid the cattle of lice before cold weather sets in, and protect them against other external parasites. If screwworms are known to be in your county, inspect every animal three times a week to see that the worms do not cause damage.

THERE is a big supply of pine seedlings available this fall. Farmers should submit orders now for delivery in December, January, or February.

1. VINES TAKE OVER CORN STALK—For three years Ray Pittman (right) and his father-in-law, E. O. McClure, of Jackson have been bothered with "wrap vines" reducing the efficiency of harvesting machines on their river bottom corn fields. The Clarke County farmers had spent as much as $8 per acre for hoeing and were still forced to spend five out of eight hours per day at harvest time pulling and cutting vines from the snapping roll. This year they received almost complete control, did no hoeing, and saved one plowing when they applied one and one-half pints of Esteron 44 with seven and one-half gallons of water per acre. Pittman shows County Agent O. C. Helms of Grove Hill how one of the corn stalks looks when no chemical is used.

2. VINE NET CUTS CORN PROFITS—Ray Pittman (above) of Jackson stands in knee-deep vines with which he and his father-in-law, E. O. McClure, fought a losing battle last year and the year before. This year they added a new twist to their corn production practices and won a victory. They sprayed each acre of their corn when it was almost waist high with one and one-half pints of Esteron 44 mixed in seven and one-half gallons of water. Notice the vine-free corn field in the background that would have been "bound up" had the Clarke County farmers not used the chemical weed control.

At Last

Chemical Frees Bottom Land Corn Of Vines

FORTUNATELY most Alabama farmers won't allow profit-stealing pests to linger in their fields very long. They know that as a rule it's less expensive to control pests than to let them dig deeper into their money bags. So when a weed or insect attempts to invade their fields, the farmers strike back.

For the past three years two South Alabama farmers, E. O. McClure and his son-in-law, Ray Pittman, have been faced with a weed problem. A tiny, but mighty, vine bound their corn so tightly that it cut their profits tremendously. The nutrients and moisture the plants robbed from the corn were really of minor importance. The main trouble from the "wrap vines" came at harvest time.

For instance, Pittman said it took five out of every eight hours to keep the snapper roll cleared of vines, not to mention the amount of corn left in the field. So the economical Clarke County farmers ran hogs into their fields to eat the unharvested corn.

This year they decided to really go after the pest. They knew hoeing wasn't the answer, for they had tried it and it didn't help much. The hoe hands missed some of the vines, and more came up after the hoeing operation.

So one night after the corn—and the vines—were making good growth, Pittman went by to see O. C. Helms, the local county agent, and talked the problem over with him. Together they planned a method of declaring war on the weeds—with chemicals. But of course the big question that hung over their heads for several days was this—would it work? Pittman agreed that it at least was worth a try.

So after looking around, he found a second hand boom-type sprayer which he bought for $150. Next, they ordered enough Esteron 44 to cover the 50-acre corn field. By this time the corn was about three and a half weeks old and slightly less than waist high—just right to kill the weeds easily and uniformly. (To kill the vine, and practically all other broad leaf plants, the chemical must fall in the bud.)

Pittman knew that one and one-half pints of Esteron 44 could be mixed with enough water to make it easy and convenient to use on an acre. So he calibrated his machine and set the 12 nozzles which were mounted on a 21-foot boom to put out seven and one-half gallons of water per acre. Then he mixed one and a half pints of Esteron 44 with that amount of water and set his tractor at a three-mile-per-hour pace spraying six rows at a time with two nozzles per row. At this rate he covered about two acres per hour.

Then the final job for the hopeful farmers was to wait and see if their new way of controlling vines would be a success. It was! Within hours the vines began to lose their grip and wilt away, leaving the corn free again.

It was, of course, good news to find that the experiment had worked, but when Pittman and McClure found the total cost of the chemical for the entire 50 acres amounted to only $37.50 or $.75 per acre, then they were really happy. For they knew there would be no more $8 per acre unsatisfactory hoeing labor involved in their corn production program.

Because of the wet river bottomland, the crop-livestock producers were forced to stay out of their fields this year with the corn planters until the first part of June. For that reason they were afraid to use any fertilizer, and McClure and Pittman don't expect to get top yields. But even though river bottom farmers can't always plant and cultivate their fields along with their nearby neighbors, Helms pointed out one great advantage lowland farmers have. He said every time they spend one dollar for fertilizer they get twice as much for their money as the upland farmers.

Maybe Pittman and McClure won't fill their cribs to the brim this year, but they summed up their corn production records this way: "We expect to harvest one of the easiest crops of corn that we've ever produced, and we also believe we'll have enough to supply the supplemental grain feedings this winter for our 118 grade Herefords.

Linoleum Lasts Longer When Given Proper Care

MANY homemakers wash linoleum floors too often with soap that is too strong, says Stella Mitchell, API Extension home management specialist.

"Constant washing with strong soap or abrasive powders can actually injure floor coverings," she warns. "In time this practice removes the pattern from felt base coverings. The texture is weakened in inlaid linoleum, and it becomes spongy and loses its color.

"When your floor needs washing, use a mild soap and warm water," continues Miss Mitchell. "Be sure water doesn't get underneath the seams of the linoleum. After washing, rinse thoroughly and then dry.

"Put on several coats of a high-gloss, self-polishing wax that's hard enough to protect the floor from marks and water spots. Allow floor to dry between coats. Once you've given your linoleum this treatment, one coat of wax every few weeks in sufficient.

Present reports and observations indicate a possible bumper crop of large partridge peas. Farmers who have good stands of this excellent quail food crop should make plans to combine seed for sale. Harvest and seed handling recommendations may be obtained from your county agent.

Pete Turnham, API Extension assistant dairyman, explains that a 900-pound cow on excellent pasture will eat about 75 to 80 pounds of grass per day. "With this excellent pasture or its equivalent in hay or silage, she can produce about 14 pounds of 4.5 per cent milk daily," he says. "But by adding about seven pounds of grain to her ration, she can produce 30 pounds."

The same cow fed only average pasture or its equivalent in hay or silage would eat about 55 pounds daily—and produce only 2.8 pounds of 4.5 per cent milk daily. Then, says Turnham, it would take about 10 pounds of grain for her to produce 30 pounds of milk.

Cows managed properly will produce up to their inherent ability. Good cows start with good breeding. Now is the time to plan a vigorous promotion program to get the largest possible number of cows bred artificially in your county.

DISHWASHING THE EASY WAY—No more dishpan hands for Mrs. Roy Alexander of the Prairie-Eden community since she moved into her new house last May. The Hale County housewife had a dishwasher installed in her kitchen that does the job for her. Mrs. Alexander is a member of the Prairie-Eden Home Demonstration Club which she helped organize 10 years ago. This year she is serving as Farm Bureau chairman for the group.

He Likes The Change

Former Cotton Farmer Likes Dairying Better

MASON WARREN of Enterprise Rt. 2 doesn't have any boll weevil worries. In fact, his cotton dusting equipment is even getting a bit rusty from lack of use.

How does this Coffee County farmer make boll weevil control so simple on his 123-acre farm? The answer is easy. He switched his cotton over to pastures for dairy cattle. Warren admits that when other farmers of the area were worrying about cotton yields this year, he was mighty glad he could go out and get his profits each day. "Waiting six or eight months to see if the land is paying off can make a farmer a mighty impatient man," declares this experienced land tiller.

The change from cotton to dairy cows came as a result of a labor shortage and increased costs of cotton production. Warren figures he is making as much or more than ever before from the 15 acres of cotton land now in pasture crops. The 22 head of dairy cattle on the place get plenty of grazing from about 50 acres of crimson clover, white clover, bahia grass, ryegrass, and oats. In addition the oat fields are harvested for grain after grazing in the spring.

A new pasture crop on the Warren farm that looks mighty good to the dairyman is coastal bermuda grass. Although the total acreage of this crop is only about one-half acre, Warren plans to use it as a nursery patch to get more acres into the crop.

Another part of the dairy cows' daily ration is millet silage. Each day part of the seven-acre field is harvested, chopped in a silage cutter, and fed to the cows. The feeding program is balanced with concentrates of protein supplement and hay.

In addition to the dairy cow herd, which will be increased to about 30 cows in the next few years, the farmer gets another pay-check from peanuts. This crop grows on 23 acres of the best land on the farm and generally makes around a half ton of nuts per acre. The peanuts are fertilized with a mixture of equal parts of basic slag and 4-10-7 applied at the rate of about 500 pounds per acre. Warren hopes to see a good yield when digging begins in late September.

MORE HELP FOR PEANUT HARVEST—The only time that additional help is required on the 123-acre Warren farm is during peanut harvest. A new cropping system with dairy cows in place of cotton has made labor problems almost disappear. Here looking over the peanut crop with Warren (left) is Assistant County Agent Paul Mills.

With peanuts and dairy cows as the two main crops, the grower finds that labor problems are fewer than before. "Now I have fewer seasonal rushes than I did when all the work had to be done in the spring, summer, and fall. The dairy cows are a year around job." Between milking times, set at four o'clock mornings and afternoons, there's plenty of time to take care of the row crops and pasture land.

And with the new farming system Warren thinks he can do all the jobs around the farm without hiring additional help except to harvest peanuts. "These advantages make farm life more pleasant," says the South Alabama dairyman who once had lots of labor troubles.

Weevils in corn will cause serious losses this winter and next spring unless they are controlled. Weevils migrate from infested grain to the corn fields about the time corn is getting hard. Clean out cribs and get rid of old infestation. Spray crib with DDT. Use 10 pounds of 50 per cent wettable powder in 100 gallons of water.

BETWEEN-MEAL SNACK — The Raif Wilson family of Jack Route 1 in Coffee County are mighty proud of their newly remodeled home. Whether for a regular meal or a mid-morning snack, the kitchen is one of the favorite spots of Mrs. Wilson and her three daughters. Cabinets built all around the walls and appliances in a U-shaped arrangement provide extra convenience that saves steps. The remodeled home also has a living room, dining room, den, garage, three bedrooms, and two baths. Here waiting patiently while Mrs. Wilson prepares a sandwich are, left to right, Nan Rae, 13; Jerrie, 10, and Ginger 6.

RECIPE FOR OCTOBER

WITH more cattle on farms than ever before the supply of beef is plentiful, and homemakers now have ample opportunities to utilize the various cuts in their family menus.

Take hamburgers, for instance. They save time, energy, and fuel, and what's more they're delicious and inexpensive. Here are a number of appealing ways to dress up hamburgers for your family:

Plain Hamburger Patties—Mix lightly 1 pound ground beef with 1 teaspoon salt, ¼ teaspoon pepper, 2 to 3 tablespoons minced onion. Shape into 4 to 5 patties. Brown in frying pan in a little hot fat, broil in range broiler, or grill over hot coals. Takes about 5 minutes on each side. Serve on hot toasted buns spread with butter or margarine.

Spreads for Hamburger Buns—Vary hamburgers with different spreads on the buns (or enriched bread slices or split English muffins). Try a spread of softened butter or margarine, seasoned with onion or garlic salt and horseradish or prepared mustard.

Hamburger Broiled on Bun or Bread—Spread seasoned uncooked hamburger on bun which has been spread with butter or margarine, or on bread which has been toasted on the other side. If desired, top with large slice each of onion and tomato, and cover with thin slices of cheese. Broil and serve hot.

Topped Hamburger Patties—When almost done, spread cheese topping on hamburger patties and finish broiling. Try for topping: Sharp cheese spread with Worcestershire sauce, or blue cheese blended with softened butter or margarine and Worcestershire sauce.

Or, top cooked patties with a mound of onion rings cooked slowly in fat until clear; with coleslaw; with cheese slices (melted or not); with chili sauce; with grilled slices of pineapple.

JUST WATCHING "MOMMIE" SEW—Little Marylan Robertson of Prairie-Eden has taken her regular place at the machine to watch the skillful hands of her mother, Mrs. G. W. Robertson. The Hale County housewife, an expert at the machine, was named county sewing winner in the adult dress revue last summer. She will represent her county in the state revue at the annual Farm Bureau meeting later this year. In addition to making most of her family's clothes, she also helps other club members with their sewing problems. Mrs. Robertson is a member of the Prairie-Eden Home Demonstration Club.

The Big Crop

For Highest Profits; Feed Corn To Livestock

NOW that Alabama farmers have made a big corn crop and have most of it in the barn, their thoughts are turning to ways of making the most profitable use of their grain.

County agents and API Extension Service specialists have outlined the place of corn in livestock and poultry feeding programs.

Poultry. "Poultrymen should take advantage of the abundant corn crop by planning a feeding program containing a high percentage of corn," says Poultryman John Weeks. "However, in using large amounts of corn," he adds, "producers should be sure ration balance is maintained with proper vitamin, protein, and mineral supplements.

"Best use can be made of corn," continues Weeks, "by feeding it with commercially-prepared high protein supplements according to manufacturer's directions. In most communities local mixers are available to mix broiler supplements properly with corn.

"Egg producers can also take advantage of this corn situation by using a high-protein supplement and corn and other grains fed free choice, or they can mix the supplement with ground corn and then feed additional grain as a scratch feed."

Dairying. Dairyman John Parrish remarks: "The most palatable of all cereal grains fed dairy cows, corn is widely used by Alabama dairymen when the feed-milk ratio is favorable. The first 20 pounds of milk produced by the cow should come from grazing, silage, or hay. Production above this level will require grain feeding.

"If cows have good grazing or good quality legume hay, the following ration is profitable," adds Parrish. "Mix 400 pounds of corn and cobmeal with 350 pounds of ground oats, 250 pounds of cottonseed meal, and 10 pounds of salt. Give this ration to dairy animals on only fair grazing or if mixed hay is being fed: 350 pounds of corn and cobmeal, 350 pounds of ground oats, 300 pounds of cottonseed meal, and 10 pounds of salt."

Beef Cattle. According to W. H. Gregory, beef cattle marketing specialist, creep-fed calves weigh 60 pounds more at weaning time than those that are not creep-fed. "Of course, they were fatter, too," says the livestockman. "And at present market prices fat is more important than ever before because there is about a four cent per pound spread between commercial and choice calves, the principal difference being the degree of fatness of the calf.

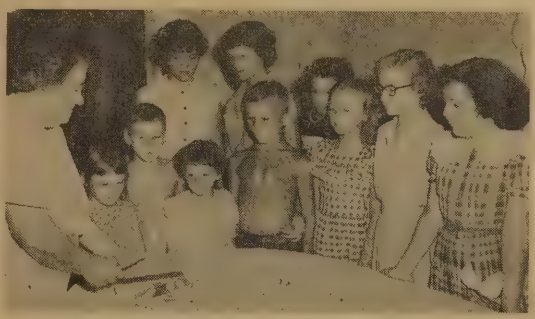
"Creep-fed calves are better for the butcher," adds Gregory. "They hang up firmer carcasses. And they're better for the feeder because they already know how to eat and don't lose so much weight going on feed."

Hogs. Animal Industry Specialist G. B. Phillips has this advice for hog growers: "If fed alone, it takes 11 or more bushels of corn to make 100 pounds of gain. When properly balanced, about half this much corn makes the same 100 pounds of pork. A corn-alone ration is short of protein, minerals, and vitamins—things pigs must have to make good growth and gains.

"If possible," adds the hog expert, "fatten pigs out on green legume grazing and full feed of a balanced ration of corn, protein supplement, mineral mixture, salt, and water."

Learning To Paint

Front row, Scarlet Broughton, Ronald Hill, Linda Walker, Charles Renfro, Faye Brown, Shirley Avery, and Eva Avery.



New Use For Old Radios—

When radios in Mobile County stop playing, they don't quit for long. Members of the West Toulminville Home Demonstration Club are constantly searching for old radios that have been tossed aside. When a music-maker is located, the farm and home leaders ask that it be donated to the club for a very worthy cause. Then H. E. Webb, husband of one of the members of the local club, makes the necessary repairs free of charge with parts purchased by the club. After the mechanism is thoroughly checked, it is given to some lucky member of the Mobile County home for the aged. So far, the project has supplied four of the shut-ins with a radio. The club's goal is to see that each of the 48 residents has a radio if he wants one. County and community leaders on hand for the last presentation were, left to right, G. A. Toulmin, county commissioner, Miss Mona Whatley, home agent, Mrs. Mary Langdon, the resident of the home who received the radio, Mrs. H. E. Webb, a local club member who made the presentation, and Mrs. W. F. Kasten, Jr., president of the club.

Tests Prove

Here's How To Store Your Sericea Seed

By H. S. WARD, JR.
API Experiment Station

CLEANED and scarified sericea lespedeza seed may be stored for a year without injury to germination if they (1) are not overscarified, (2) contain less than 9.5 per cent moisture when stored, and (3) are stored in a weather-proof structure.

If the moisture content of the seed cannot be lowered to less than 9.5 per cent by natural curing or artificially drying at 110° F., sericea seed must be stored unhulled at the lowest possible moisture content. Not more than 30 days before planting time the unhulled seed should be properly scarified.

Seed Moisture Content (Per Cent)	Germination After Being Stored For A 12-Month Period
	Unhulled (Per Cent)	Scarified (Per Cent)
13.0	75.0	32.0
11.0	79.0	37.0
9.5	82.0	75.0
8.1	95.0	91.0

The table shows that after a 12-month storage period scarified and unhulled seed did not differ in germination at the moisture level of 8.1 per cent. When the moisture content was above 8.1 per cent, unhulled sericea seed had higher germination than those scarified.

The seed used in this study were properly scarified—but not overscarified—in a commercial scarifier. Other studies have shown that overscarafied sericea seed, although at a safe storage moisture level, will quickly die in storage or produce abnormal seedlings.

Predictions about game population this season are pure estimates based on observations. However, quail, turkey, deer and squirrel should be as abundant as last year's crop. And reports from surrounding states indicate a possible increase in mourning doves. Duck numbers will be equal to, or slightly lower, than those of last year.

HOME CANNED AND GOOD TO EAT—Mrs. Marshall Johnson of Greensboro, Rt. 2, is proud of the 170 quarts of fruits and vegetables she has canned this summer. Here the Hale County farm lady looks at a can of delicious corn that will help make a mighty good meal when winter comes. Mrs. Johnson, president of the Antioch Home Demonstration Club, has been a member of the organization since it started more than 10 years ago. She is also pantry storage demonstrator for her club.

Research Results

A NEW SUGAR CANE VARIETY, C. P. 36/111, has been tested on the Brewton Experiment Field for the past four years. This variety was first released by the United States Sugar Plant Field Station at Meridian, Mississippi, for seed cane increase in the fall of 1950. In tests in Alabama and Mississippi it has equaled or surpassed C. P. 29/116 and Co. 290 (best varieties previously grown) in syrup produced per acre and in stubbling qualities. Its straight stalks with long joints greatly facilitate stripping and milling operations. A limited supply of seed cane of this variety will be available this fall. Growers who wish to obtain seed cane of this variety should contact their county agents.

PEANUTS NEED CALCIUM FOR BEST YIELDS. Results of cooperative farm experiments with lime and gypsum for peanuts indicates that about 40 per cent of the soils on which peanuts are grown in Southeastern Alabama are deficient in calcium for best peanut yields. Of 35 locations tested during a four-year period, increases in yields of 245 to over 600 pounds of peanuts per acre were obtained at 12 of the locations. The soils at most of the other locations contained sufficient calcium for normal peanut yields.

BAIT THE FARM POND for a rapid catch this fall. Several areas along the edge of the pond baited with soybean or cottonseed cake will make fall fishing better. To bait the hole, break the cake into four to six-inch squares and place from one to three pieces in each of the selected areas. Baiting should be done two to three times weekly.

APHIDS OR PLANT LICE CAN BE EFFECTIVELY CONTROLLED in the fall garden. Results of experiments show that weekly applications of one per cent rotenone dust will prevent aphids from becoming numerous enough to do serious damage. After aphids show up in damaging numbers, they can be controlled by the use of three per cent nicotine or one per cent parathion dust.

FEEDING GRAIN TO DAIRY HEIFERS over six months of age on pasture resulted in larger, thriftier appearing animals than when no grain was fed. Grain consumption varied with the quality and the quantity of pasture available. Grain-fed heifers reached breeding weight at an earlier age than those not receiving grain.

WILD FIRES KILL both small pines and hardwoods. After fire, hardwood sprouts grow rapidly; but pines, as a rule, do not sprout. On experimental areas, which were repeatedly burned, hardwoods continue to occupy more space and pines have almost vanished. The small hardwoods are of poor quality and will continue to be defective because their trunks have been damaged by fires.

MOST PEANUT FARMERS in Alabama with small peanut enterprises cure peanuts in stacks, while 26 per cent of those with large peanut enterprises use windrows. Although windrowed peanuts have a considerably higher initial moisture content, there are only minor differences in sound, mature kernels between windrowed and stacked peanuts.

Folks and Things ABOUT TOWN

—By Ben

Today is the day. Big meeting of the Parent-Teachers Association at Chilton County High School and you are invited to attend. The last meeting wasn't attended too well and the members are all out rooting for a good crowd to be on hand today. Our very popular Congressman Armistead Selden will be guest speaker for the meeting. Come out and hear him.

That Reader's Digest gets around. The Chilton County News was quoted in the October issue and we are receiving letters from north, east, south and west. Most of the letters are extremely complimentary and we do appreciate all the nice things that have been said by the local readers who have been kind enough to call or mention seeing the item. We received one letter from a fellow up in Pennsylvania who said it started him thinking, and it sure did. He thought for over three pages in the letter he wrote us. Now if a halt-dozen lines could cause that, we got to be more careful.

Johnnie wasn't a religious boy but one day he told his mother he wanted to become a minister.

"Why, Johnnie, that's wonderful," his mother enthused. "What made you decide that?"

Johnnie shrugged. "Well, I've got to go to church all my life anyway and it's harder to sit still and be quiet than to stand up and holler."

Hope you are enjoying these Tuesday newspapers. They bring you the doings of interest in the county over the week end before it gets too old. We're not trying to make it a big advertising edition although we would take advertising planned especially for it. Our main interest as we said is to get to you what happens in your county as early as possible. You can cooperate by calling 32 early Monday morning and telling us of the bit of news you know.

Mayor Fred Smith of Jemison, or we should say former Mayor Fred Smith of Jemison, has served his community well for many years and deserves a vote of gratitude from them. It is no easy life, this being a public official, and no one knows this fact better than a newspaperman. We congratulate Fred on his unselfish work for the Town of Jemison and wish him every success in his new position.

Some Timely Advice For Pecan Growers

Auburn, Ala. — Pecan growers are advised by John Bagby, API Extension horticulturist, to get ready now for harvest, to cut out some of the trees in overcrowded groves, and to make plans for setting new trees in December.

"Mow, lightly disk, or rake the space under and around pecan trees to help make the harvesting job easier," he explains. "Pick up the nuts every four or five days, especially right after a rain or wind, because the quality of pecans deteriorates rapidly when nuts are left on the ground.

"Don't let your trees crowd each other. Thin them when the space between the rows becomes less than the spread of branches on one side of the trees. From now until spring is a good time to thin crowded groves.

"Order new pecan trees early to get the best nursery stock before they are picked over. And be sure to plant only scab resistant varieties. Stuart and Desirable are the best varieties for selling to the 'in-shell' trade. Elliott, Farley and Curtis varieties produce smaller nuts with a high percentage of meats that are well suited to shelling.

"Elliott and Farley can be planted successfully in any part of the pecan areas. Curtis trees should be planted only in the southern counties. Through top-working it may be profitable to combine one of these varieties with trees of poor varieties."

Sunday Cutting Scrape Puts One Man In Hospital, One In Jail

A cutting scrape on Tyus Hill Sunday afternoon, put one man in the hospital and landed another in the county jail.

John Lockhart is in Central Alabama Hospital suffering from knife wounds received at the hands of Clifton Cleckler. Cleckler who was also cut in the altercation, has been charged with assault with intent to murder it was reported by Sheriff J. Luther Kendrick. Sheriff Kendrick stated that a warrant would be served on Lockhart later in the week on the same charges.

Fishing Demonstration At Clanton City Park For Local Anglers Oct. 19th

Bryant Black, holder of many titles in the bait and fly casting games, is also a fisherman—says that his tournament casting is very valuable to his fishing because of the many different casts he has learned.

Imagine just fishing and getting paid for it! That, in addition to talking and demonstration before local anglers at City Park, October 19, 1953, at 7:00 p.m., is the dream job of Bryant Black, national champion caster.

He is a man who thoroughly enjoys his job because it gives him an opportunity to pass along to fellow fishermen all those tricks of fishing learned during his travels about the country. Black lives, breathes and personifies fishing and will answer all questions on the subject.

Such topics as how to cast smoother, farther and more accurately; how to tie knots that will hold; how to work topwater and underwater lures to attract fish when they aren't hitting; how to dress a fly line to make it float longer, etc., will be discussed.

Black will show a number of trick casts which also are practical while fishing. In addition, he will present a color movie "Chugger Fishin' " which shows the making of a plug from a handful of plastic granules, right on down to the finished product.

Many thrilling fishing scenes, such as two bass being taken on one plug, make the movie highly entertaining. The evening will be sponsored by Clanton Fishing Tackle Dealers.

Preserve Quality Of Meat And Lard

Auburn, Ala. — Prevent cured meat from becoming infested with skippers by wrapping it in heavy paper, says Lavada Curtis, API Extension food preservationist.

Then cover it with muslin, and sew the cloth up to fit the piece of meat. Make a thick whitewash mixture of lime and water and enough red clay to give a brownish color. Dip the wrapped piece of meat in the whitewash and hang it up to dry.

Miss Curtis adds this tip on lard: "To keep home-rendered lard fresh and sweet, mix it with vegetable shortening—two pounds of shortening to each 50 pounds of lard. Add the shortening to the lard in the kettle, just before settling and separating the cracklings."

Time To Order Pine Seedlings

Montgomery, Ala. — State Forester J. M. Stauffer announced here today that it is time to order forest tree seedlings for planting this winter.

Stauffer said seedlings available include loblolly, longleaf and slash pine, catalpa, black walnut, and yellow poplar. All species except loblolly, longleaf, and slash pine will be in short supply.

Seedlings this year will cost $3 per thousand, f.o.b., from one of three State nurseries located at Auburn, Autaugaville and Atmore. Orders should be directed to the State Forester, 1029 Houston Street, Montgomery, on forms available from the County Forest Ranger, District Forester, Cooperative Management Forester or from the State Forester.

The shipping season for seedlings usually begins about December 1 and ends February 15.

Stauffer said planting seedlings is one of the most valuable means a land-owner can use to reclaim eroded and unused land. Concerted planting of forest trees in the past few years has helped greatly in bringing back Alabama forests, controlling erosion and benefitting wildlife.

Fred Smith Resigns Post As Mayor Of Jemison

FRED SMITH

Fred Smith, who has served two terms as Mayor at Jemison resigned last Friday to take a position with the newly organized Chilton County Gas District. J. O. Cobb is acting Mayor until the Town Council appoints Smith's successor.

Smith, who was a candidate last year for the office of Probate Judge of Chilton County but was defeated, will be in charge of maintenance for the gas district. The Chilton County Gas District was organized last spring by residents of Jemison and Thorsby to bring natural gas to those localities. Bonds were issued in the amount of $338,000 to mature in 20 years to finance the undertaking.

J. O. Cobb, who is acting Mayor, is a member of the Town Council and stated Monday morning that the Council would announce the appointment of Smith's successor within a few days.

Treat Cattle Soon For Lice And Grubs

Auburn, Ala. — In a few weeks it will be time to wage war on cattle lice, which multiply rapidly during fall and winter when animal hair is thick and long and relatively free of oil.

API Extension Entomologist W. A. Ruffin advises farmers to spray beef animals with eight to 10 pounds of 50 per cent wettable DDT in 100 gallons of water. For spraying dairy cattle, use methoxychlor at the same rate.

Cattle may also need to be treated for grubs late next month, adds Ruffin. Use a dust that contains two and one-half per cent rotenone, or spray animals with a mixture that contains eight pounds of five per cent rotenone in 100 gallons of water. Rotenone will control both grubs and lice.

Sixteen Typewriters Taken From Jemison High School Friday

Friday morning when members of the faculty of the Jemison High School opened for the day's classes they found the school minus 16 typewriters that were a part of the equipment of the commerce department.

According to a statement from Howard Boockholdt, County Superintendent of Education, a hasp that was on the door to the room in which the typewriters were kept, was pried off giving admittance to the thieves. Boockholdt also stated that it appeared that the thieves just picked up the first typewriters they came to, and when they had all they could carry they made off with them. He intimated that in his opinion the work was that of professionals and that the machines would probably in that case be taken from the State for sale.

Sheriff J. Luther Kendrick Monday morning stated no new developments in the case, but stated that all sheriffs and law officers in the state had been alerted for the thieves.

Fireproof Fabrics For Extra Safety

It's a simple task to fireproof children's clothes and inflammable household fabrics, such as window curtains, draperies, and slipcovers, Stella Mitchell, API Extension home management specialist, urges homemakers to cut down on fire losses and possible death with a simple solution made by adding six ounces of borax and three ounces of boric acid to two quarts of water.

"After stirring the solution until it's clear," she explains, "dip articles into the mixture, squeeze them through the clothes wringer or wring by hand, and hang them up to dry. After drying, use scraps of the fabric to test for fire resistance. If the test is not satisfactory, repeat the treatment until the fabric absorbs enough fireproofing solution."

National Letter Writing Week

Montgomery, Ala. — Gov. Gordon Persons today issued proclamations setting aside Alabama dates for two special observances.

The Governor designated October 4-10 as "National Letter Writing Week." His proclamation pointed out that there is nothing quite so "morale-building" and cheering, as a letter, and asked that Alabama citizens correspond with relatives, friends, and especially service men and women during this time.

"Credit Union Day" was set for October 15, 1953. The proclamation said that credit unions promote economic security, strengthen democracy, and encourage responsibility among other things.

Chilton County Tigers Wreck Columbiana Wildcats 27 to 6

(By HAROLD SMYER)

The Chilton County Tigers continued their 1953 season undefeated as they wrecked the Columbiana Wildcats 27 to 6 here last Friday night. Coach Spicer's Tigers play the Prattville Lions here at Clanton Friday night. Kickoff time is at 7:30. The score and statistics of the Wildcat-Tiger game are impressive, but the Tigers' playing was not as impressive. The Tigers will have to "get on the ball" to beat Pratville. Hardy and Littlejohn, injured Tigers, were sorely missed against Columbiana, but are slated to play Friday night against Prattville. Clanton will have to keep close check on big left end Charles Carter (No. 29); quarterback captain Harper Hamner (No. 50); rugged fullback Jimmy Golson (No. 23) and Scatback Robert Hines (No. 8), if they expect to win another victory.

Clanton 25	— Maplesville	7
Clanton 32	— Montevallo	0
Clanton 7	— Wetumpka	7
Clanton 27	— Columbiana	6
Clanton ?	— Prattville	?

Roy Mims looked like "greased lightning" as he ran wild against Columbiana and personally accounted for 324 yards. Roy scored three touchdowns with runs of 75, 58 and 15 yards. He also place-kicked the three extra points for the Tigers, failing on only one. R. W. Duren was not "slow motion" on his breakaway run of 80 yards for the other Tiger score. Obra Wilson, converted to an end, played well and made a hard key block for Mims' TD jaunt of 58 yards. A future Tiger star was unveiled in versatile Arthur Robinson. Robinson, only a Junior III, showed up well running, blocking, tackleing, passing and pass receiving.

His bullet pass to Baker for 21 yards was the best pass of the game.

Clanton gained on amazing total net yardage of 582 yards to Columbiana's 205. Leading ground gaines for the Tigers were: Mims, with 324 yards; Duren, with 140; Caton, with 34; Baker, with 27; Robinson, with 19; Minor, with 14, and Wilson, with 12. Columbiana gained only 89 yards through Wilson, Payton, Litleton, Connell, Nelson, Sims, Smith and Baker.

COST OF LIVING TO STAY HIGH

From the Department of Agriculture comes a hint that the cost of living is likely to remain at a high level for some time to come. This belief is based on the prospect of a continuation of high food prices, which in turn, is the result of high wholesale food prices now holding above 1952 levels.

A Government decision which would have a major effect on the cost of living is that on a Federal sales tax. If such a tax is recommended, and enacted, the effect on the cost of living would be direct and all-inclusive.

If no such tax is recommeded, or recommended and defeated, the cost of living is still expected to remain high as long as business continues good. It is reported by the Commerce Department that wholesale prices are holding firm, generally speaking, and with the exception of farm prices. This indicates no decrease in living costs.

TRUMAN FAVORS NEGOTIATIONS

Former President Harry S. Truman recently called for a "firm agreement with our allies" to negotiate a solution of current U. S. difficulties with the Soviet Union. In taking this position the former President aligned himself with the 1952 Democratic Presidential nominee, Adlai Stevenson, who also has called for a Big Four meeting.

The Truman speech is another indication of the pressure building up for a meeting with the new leaders of Soviet Russia. Much of the argument in favor of such a meeting is based on the assumption that nothing could be lost, and that possibly some improvement of world tension could be achieved.

Already sentiment in both Great Britain and France is strongly in favor of such a meeting and, in recent days, Indian delegate V. K. Krishna Menon has discussed the possibility of introducing a resolution in the U. N. calling for a Big Four meeting. There has also been a hint that the Soviet Union would favor a conference among the Big Five, as the Soviet press terms them, which group would include the leader of Communist China.

The evidence indicates that the United States and Russia are the two key powers which have as yet failed to come out openly in favor of such a meeting. The recommendations of top leaders in the Democratic Party that the Administration agree to Big Four talks is sure to have some influence on course of events. While one cannot always predict the course of international relations, it now appears that a Big Four meeting, or some such meeting, is likely to be held either this year or next.

Chain President States Increased Efficiency In Food Industries Could Further Narrow Spread Between Farm and Retail Food Prices

New York, N. Y. — Ralph W. Burger, president of The Great Atlantic & Pacific Tea Company, today urged the nation's food industry to strive for greater efficiency in its operations in order to further narrow the spread between farm and retail prices.

In a statement launching a month-long celebration of the nation's oldest food chain's 94th anniversary, Mr. Burger cautioned the industry against wasteful practices that might tend to increase the cost of food to consumers or reduce returns to producers.

"The entire food industry, from producer to distributor, has given the American people the highest standard of eating in the world today," Mr. Burger said. "The average family in this country has a better and more varied diet and spends a smaller percentage of its income on food than do the residents of any other country. But if we are to remain the best-fed nation, we must continue to seek new and better ways of producing and distributing food."

Mr. Burger cited three major areas in which the industry should seek improved performance:

1. Narrow the spread between farm and retail prices.
2. Reduce waste and spoilage of food.
3. Avoid both merchandising practices and types of merchandise that will reduce efficiency and increase operating costs.

"In the past 94 years the food industry has made great progress in shortening the route between farm and dinner-table," Mr. Burger said. "This has been beneficial to consumers because it has given them more food for their money, and it has helped producers by giving them a larger share of the consumer's food dollar."

Mr. Burger said that modern refrigeration, improved storage, transportation and handling operations in recent years have resulted in a substantial reduction in the waste and spoilage of food, but that this was still one of the most challenging problems for the entire food industry. "The government estimates that as much as one-fifth of some crops grown in this country are lost through spoilage on the farm, in transit, or in the home," he said.

Pointing out that the retail food business is the most competitive in the country, Mr. Burger cautioned against practices that might give a short-term competitive advantage, but that in the end would work against the best interests of consumers, producers and the industry itself.

"One thing we have learned from our 94 years' experience in the food business is that the customer is the boss," he said. "She determines what she will buy, where she will buy it, and how much she will pay for it. We must view with caution new developments that on the surface seem to be rendering the consumer a service, but actually are liable to increase the cost of food to her."

In this connection, Mr. Burger cited the problem of store hours. "There is evidence today in some localities of an effort to increase store hours and to keep food stores open every day in the week," he said. "Such developments should be studied very carefully, for they may well lead to increased operating costs for food merchants and higher food prices to consumers. This is not only contrary to the interests of employees, but is basically an inefficient and costly way of operating. It was for this reason that A & P pioneered the 5 day work week for its employees, and store hours that were geared to customer shopping needs and habits.

Along the same lines, Mr. Burger referred to the trend towards the introduction of non-food items in food stores.

"When our company first started, we were tea merchants," he said. "Gradually we added spices, staple groceries, meats and fresh fruits and vegetables. Today, the average super market stocks as many as 3,000 food items, including a wide variety of foods that a few short years ago would have been considered in the luxury class.

"Now many food stores are adding non-food lines. Before doing so, however, they should be sure that they are really serving the customer's best interests; that they are qualified to handle the new line efficiently; and that it will not distract from the real job . . . serving the food needs of the American consumer," he added.

"We have always considered ourselves food merchants," he concluded.

Continued efforts on the part of A & P to seek solutions to these problems were pledged by Mr. Burger. He said all the company's facilities would be devoted now, as in the past, to carry out the simple philosophy of the founder to — "Give every customer the most good food for his money."

Around OUR HOUSE

by Kathryn Tucker Windham

The other night after supper, the six-year-old got out paper and crayons, settled herself at the dining room table and began drawing. She shooed all spectators away until she had finished, and then she presented her work of art with a flourish.

"Here in the middle is a witch," she explained. "She's stirring up a poison potion, enough to poison everybody in the world."

My teeth chattered, but I managed to remark rather calmly:

"I see she's standing on two rocks so she can reach the pot."

"No," corrected the artists, "those aren't rocks. She's standing on a little boy's head and a little girl's head. She cut them off. And this is a skeleton. And this is a man the witch hung to a tree limb. And this is a ghost in the corner. A bad ghost."

I tried to hustle the four-year-old out of the room before he saw the frightful picture, but I wasn't successful. He gave the gruesome thing a long look while I hovered about waiting to soothe him when he began yelling with terror. But he didn't yell; he was much less terrified than I was. He observed critically:

"You need to draw some more skeletons."

The artist obliged. Then they both went out (in the dark!) to ride their vehicles around the block once more before bedtime. I haven't quite recovered yet.

Our next door neighbor, the thrifty one, was busy crocheting when I stopped by the other morning. She had collected worn out wool socks from all her family connection and was making them into an afghan. She cut off the tops of the socks, split them and was using bright colors of wool thread to crochet the tops together. The thread she was using to crochet the pieces of the afghan together was, naturally, odds and ends of wool yarn left over from some of her knitting projects.

The way she figures, her afghan will cost her almost nothing. It's bright and pretty, too.

This neighbor, as usual, taught me some new crochet tricks. She likes to have some such work on hand to pick up in spare moments, but sometimes she would find that the crocheted piece she was working on had raveled.

Now this neighbor doesn't like to waste anything, not even stitches, so she figured out a way to stop this raveling. When she stops crocheting, she puts a big safety pin through the last stitch, snaps it shut and the stitches can't pull out.

Her crochet needles don't get hooked and tangled in her work either. She keeps the needles in clear plastic cases which once held toothbrushes.

When this neighbor does any knitting or crocheting, she puts on an apron made of a pleasant shade of dark green cloth, providing herself with a background that is restful to her eyes.

Our good cook neighbor doesn't crochet, but she does make wonderful baked orange chiffon pie like this:

Combine 1-3 cup sugar with 3 tablespoons flour. Add 3 beaten egg yolks, 2 tablespoons lemon juice, 3-4 cup orange juice, pinch salt, ½ tablespoon grated orange rind and 2 tablespoons water. Cook in double boiler until thick. Fold in 3 beaten egg whites. Pour into 9-inch baked pastry shell and bake in moderate oven (350 degrees) until light brown, about 15 minutes.

Land already in pastures and land that should go into pasture production greatly exceed the combined acreage devoted to all other Alabama crops.

Nothing To Do About Freckles

Montgomery, Ala. — If you have a tendency to have freckles, there is almost nothing you can do about it.

That is the answer of Alabama's State Health Officer to a much-asked question, one of particular importance to young people.

"The tendency to have freckles is believed to be inherited," Dr. D. G. Gill said today. "They can be removed temporarily by local treatment. But they seem to return. There is no medicine a person can take internally or ointment he can apply externally that will rid him of them for good. Freckles consist of pigment deposits in one of the lower layers of the skin. Blondes and those with red hair are more susceptible to them than others."

However much a person may dislike his or her freckles, the State Health Officer pointed out, there is nothing to fear from them, since they are harmless.

"Your Health" is presented by your physician as a health service of the Medical Association of the State of Alabama.

The Old And The Young

There are very few of the older generation who will not attempt to dictate to the younger person just because they are older, not necessarily because they are more astute or more capable. And it is this contest between old and young which causes most of the friction in established communities whether it be business or social activities.

Younger persons should acknowledge the value of experience; but, on the other hand, it should be the constant desire of the older man or woman to give due consideration to the theories of the young. Many old people have made the life of a younger person miserable by making light of a well thought-out plan which later proved to be a valuable solution to the problem at hand. This kind of action simply engenders hatred and leads to no valuable conclusions.

A young person when confronted with problems, just because they are quite new to him, will frequently develop new and significant thoughts. In this way he outranks the oldster because of the very fact that his thoughts are new and unencumbered with routine and possible faulty premises.

Youngsters and oldsters must work together for the benefit and advancement of both. The young person is more decisive, quicker and vibrant. The old man is more quiet, sedate and calculating. Thus the older person should be willing to listen to the new ideas of the younger individual but should weigh them more carefully than if these same ideas are put forth by one of his contemporaries.

Kindliness is the most important attribute of the truly intelligent. Thus a man is not necessarily useless because he is considered old, and a young person is not necessarily stupid because he is inexperienced.

Growing old is a natural physiologic process. Wise is the person who accepts this knowledge without opposing nature's forces. Life is a process of replacement, no matter what the age. A kindly understanding of the problems of both the old and the young, with each group mutually respecting the other, will do much for a graceful entering into older years.

Speedy Drivers Killed 13,500 Or More Last Year

"Traffic tornadoes" out of control on the highways are wreaking death and destruction in larger measure year after year because speeding drivers are riding the roads in record numbers, a well-known traffic safety authority asserted today.

Likening the accidents of speeding drivers to the unpredictable "twisters" from the skies which take huge tolls of life and property in some areas of the nation, Thomas N. Boate, accident prevention department manager of the Association of Casualty and Surety Companies, declared the "tornadoes" out of control on the highways are far deadlier than the weather type and strike daily throughout the country.

About 13,500 persons were killed and almost 600,000 injured in 1952 in accidents where drivers were exceeding speed limits, according to Mr. Boate. Nearly 2,200 others were killed and 86,000 hurt by vehicles which ran off the roadway out of control—the typical accident of a speeding driver, he added. Reckless driving, in which speeding frequently figured, claimed 3,550 additional lives and caused nearly 150,000 injuries, Mr. Boate reported. There is no doubt in his mind that in the aggregate the "tornado" of the highways—a vehicle out of control—is many times worse than the uncontrolled storms which follow uncertain paths and strike without warning, leaving devastation behind them.

Official evidence of steadily increasing numbers of speeders was presented by Mr. Boate in speed studies made by the U. S. Bureau of Public Roads over recent years. These show that average speeds are hitting record highs in every section of the nation.

In the eastern states last year, 28 percent of all vehicles exceeded 50 miles an hour, with 11 percent going over 55 and four percent exceeding 60. In the central and western sections, however, 54 percent of all traffic hit a pace faster than 50 miles per hour, 33 percent exceeded 55 and 16 percent went over 60 miles per hour.

From 1949 to 1952 average speeds of all types of vehicles in all states rose as follows: Exceeding 50 miles per hour, increased 7 percent; over 55, up 5 percent; exceeding 60, up 3 percent. In the central and western regions the increases ran to 10 percent exceeding 50 miles per hour, 8 percent hitting more than 55, and 4 percent doing over 60 miles per hour. In the east, vehicles exceeding 50 miles per hour increased 3 percent, but registered a 1 percent decrease in the exceeding 55 category, and remained the same over the three year period for all traffic exceeding 60—a total of 4 percent.

Buses increased their speeds over 55 miles per hour more than any other type of vehicle between 1949 and 1952. In the central-western regions, 55 percent of all buses exceeded 55 miles per hour, up 10 percent; in the east 17 percent, up 6 percent, and in all states, 40 percent, up 9 percent. Speeds over 60 were clocked for 26 percent of all buses in the central-western areas, up 7 percent; remained at 6 percent in the east, marking no increase, and averaged 18 percent over 55 miles per hour, up 4 percent, for the entire country.

Passenger cars were next with respect to percentages exceeding 55 miles per hour. In the central-west, 38 percent averaged over 55, up 8 percent since 1949, and 19 percent traveled faster than 60, an increase of 4 percent. In the east their speeds were 14 percent over 55 miles per hour, a decline of 1 percent, and 5 percent over 60, also a 1 percent decrease. For the country as a whole passenger cars exceeding 55 miles per hour ran to 31 percent exceeding 55, up 6 percent, and 15 percent doing over 60, a rise of 3 percent since 1949.

"These statistics show how many vehicles are exceeding speed limits on rural highways or, in the cases of a number of states without fixed speed limits, how many are traveling at excessive speeds that are causing the bulk of the fatal and serious accidents which occur when the drivers cannot control their vehicle when an emergency arises while they are traveling at high speed," said Mr. Boate. "Until these 'traffic tornadoes' are tamed by strictest law enforcement and public outcry over the horror their senseless and unsafe speeds are causing, their accidents will continue to take a tremendous toll of lives and property on rural highways."

Alabama's State Coliseum Will Be Dedicated Oct. 20-21

Alabama's State Coliseum, only building of its kind in the world and housing the largest enclosed arena in the United States will be dedicated on October 20-21 with an all agricultural show.

Representing an investment by the state of more than $2,850,000.00 the State Coliseum will have permanent seating capacity for more than 8,500 spectators and for certain type shows and events the seating capacity can be increased to more than 12,000 persons.

The biggest show of the opening will be the Coliseum itself because the only building that compares with it was the old coliseum built by the Romans and it did not have a roof but used canvas during bad weather.

Principal function of the coliseums will be agricultural shows of state, regional and national character where Alabama's agricultural education program can be spotlighted and exhibited to the world. Already several national livestock shows have been held in the structure and more are scheduled for the future.

The opening show will be held on Tuesday morning, October 20th, at ten o'clock with the judging of Purebred Aberdeen Angus and Shorthorns in the beef cattle division and purebred Guernseys, Brown Swiss, Ayrshire and Holstein in the Dairy Division.

The beef show is under the direction of W. H. Gregory, livestock specialist with the Alabama Extension Service at Auburn assisted by W. S. Perry, State Department of Agriculture and E. H. Wilson, agricultural director of the Alabama State Chamber of Commerce. The dairy show is under the supervision of John Parrish, extension dairyman, Alabama Extension Service, assisted by Harry S. Gilmore, First National Bank, Montgomery, and John Garrett, Alabama Farm Bureau Federation.

The poultry division will be under the direction of John Weeks, extension poultryman, Alabama Extension Service, and Pyron Keener, State Department of Agriculture.

C. Ed Teague, director of the agricultural division of the Montgomery Chamber of Commerce will be superintendent of the hog and sheep shows.

Judging in the livestock shows will begin each morning at 10:00 a.m. and the outstanding evening entertainment program will begin each evening at 6:30 p.m.

On Tuesday evening Alabama's Quarter Horse show will be held under the direction of Ralph Eagle of Marion and Pete Reynolds of Eutaw, outstanding Quarter Horse breeders in Alabama.

H. O. Davis, owner of some of the South's outstanding show horses, will direct the gaited horse show which will be held on Wednesday evening. Mr. Davis expects entries from all over Alabama as well as neighboring states in this outstanding event.

The Alabama 4-H clubs and the FFA organization will play an important part in the programs each night. The 4-H program will be under the direction of Mr. Hanchey Logue, State 4-H Leader, Alabama Extension Service, and Miss Ann Barr, State Girls 4-H Leader, Alabama Extension Service. The FFA program is under the direction of Mr. T. L. Faulkner, executive secretary, Future Farmers of America and Miss Ruth Stovall, state supervisor Future Homemakers of America, Alabama Department of Vocational Agricultural Education.

The show will be free to the public and it is expected that more than 25,000 persons will attend the two-day event.

Our very good friend and correspondent, Miss Ruth Hicks, of Stanton, has been appointed to the Board of Registrars of Chilton County by the Hon. Gordon Persons. Congratulations to Miss Ruth, and it couldn't happen to a more deserving person. We are sure all good Democrats in the county will wish her well in her appointment.

Let's beat the band for the Band Boosters Club. They will hold a meeting next Monday night at 7 o'clock at the High School gymnasium and all boosters of the Chilton County High School Band are expected to attend. The Band Boosters Club has chosen sides (the Reds and the Blues), and are making a contest of it to see how many memberships they can sell. Our money is on the Reds and the Blues, because we are going to "plug" both sides just as hard and often as we can. Be a band booster — come on out to the Band Boosters Club meeting next Monday night.

The Social Security Office has been moved to the courtroom at the courthouse. This announcement was made recently by Jack Adamson, Field Representative. This change was caused by the closing of the State Employment Office here. The date of the Field Representative's visit to Chilton County will be the same—Thursdays at 1:00 p.m. There is no charge for any service of the Social Security Agency and Mr. Adamson says that 680 residents of the county are already receiving payments which go to retired workers and their wives and children as well as widows, children and dependent parents of deceased workers.

Scout Fund Raising Campaign To Start Here Next Monday

The annual fund raising campaign for carrying on scouting in Chilton County this year will get under way Monday, October 19th. During the week solicitors will call on most of the ctitzens in the larger communities, offering an opportunity to contribute to this great character building organization.

In Thorsby, the drive will be under the guidance of Mrs. Otis Littleton.

In Jemison, Mrs. Beaman will lead the drive. The T-J Lions Club will be assisting in both communities.

In Maplesville and Stanton, George Gillespie will head the drive.

The quota for the county this year is $1500. This means that all must be liberal when these people come around.

Chilton County now has four troops with more than 100 Scouts. There are three cub packs with around 65 cubs. Plans are under way for one more troop and one or two more cub packs.

Citizens are urged to have their contributions ready, since the solicitors are busy men giving their time to this worthy cause.

This drive will give many people an opportunity to help in the promotion of an important youth activity that performs a great service in helping to curb the much-talked of Juvenile delinquency. Let's each one dig deep enough to help put Chilton over quickly and in good style.

Final Date For Buying Driver's License Extended

Probate Judge M. D. Tingle announced this week that he had received word from Montgomery that the final date for buying your driver's license without penalty had been extended until November 15, 1953.

It would be wise to keep this date in mind as there will be no further extension and after that date a penalty will be added to the cost of your licenses.

World's Newest Big Show Is Coming Soon

Thursday, November 5th, is circus day in Clanton.

King Bros. & Cristiani Combined Shows, one of the world's largest, will exhibit here under the auspices of the Jr. Chamber of Commerce.

This colossus of modern day amusements is now in its 34th season. There are 600 people with the show, 150 arenic stars, 250 wild animals including 15 elephants and a blood sweating hippopotamus of Holy Writ.

Acres of ground are used to house the 22 tents, the largest—the huge arena, provides comfortable seats for over 5,000 people. The daily operating expense of the circus is $7,400.

Girls and girls, clowns and clowns, elephants and elephants!

Without them there would be no circus. There are 20 clowns and 80 girls with King Bros. & Cristiani this season.

Circuses of the better class look after the welfare of their women performers with a surprising regard to detail. They are provided with special sleeping cars in which they live while on the road. Conversation with strangers is prohibited.

Looking after the ballet girls or other unmarried feminine members of the circus is the "mother." She is one of the most interesting characters of the circus. In short she is the chaperon.

Mrs. Claudia White, the chaperon with the King Bros. & Cristiani Circus, through her long experience with life under the "big top," has made her familiar with every detail of the business and she knows what to do when an emergency arises. Men and women alike come to her with the petty troubles that are bound to occur in the uncertain and strenuous existence they lead.

EL REY SISTERS

Two of the talented girls with the big show this season are the El Rey Sisters. They are "high flyers" in the big top and their daring aerial exploits on the trapeze are astounding. The girls are members of the Piccadilly troupe imported from England, recently.

An immense and spectacular street parade will be seen on the downtown streets at 11:30 a.m. Doors to the big show will open at 1 and 7 p.m. The performances on account of the length, will start at 2 and 8 p.m.

MAIL THOSE CHRISTMAS PARCELS

The Defense Department says Christmas parcels for members of the armed services overseas should be mailed between October 15th and November 15th. This will assure that the parcels reach servicemen in distant area in time for Christmas celebrations.

In addition, the Defense Department makes certain recommendations for those who intend to send large packages. All boxes addressed to Army or Fleet post-offices must not exceed seventy pounds in weight. They should not be more than 100 inches in length and girth combined.

For air parcels, the Department says they are not to exceed two pounds, or thirty inches around. It is also suggested that senders of Christmas parcels use good judgement in the selection of their gifts, avoiding sending goods which spoil if not delivered in two or three weeks.

CHILDREN'S DEATHS

The United States Children's Bureau reported recently that accidents kill and injure more children than all diseases known to man. The Bureau sounded a warning which we have offered in these columns on past occasions, to parents of the country.

Fathers and mothers were told to take the accident problem seriously and give it as much concern as they do such diseases as polio and tuberculosis. Until they begin to take the problem seriously and use preventive measures, the toll of accidents is likely to more than match the toll of deaths among children from diseases of all kinds.

The report of the Bureau covered the period between 1940 and 1949, and showed the death rate due to accidents among children in this period of years was reduced only sixteen per cent. The death rate from all other causes in this same period was slashed by an impressive 46 per cent.

In this period children under one year of age died at the rate of 72.1 for each 100,000 children in the country. Of the 72.1 deaths, more than half of them were caused by home accidents. The report showed that until children are between the ages of five and nine, the greatest death threat to them is an accident in the home. After that age, the greatest threat of death comes from motor vehicle accidents.

THE POINT BEYOND—WHERE INTELLECT FAILS

"Hath not God made foolish the wisdom of this world?" I Corinthians 1:20

Please read the twenty-eighth chapter of Job. There you will find the most illuminating essay on human wisdom that was even written. Then read the chapter from which the quotation at the head of this article was taken. You will be well repaid.

Commercially speaking, Corinth was the metropolis of Greece. Within the group of its business men were the ancient captains of industry. Evidences of its prosperity were seen on every hand. It was a city of broad boulevards, parks and gardens. Tapestried walls adorned their handsome homes. The banks of Corinth controlled the financial operations of Greece and beyond. The facilities for transportation were superior to those of any other city in the world. The Corinthians revealed their civic spirit in the erection of three athlette fields to which contestants came from everywhere.

That was Corinth. Yet, historically speaking, the most distinguished name by which it is remembered was not that of some wealthy nabob, but that of a vagabond preacher, a Jew from Asia Minor, Paul by name. Why? Because that stranger knew and proclaimed the fact that mere commercial, social or political success does nothing more than fertilize the soil in which trivialities grow and flourish; and that sooner or later trivialities will destroy any people; that unhampered material prosperity blears the eyes to things of higher import.

There is an oft-quoted sentence from the Book of Proverbs, "Where there is no vision, the people perish." The history of nations exemplifies the truth of it. It means that the wisdom of this world offers no trustworthy leadership. The dust of every ancient civilization bears sufficient proof of it. You may climb over the ruins of Nineveh, Palmyra, Egypt, Babylon, with a skilled archaeologist, and he will tell you that the Bible statement is correct.

It appears that we Americans have not yet attained the wisdom necessary for considering this question in the light of the far-view. This is a time for thinking not merely of winning a war, or perpetuating our political institutions by force, or relying solely upon international conventions for the solution of the problem of world peace. God alone has the answer to the enigma that has been fretting the minds of our statesmen for so long. Speaking of the futility of the wisdom of this world, it is imperative that we recognize the proven fact that the Bible, the revelation of the wisdom of God, is the single palladium of human liberty. A distraught world is waiting for Christian America to give to all the peoples of the earth the message that was voiced by the Apostle as a warning to prosperous Greece, "Hath not God made foolish the wisdom of this world?"

We've a story to tell to the nations
That shall turn their hearts to the right,
A story of truth and mercy,
A story of peace and light."

Shall the churches of our beloved land rise to the occasion?

ideas from other editors

From the Eufaula Tribune, Eufaula, Alabama: Nearly three million horses and mules have disappeared from Cotton Belt farms in the past twelve years. They have been replaced by tractors.

It takes about three acres to supply feed for a horse or mule and this means that approximately eight million acres of land have been released for crops—certainly not for cotton in view of the overproduction at this time.

No doubt, a goodly portion of the "liberated" land will be used in growing feed for cattle and hogs. This is true in Barbour county where hundreds of farmers have turned to growing livestock.

From the South Pasadena Review, South Pasadena, California: What happens when the family budget doesn't balance?

Most likely you eat beans for a while, or dodge bill collectors.

The Federal government has a handy little gimmick, perfected over the past two decades, to get around that problem. They just create more money. That's called "deficit financing." If an individual does it, the name is "counterfeiting."

Everytime the government goes into the hole and creates more money to finance itself, an invisible hand sneaks into your pocket and takes some money out. Since 1932, when the government first began to "deficit finance" in a big way, that invisible hand has dipped 48 cents of buying power out of every dollar in every wallet, bank account, insurance policy and piggy bank in the country.

That's why it's important to balance the budget.

So let's do a little more worrying about it. And maybe write a Congressman now and then when he shows the courage to refuse Federal tax money for a local project that could be privately financed.

From the News-Journal, Mansfield, Ohio: Politics is too dirty a game for an honest man to have anything to do with. This remark . . . expresses one of the most dangerous viewpoints in the United States. STATE SUPERINTENDENT

LOCAL ACCOUNTING AND SCHOOL LUNCH

It is the responsibility of the State Supervisor of Local Accounting and School Lunch to assist superintendents and principals in accounting for funds in each school which are not handled by the officially designated custodians of school funds for county and city school systems. Included in this responsibility is the administration, operation, supervision, promotion, and financing of the National School Lunch Program. In accordance with established policies all contacts are made through the county or city superintendent's office.

One of the most significant recent developments in public education has been the increased amount of intelligent interest on the part of the lay public in their schools. This increased lay interest demands improved local accounting. Advancing understanding of good school administration suggests that our schools should make use of the latest and soundest business procedures in all activities.

Accounting for local school funds is as important and as necessary as the accounting for state, county, and city school funds. The accounting for such funds comes within the responsibility of the county and city boards of education. This responsibility, as well as the authority for execution, should be delegated to superintendents and principals of the respective schools. Principals should be protected by bonds and insurance for safe handling of funds. Audits should be made of all local school accounts.

The local school accounting system should be in keeping with the best accounting practices and should expedite the making of any and all financial reports. The minimum essentials for a sound system of local school accounting include an adequate record of cash receipts and cash payments, a current record of accounts receivable and accounts payable, and proper reports to boards of education.

CONGRESSIONAL Glow

A—Not according to Speaker of the House of Representatives Joseph W. Martin, Jr. (R Mass.) Martin said Sept. 9 in Washington he was certain there would be no extra session. Earlier talk of a special session, Martin noted, was based on the Administration's feeling that Congress would have to boost the national debt limit before the end of the year; however, fiscal experts have indicated the statutory debt limit would not be reached this year.

Q—Are there any White House staff members whose specific duties are liaison with Congress?

A—Yes, there are. The President shuffled his staff just recently to improve liaison with Congress. The White House Sept. 4 announced the appointment of Jack Martin, assistant to the late Sen. Robert A. Taft (R Ohio) and the promotion of Gerald D. Morgan to the post of administrative assistant. Both will have liaison duties. They will be assisted by Homer H. Gruenther and Bryce N. Harlow, according to the White House.

Q—Has the government done anything about the suit challenging the Constitutionality of the "tidelands" law?

A—The Justice Department filed a motion Sept. 8 in a U. S. District Court asking for dismissal of the challenge to the Submerged (Tidelands) Lands Act which became law this year. The Department contended that the U. S. government cannot be sued in this type of case without its consent, given by act of Congress.

Q—Why did Sen. Holland of Florida refuse to go to the Chicago Democratic rally Sept. 14-15?

A—Sen. Spessard L. Holland (D Fla.) said he thought the South had nothing to gain by attending the rally. He said he found no tangible signs that the Democratic Party leadership had changed its views on issues that cost the 1952 Presidential candidate, Adlai E. Stevenson, 57 electoral votes in four southern states

Night Traffic Big Hazard On Highways

Sylacauga, Ala. — "Night must fall, but must over 150 Alabama pedestrains fall with it?"

That question was asked this week by Alabama Safety Council President Hugh Comer as he discussed the importance of the Night Traffic Hazards program currently sponsored by the state safety group.

Comer said that from October through March, one-third of all pedestrain deaths occur between 5 and 8 p.m., hours that are usually dusk or dark during these months. He blamed a combination of darkness and carelessness.

Last year, he said, approximately 170 pedestrains died in traffic.

"We can't change the laws of nature," the council president asserted. "Darkness is here to stay. But we can do something as far as our own human nature is concerned. Many pedestrains meet their deaths in night traffic because of their own thoughtless walking habits.

He warned pedestrains that it is difficult for motorists to see them at night, and urged them to observe the following safe walking rules:

1. Always walk on the sidewalk. If you must walk on roads that have no sidewalks, walk on the left shoulder of the road facing traffic. Wear light-colored clothing or carry a flashlight or a piece of white material.

2. Always assume the driver can't see you. Never cross a street or highway unless you are absolutely certain you have ample time to reach the other side in complete safety.

"Cyclists are in pretty much the same boat as pedestrains in the night traffic picture," Comer said. "So it's just good common sense for them to be constantly on the defensive. A good headlight and taillight or reflector are MUSTS. Red or white reflectorized striping tape add even more visibility. Light-colored clothing is essential. Bikes should ride on the right side of the road, with traffic, and obey all other traffic laws."

Maplesville Home Demonstration Club Makes Metal Trays

Thursday, October 1st, the Maplesville Home Demonstration Club met at Nix's Club House for an all-day meeting. The ladies gathered at 900 a.m. and began making aluminum trays. The demonstration was led by Mrs. Johnnie M. Lane, Assistant Home Demonstration Agent.

During the noon hour a delicious lunch was enjoyed by the ladies present. Each one had brought a covered dish or some other food. After the lunch and social hour the following business was discussed: Civil defense, community meeting to discuss farm policies, nomination committee for new officers, and the next meeting. Definite plans of the next meeting will be announced later.

21 4-H Clubs Organized In Chilton County

During September the Home Demonstration Agents and Assistant County Agents met and organized twenty-one 4-H Clubs in the schools throughout the County. After the Clubs were organized, each Club elected the following officers: President, vice-president, secretary-treasurer, reporter and song leaders. The principal or a teacher in each school served as an adult leader for the Club in that school. Each Club will meet once during each month of the school year.

According to Mrs. Johnnie M. Lane, Assistant Home Demonstration Agent, the officers of the Girls' Clubs were given notebooks containing material to be used in the Clubs during the year. This material included a list of duties of each officer, things to know about 4-H work, a list of 4-H projects, a list of 4-H demonstrations for the year and a sheet of instructions about each demonstration. It is felt that this material will be very helpful and will enable the Clubs who use it to have a more successful Club.

Mrs. Lane announces that 654 girls enrolled in the 4-H Clubs during September. The enrollment of girls for each Club is as follows: Clanton Elementary, fifth grade, thirty-five (35); Clanton Elementary, sixth grade, forty (40); Collins Chapel, thirty (30); Concord, forty-two (42-; Cooper, eighteen (18); Enterprise, fifty-four (54); Isabella Jr., thirty-five (35); Isabella Sr., twenty-three (23); Jemison Jr., sixty (60); Jemison Sr., forty-one (41); Maplesville Jr., thirty-nine (39); Maplesville Sr., seventeen (17); Mineral Springs, thirteen (13); Mt. 16 Churches Met In Interest Of Unity Baptist Association Last Week

In an unofficial meeting last Sunday afternoon, at 2:30 p.m., at Billingsley Baptist Church, October 11, 1953, sixteen churches were represented and met together as a group to discuss matters pertaining to the procedure of the merging of Chilton and Unity Associations.

The group began with a song, followed by a devotional, led by Dr. W. L. Parrish, which was very inspirational and enjoyed to the utmost.

At this time nominations were in order for a chairman and secretary to serve at this particular meeting. Rev. W. E. Robinson of Maplesville was nominated and elected as chairman and Mrs. W. J. Ruddick as secretary. Discussions were made on the advantages and disadvantages of the merging of the two Associations by the various churches present. In this discussion an almost unanimous decision was reached that it could not find any advantage whatsoever in the consolidation of Unity and Chilton Associations; and looking at and to furthering the cause and promotion of God's Kingdom work.

A Resolution was made and adopted: "That the Unity Baptist Association was not dead but retained and reactivated as in the years heretofore." Also the churches that were not present are urged and invited to attend the next meeting at Ebenezer Baptist Church in the near future. The date and time will be announced later. Also the officials will be elected and where the Centennial will be held for next year.

The desires and expressions of the people at the Billingsley Baptist Church were to keep the Unity Baptist Association alive and intact and felt that much good had been done not only by the people who founded and chartered its beginning, but by the generations following and the good people who are now carrying on the banner in the name of the Almighty Creator.

Many people individually expressed themselves as having no ill feelings toward any one in either association, but the action taken was through love and forever keeping in mind the furtherance and promotion of the work of God and remembering the Jesus Christ, Who died on Calvary's Cross and shed His Blood that we might have Life Eternal hereafter.

The meeting was adjourned with prayer, led by the chairman, Rev. W. E. Robinson. — A Messenger.

PROVIDENCE BAPTIST CHURCH

Next Sunday, October 18, is the regular third Sunday preaching date. Services will begin Sunday morning as follows: Sunday School at 10 o'clock, with the worship hour at 11 o'clock following; Bible Training Union and preaching Sunday night at 6:30 and 7:30 respectively.

Everybody is invited to come to each and every service. There were 61 in Sunday School last Sunday, and we hope to increase in number every Sunday until we reach our goal of 100 in Sunday School. Rev. Elba Deason, the pastor, will be bringing the messages.

Last Sunday night was preaching night at the Methodist Church. A nice crowd attended with Rev. Max Hale bringing an inspiring message.

The Maplesville football boys will go to Billingsley this Friday night. We are rooting for them to win. The band may go along to give them a little pep.

The band parents would like to get some more parents and students interested in the band. If you are interested please get in contact with some of them. They have a committee for this but I do not know just who they are. But let some of them know of your interest and the committee will talk to you. What the band needs is some more that are really interested and will stick to it so we will some day have a band like other schools. Some people want to know why we don't have bands like this school and that school? Well, the reason is, not enough interested parents and students. We can not have anything without a little pull and cooperation.

Chilton High F.H.A. Attends The Alabama State Fair

Beverly DeLoach

The Chilton County High School FHA girls attended the State Fair on October 7, with Mrs. Edna Williams as sponsor.

We visited the FHA, FFA exhibit, the Industrial Building, and the Art Exhibit in the grandstand building

We were all interested to see that different schools in the county had exhibits at the fair. We were especially interested in the exhibit Maplesville High School had. It illustrated the different ways to make and decorate cakes. Since we are all Future Homemakers of America we should try to learn all we can about cake baking. As the old proverb goes, "The way to a man's heart is by way of his stomach."

After visiting all the educational exhibits, the crowd moved along to the different kinds of entertainment.

The F.H.A. members who went to the Fair are as follows:

On most farms there are moist bottoms now in worthless brush or timber that will grow good clover-grass permanent pasture.

Thin crowded pine stands from October through March; make improvement cuttings in hardwoods at any season.

POPLAR SPRINGS

Our attendance for Sunday School and Training Union was fairly well. Those who missed the worship services Sunday and Sunday night really missed two good messages brought by our new pastor, Bro. W. S. Cox.

We were glad to have our visitors and welcome them back at any time.

Our WMU recently had a good meeting at the home of Mrs. Willie Minor, with eight members and four visitors present. After the meeting they served delicious refreshments.

The WMU ladies are to meet after prayer service Wednesday night, also the GA's and the Sunbeams. So everyone remember and come to prayer service and stay for the other meetings.

Mrs. Rena Thornton is visiting Mr. and Mrs. Adell Thornton and children in Fayette this week.

Visiting Mrs. John Cox over the week end were Rev. and Mrs. N. E. Cook and family, Mr. and Mrs. S. O. Easterling and family, Saturday night. Others visiting them over the week end were Mr. and Mrs. Floyd Williams, Mr. W. C. Scarbough, Mr. Sanford DeVaughn and Mr. Grady Gore.

Mr. and Mrs. L. P. Rushing visited Rev. and Mrs. N. E. Cook last Friday.

Last Monday night was a happy occasion for Bro. Cook, when a number of his relatives and friends met in his home to celebrate his birthday. All enjoyed a real good supper wit hhim and enjoyed seeing him open his nice useful gifts, for which he expressed his appreciation.

Remember prayer meeting each Wednesday night at 6:30 p.m.

ADVENTIST CHURCH

The following partial report of foreign missionary membership taken from The Review and Herald, the official church paper of the Seventh-day Adventists is:

"The completed membership report from South Africa for the year 1952, revealed that there were 99,402 baptized Seventh-day Adventists in the division as of December 31, 1952. It was evident that it would not be long before the 100,000 mark would be passed. This event took place some time during the first quarter of 1953, for at the end of the first quarter 1953, the membership had reached 101,152.

"This is the first of our world divisions outside of North America to pass the 100,000 mark. Two others—Inter-American and Southern Europe are close behind South Africa with more than 90,000 each.

The talking picture topic Sunday evening 7 o'clock will be "Who Changed the Sabbath." — Allen Walker, Pastor.

MACEDONIA

The Rev. Clyde Finnley brought us two wonderful messages Sunday. Sunday morning he taught the need of every Christian growing upright, inright, downright and outright.

Mr. and Mrs. W. L. Garner of Maplesville are visiting this week with daughters and family, Mr. and Mrs. D. E. Moore and Mr. and Mrs. Jimmie Ward.

Mr. and Mrs. Proctor Davenport's Sunday guest was Mrs. Mamie Veazey.

Mr. Jake Smith of the Air Force is home visiting with home folks. He will return to Puerto Rica.

Mr. and Mrs. D. E. Moores' Sunday afternoon visitors were Rev. and Mrs. E. C. Hand of Clanton; Mr. and Mrs. Isaac Waldrop and Mr. Brown Bolding. Their Sunday night guests were Mr. and Mrs. W. L. Garner.

Mr. and Mrs. Floyd Ward and Tommy of Birmingham visited last week with Mr. Joe Ward and Mr. and Mrs. Jimmie Ward. They, with Mr. and Mrs. D. E. Moore and Mr. and Mrs. Woodie Rasberry attended the Fair.

The business meeting last Saturday night at the home of Mr. and Mrs. Pratt Crumpton was, we pray, a gateway to a better Sunday School. We divided our class into two groups. Mr. Dick Langston being the leader of group No. 1, Mr. J. D. Hayes leader of group No. 2, Mrs. Coy Rasberry, home extension leader, and Mrs. Proctor Davenport, recording secretary. With this new arrangement we plan to reach into homes that shelter shut-ins, visit with those who seem unconcerned and an occasional visit in the jails. We want that "Million More in 54."

Gather with us next Sunday and let us worship our Savior.

Folks and Things ABOUT TOWN

—By Ben

John Ponder Lawrence, Jr., is a bum. He invited us down to his river camp to spend last Sunday afternoon, and then gave us the wrong directions and we couldn't find the place. They told us just watch for the signs. Well they were right. Between town and the river there are possibly five thousand signs, but none of them spelled "Lawrence." Now there was just about any other kind of sign you could want. They ranged all the way from "eat more Holsum" to "is your bed bumpy? Do you sleep on rocks?" And great goodness, the names on boards and things ranged all the way from A to Z. Come to find out after much driving we were on the wrong road, as we usually are. But it really wasn't J. P. Jr.'s fault. He thought we knew in what general direction his camp was as the crow flies. Only trouble is—we ain't no crow. We're kidding about him being a bum. We got to go up there right now and see if we can sell him some business.

While we're talking about the river, a friend of ours told us late Sunday afternoon just after we returned around down there that it was even dusty out on the river in a motor boat.

Did you know that men aren't the only animals that have funny habits? An authority was telling us the other day that when a lady picked up an item in a grocery store to read the contents on the package or to inspect it in any way, she never bought the package that she had inspected. Invariably she will put that package, can or container back and pick up the one beside it. Now brother, if you want something to ponder over, that's a dilly.

Chilton County cotton growers are running about 7 to 5 percent over last year's crop, according to a report received today from the District Supervisor Bureau of the Census. On October 1st last year the ginners in the county had ginned 5,761 bales of cotton and on October 1st, this year 7,087 bales have been ginned. Now this figure could be greatly increased if all the cotton we have seen along the edge of the roads around the county could be picked up and ginned.

Gonna' be big doings over at Mrs. Dora Smitherman's at Randolph next Sunday. We have a special invitation to attend on account of we are a member of the family. Her dad, Jess Tucker, and our granddad were brothers. Now Cousin Dora Smitherman is celebrating her 88th birthday anniversary and all the klan will be there. We wish for her many more birthdays and we sincerely hope she has the time of her young life next Sunday.

Well here goes our last paragraph for the day and if our preacher catches us it may be our last paragraph, period. There was the dear old lady who sent her pastor a box of assorted goodies with this note: "Dear Pastor, knowing that you do not eat sweets, I am sending the candy to your wife, and nuts to you."

GOOD ROADS PAY SAFETY DIVIDENDS

Opp Ala., October 16— Unsafe highways are costing Alabama motorists more than $40 million a year in economic loss, W.B. Timmons, secretory-manager of the Alabama Motorists Assn., told the Opp Lions Club today.

Mr. Timmons said a great road-building program would result in huge savings to the motoring public by cutting down property damage and personal injuries racked up in auto accidents.

He pointed to a survey just completed by the Virginia Department of Highways in support of his argument that better roads save lives mean fewer accidents on the highways.

He said the Virginia state agency found that the accident rate in 1952 on a test section of the modern Shirley Highway in that state was 78 per cent below the accident rate on a comparable test section of the neighboring U.S. Route 1. The death rate was 75 per cent lower on the Shirley Highway.

The Shirley Highway (U.S. Route 350) is considered Virginia's most modern road, Mr. Timmons said. Along its 18-mile course in North Virginia, opposing traffic lanes are widely divided. There are no intersections, all intersecting roads crossing it on bridges and connected to it by clover-leaf arrangements. Curves are gentle and banked. There are no service stations, roadside businesses or driveways that have access to the highway.

Mr. Timmons said that a reckless driver, or drunken driver, will make any road dangerous.

"But the Shirley Highway test," Mr. Timmons said "proves that better roads will bring about a sharp cut in the number of highway deaths and traffic accidents.

"It is easier to move a hill or curve than it is to make every human being who drives an automobile a perfect engineer when he is at the wheel. Removal of dangerous intersections by construction of clover-leafs and other engineering devices will keep some accidents from happening. Construction of four-lane roads, with a wide separating strip for opposing lanes of traffic will keep some accidents from happening too."

Reduce Hog Losses With Good Housing And Feeds

Auburn, Ala. — Hog raisers can decrease losses and increase gains this fall by providing their animals with adequate housing and good feeds, says G. B. Phillips, API Extension animal industry specialist.

"Housing breeding and fattening stock in clean, dry quarters that are free from drafts," he explains. "Replace dusty bedding with clean, dry straw, and if the weather is cold, fill in holes in the walls and floor. Be sure farrowing quarters are warm and dry and equipped with guard rails to prevent the sow from mashing the baby pigs.

"When the fall litter arrives, pay special attention to both the pigs and the sow. Thirty-three out of every 100 pigs farrowed die before weaning age—and most of these deaths are caused indirectly by chilling. Since small pigs have very little resistance to cold, use hover-type heat lamps or light bulbs to keep them warm.

"Newborn pigs are also extremely susceptible to starvation during the first few days of life. So if the sow fails to have sufficient milk, provide little pigs with artificial feeding until enough milk is produced.

"It's essential too that the mother be well cared for. During the first 36 hours after she farrows, give the sow a very light ration that contains plenty of liquids but little solid food. Then gradually increase her ration until the sow is on a full balanced menu."

Steffe First In Concert Series This Evening

The array of artists to be presented at the courthouse auditorium for the 1952-53 Chilton County Community Concert Association, rival any in its past seven years of its existence. Never before has the concert course offered three performances, of such outstanding famous names.

Opening the concert season, on Monday evening, October 26, will be Edwin Steffe, a repeat artist. The Association was indeed fortunate to be able to present this renowned baritone for a return engagement. Because of his wonderful voice, and his own appealing quality, the many admirers of Mr. Steffe's public have clamored for his return, and the Concert Association has reopened the campaign, and tickets may be purchased right on up to the concert hour on Monday evening.

This series of concerts is a great opportunity, not only for our youth, but for all the people of our County. The members of the Concert Association are making vast contributions to the County's cultural and entertainment life. What are you doing Mr. and Mrs. Citizen to encourage the vast outlay of energy effort and time, which these members expend to make ours a name city. This deep concentration of earnest effort needs much public support. Without it they cannot continue to expand, improve or even exist. Our young people particularneed this support. Is yours the moral sustainence which will promote for them a higher level than that which makes street loafing possible. "What lovelier way to expand their lives than with music, helping them, and ourselves to master the means for this personal and highly individual culture. Just to sit and quietly listen to the voices and talents of great artists has its creative moments, as has been aptly said. Let us not decry the few worthwhile opportunities offered to the youth of our town, unless we are patrons of those things which tend to build for them higher ideals, at a time in their lives, "When all the fields are green, and every goose is a swan lad and every lass a queen."

Let each of us as responsible citizens get behind the ticket sales, and with our membership purchase re-echo the slogan: Community Concerts come to our Town. Our children will always remember if it did.

Food Preservation An Asset To Chilton County Farmers

"Approximately 225 families in Chilton County cooperated in the garden program sponsored by the Farmers Home Administration and the National Garden Institute this year, County FHA Supervisor Murphree announced today. These families have greatly increased the amount of food grown and preserved for family use during 1953.

The practices stressed during the year were in accordance with recommendations of the experiment stations. Included were items that every successful farmer should follow for a good food production program. The suggested items were

1. Proper preparation and fertilization of land
2. Planting recommended varieties of vegetables.
3. Providing minimum of six vegetables growing all seasons of the year
4. Producing good quality vegetables.
5. Making successive plantings of vegetables
6. Keeping vegetables properly cultivated.
7. Controlling insects.
8. Producing an adequate amount to supply family needs
9. Canning or freezing adequate amount of food, good quality and variety

A score card was used to determine the best gardens and the best food preservation programs as measured by the above items. The majority of families participating followed a good number of the suggested practices and had excellent gardens. Final determination of awards was made by three selected county judges. The important items considered in home preservation of food were: Quarts of food canned or frozen; variety; and quality. This means that all participating families can have the same variety of foods in January that they had in June. Only those families who did an outstanding job could be awarded a "Certificate of Merit," but many others received honorable mention because of their contribution in the program.

It is of major importance that an abundant amount of food be grown for home use since this means better food, better health, and a great savings in the grocery bill. We think much good has been accomplished in this program and these families will live better this winter. The Farmers Home Administration and the National Garden Institute who made the awards possible are justly proud of the progress made by those participating in the program, says FHA Supervisor Murphree.

JOE M. MURPHREE,
County Supervisor.

Until Nov. 15th To Buy New Car Tags

Montgomery, Ala. — Alabama car owners now have until November 15th to purchase new 1954 license plates without penalty.

For the first time this year also pickup owners can use $3 tags on the truck, if that is their only means of transportation.

The 1953 Alabama Legislature changed the law to cover pickup trucks. Motorists will get two tags this year. Because of the Korean conflict and the danger of a steel shortage, the 1951 legislature had authorized single tags.

MUSIC CLUB HOST TO CHARLES F. BRYAN

The Clanton Music Club will have Charles Faulkner Bryan as their guest at their regular meeting Tuesday, October 20th. The meeting will be held at the home of Mrs. W. E. Huddleston.

A large number of choral compositions from his pen have been issued by leading publishers and he has had five successful performances of his musical play Strangers In This World.

His accomplishments are far too numerous to mention here, but it is a distinct honor for the Clanton Music Club to have one so prominent in the musical world as their guest.

IT IS reported in Washington that the retail-sales-tax idea which the administration entertained for several weeks received such violent reaction from the public it actually scared its proponents. It was for this reason that President Eisenhower promised that the government would not seek to put a sales tax on articles when the retailer sells them.

The Treasury Department is now studying a plan to put a sales tax at the manufacturers' level. It has been pointed out that such a tax would be passed on to the consumer in higher prices. At the moment it is predicted that the reaction to such a tax will be as great as against the retail tax and the administration will drop the idea.

Of all its problems, taxation is the biggest headache facing the administration. The G.O.P. campaigned on the promise of lower taxes, a balanced budget, and free enterprise. As yet the administration has been unable to meet the lower taxes promise.

It finds itself unable to balance the budget because of rising costs of government operation, foreign commitments, and national security. It can not reduce taxes without a balanced budget and it can not balance the budget with reduced taxes.

As a result the administration has been searching for a way to eliminate unpopular taxes and substitute other measures not so unpopular. Here again it faces an impossible taxes. The seed has been planted that taxes should be reduced. The natural result has been that all taxes are unpopular. That is not a new thought as far as the American people are concerned. They have never liked paying taxes; they will never like to do so.

● President Eisenhower and Adlai Stevenson are not as far apart on foreign policy as most Republican and Democrat politicians would like to believe.

For instance, Stevenson recently suggested that a nonaggression pact with Russia might be a good thing to relieve tension in Europe. Later, after a call at the White House, Stevenson reported that the President to be "very interested" in the plan.

Stevenson said of the plan: "If Russia was unwilling to accept the proposal it would be rather apparent that her peaceful professions aren't as sincere as they might seem." He added: It would put the Russians on the spot with respect to their intentions.

● The fact that the American people are more religious than at any period in their history is substantiated by a recent report of the National Council of the Churches of Christ in the U. S. A.

The council reports the latest revision of the Bible has sold more copies in its first year than any other book ever published.

The revised version of the Bible is the book of 15 years by 32 scholars and was authorized by 40 Protestant denominations. It has been received by waves of praise, as well as bitter criticism. However, it has been approved by most major church bodies, including many that did not participate in the project.

These Are The Facts ---

Educational Costs Rising Faster Than Appropriated Revenues

Much talk is heard these days about the increased cost of living and the difficulties involved. This becomes a matter of grave concern to Boards of Education with Chilton's being no exception. Although revenues to the Board have increased considerably during recent years, the increase is to a great extent nullified by the fact that operational costs have increased considerably at the same time. For the sake of comparison, we will use some costs as they are compared with the same items in 1940:

Student's desk (1940) $4.87; (1953) $11.50.

Teacher's desk (1940) $12.35; (1953) $32.75.

School bus (1940) $1,252.00; (1953) $2,789.00.

Bus driver (adult) (1940) $20.00 per mo.; (1953) $65.00 per mo.

Lumber B. & Btr. (1940), $40 per M.; (1953) $120 per M.

Nut coal (1940) $4.00 per ton; (1953) $11.00 per ton.

Insurance (state) (1940) $3,097; (1953) $14.224.

The increase in construction is in part due to the increase in teachers salaries over the period. It is largely due, however, to the fact that the school term has been increased in the elementary and Jr. High Schools from 7 months in 1940 to 9 months in 1953. A considerable portion of this has gone for improved instructional supplies and equipment also.

However, during the same period receipts from certain taxes have not shown the same inclination as is shown by the following figures:

	1940	1953
County 4-mill tax	45,552.	53,671
District 3-mill	32,736	40,249
Poll tax	2,584	1,914

These figures readily show that county tax receipts have not kept pace with costs. The difference is somewhat reconciled with the fact that state sources (including sales tax) have increased from $135,550 in 1940 to more than $629,000 in 1953.

With these two important forces working on the "pocket book" of Boards of Education, current operation is about all revenues will take care of, leaving little or nothing to take care of new building and equipment.

THE GREENLEASE CASE

It has been a long time since the United States witnessed a kidnaping case which matched in horror the aspects surrounding the recent abduction and death of Bobby Greenlease. Perhaps the other kidnaping cases since the Lindbergh case, has exceeded the public's reaction to this one.

As so often happens in such cases, the kidnaped child became a victim and the kidnapers lost their gamble. While it seems that even the stupidest criminal would realize the odds against him in a kidnaping case, this is another instance in which greed overcame whatever intelligence the kidnapers possessed.

THE BOX SCORE ON POLIO

Early this year there was widespread speculation on the success which gamma globulin would score against the dreaded disease, polio. For the first time in the nation's existence, a serum which immunizes some children against polio was available.

Now that the polio season is on the wane, the experts are going into the records and checking the effects of the first use of gamma globulin. Although there have been reports that the serum has been a flop, the U. S. Public Health Service has a different view.

For instance, as the 1953 polio season began, cases appeared at about the same pace as they did in 1952—a record year. Gamma globulin was put into use and cases reported slowed.

While there is, of course, differing opinions on the effectiveness of gamma globulin, some public health officers believe the serum prevented 1953 from being a new high water mark for the disease.s They note that gamma globulin was first used in July, in mass immunizations, and that shortly afterwards, the number of cases reported declined.

Since at least twice as much gamma globulin will be available next year, it is hoped that the number of cases of polio will be reduced still further. There is also a new vaccine, which is expected to be ready for initial tests. Early speculation about this new vaccine is encouraging and, therefore, the year 1953 has produced concrete results against this dreaded disease.

OUR FUTURE LEADERS

Around OUR HOUSE

by Kathryn Tucker Windham

Just any day now we're going to have to call on Nelly Don, Hope Reed or some other clothes maker to come help us whip up some costumes for Hallowe'en.

Gone are the days when an old sheet (we're well supplied) and a mask from the dime store provided adequate costume for Hallowe'en. Our six-year-old member of the First Grade has very definite and very difficult ideas about how she and her younger brother and sister shall be costumed for the occasion.

The latest information is that the six-year-old will be a butterfly with a purple velvet dress (long) and big wings with "beautiful colored spots all over them." There's talk of an ornate crown, too. Seems she's the queen of the Hallowe'en butterflies.

There was an equally elaborate costume planned for the four-year-old, but he, bless his rebellious heart, staunchly refuses to consider wearing such a get-up. I now have high hopes that he'll be happy draped in an old sheet.

The one-year-old hasn't expressed any costume preference yet, but it's doubtful that she'll appear in the pink rabbit costume, complete with long ears, the six-year-old planned. Very doubtful!

The mother down the street, the one with the big family, always has a party for the neighborhood children Hallowe'en night, keeping them so happy and busy at her house that they don't have time to get into any mischief.

She gets the children into a party mood by sending each child a special "mystery" invitation. Using a clean pen, she writes the invitations with a strong soda solution. The paper appears to be blank until it is held up to the light.

This neighbor always has a good variety of games planned to keep her young guests entertained. One of the favorites is Ghost Race, played like this:

Guests are divided into two teams and lined up by couples at one end of the room. The first couple on each team is given a suitcase containing two masks and two sheets. At a signal, the couples run to the other end of the room, open the suitcase, put on the costumes, run back to the starting line with the suitcase, take off the costumes, put them back into the cuitcase and hand the suitcase to the next couple in line who follow the same procedure. The team whose couples finish first wins.

Another popular game is called Spook's Nose Race. Each team is given the cover from a small box of safety matches. The captain of the team places the match cover on his nose and passes it to the nose of the player next in line. The team which first passes the cover to all the members wins. If the cover falls, it may be picked up with the hands and placed on the nose again, but otherwise no hands may touch it.

No Hallowe'en party is complete without bobbing for apples. This neighbor combines apple bobbing with fortune telling by pressing articles into the apples to foretell the players' future. For example, pennies mean the players will be rich, rings foretell marriage, a thimble predicts spinsterhood, etc.

Safe Hunting

Hunting is one of the most popular of all sports, but one which each year is associated with accident. Carelessness and thoughtlessness are two factors which contribute to this unfortunate circumstance.

In inexperienced hands, a loaded gun is a dangerous weapon. The safety mechanism is a device intended to protect the hunter from careless handling, yet many persons ignore it when carrying their gun. The safety device should always be locked when the gun is not actually in play.

Some persons walk along with a finger on the trigger, forgetting that a stumble or a fall could result in the accidental discharge of a shell. Feet have been maimed, and companions have been injured and even killed through this careless factor. Irreparable damage has been incurred by carelessly looking down into a gun barrel. Climbing over a fence or up into a tree with a loaded gun is also dangerous. A person should first slip the gun under the fence, if possible, to obviate any accidental occurrence.

When walking on a narrow trail, the gun should always be held with the barrel pointing well above the head. The gun should never be carried by the barrel or in such a way that it could accidentally, through a fall or bumping, be deflected against the body, permitting the discharge of a shell.

Severe accidents have occurred in duck blinds because one hunter is positioned directly behind another. All hunters should have front, unimpeded positions in the blind. In this manner, there is no opportunity for one hunter to shoot another.

Never carry a loaded gun in an automobile. Always unload it and then place it on the floor board.

So, hunters, enjoy your hunting season. By heeding a few precautionary measures, you will keep yourself free from accidents and contribute to the safety of others.

Use Warfarin Baits To Keep Farm Free Of Rats

November is the best time to wage war on rats because the combination of cool weather and stored grain drives these pests out of fields and woods into farm buildings.

API Extension Entomologist W A. Ruffin advises farmers to ratproof all their storage facilities as the first step in their campaign. Then clean up all trash and junk piles, and stack lumber at least one foot off the ground.

"The most effective way to keep the farmstead free of rats," he continues, "is to use poison baits that contain warfarin. Keep baits exposed at all times in shallow containers near rat runways."

DALE CARNEGIE

AUTHOR OF "HOW TO STOP WORRYING AND START LIVING"

MRS. CLIFFORD SNYDER, 616 E. Fifth Street, N. Manchester, Indiana, had never stayed alone in her life until she was married and moved to a small town. They lived in an old house with five outside doors, none of which had a good lock. Her husband was gone two or three nights a week and every night she spent there alone, she set a chair in front of each door with a large pan balanced on the edge. She slept fairly well knowing that anyone trying to enter would waken her.

CARNEGIE

When they built their own home, they had two outside doors with good locks on each and she felt reasonably secure when alone. The back door stuck and made a terrific noise when opened which also added to her security.

One night she awoke to find her husband standing in her bedroom. He had come in unexpectedly. She sat up in bed and screamed at him. She was so provoked to think he had not only come through the shuddering back door, but had turned lights on, walked through the whole house and even opened the bedroom door and she hadn't heard him. From then on she was really scared.

Every little noise wakened her and her hair stood on end until she could identify it. One night she was wakened by hearing the floor in the hall creaking. She thought someone was tip-toeing outside. A board creaked and she became rigid. Another creaked and she broke out in cold sweat. She waited and waited.

Finally she decided she couldn't remain like that all night. If someone was coming to get her he would just have to come and get her. She reasoned that most burglars enter for the purpose of stealing that they seldom entered an occupied house. They were more afraid of being caught than she was of catching them. She relaxed and went to sleep.

After facing the facts and realizing that she was reasonably safe, she has not been afraid since.

Alcohol Is One Of Nation's Worst Traffic Hazards

Drinking drivers and intoxicated pedestrains who stumble into the path of vehicles on streets and highways present one of the most serious aspects of the growing problem of traffic accidents, a noted highway safety authority said today.

In the larger cities, as much as 60 percent of fatal accidents occurring at night can be attributed to drinking drivers and pedestrains, according to Thomas N. Boate, accident prevention department manager of the Association of Casualty and Surety Companies. On weekends and during holiday periods, when drinking is more prevalent than usual, drivers kill and injure more victims than at any other time. Pedestrains who have been drinking also are run down then more frequently by drunk or sober drivers who cannot stop their vehicles in time to prevent an accident.

Actual statistics on the major role drinking plays in rural accidents in one state also were cited by Mr. Boate as indicative of the acuteness of the problem in all areas. In the country the factor of speed is combined with the deadly potential of alcohol, he noted, and the casualty rate is as bad if not worse in rural sections than it is in the cities.

Forty-nine percent of all rural fatal accidents in this state involved a drinking driver, according to official studies. Nearly a third of the non-fatal accidents—31 percent—also involved drivers who had been drinking, Mr. Boate said. To attain these high averages, he pointed out, the involvement of intoxicated drivers in deew-end and holiday accidents undoubtedly ran far higher.

Involvement of pedestrains who "had been drinking" ran almost as high. In fatal accidents in rural areas, 42 percent of the pedestrains killed and 23 percent of those injured "had been drinking," according to this state's official count.

The extent of the deadly practice of drinking-and-driving, which Mr. Boate said is linked as much to the unwise social practices of taking "one for the road" or stopping at taverns or roadhouses for alcoholic refreshment while traveling, is also borne out by the large numbers of drivers who lose their licenses in a number of states for driving while intoxicated, he added.

Thirty-five states reported that in 1952 a total of 166,179 drivers had their licenses suspended or revoked for drinkin-and-driving. The totals ran from 129 in one of the smallest states in the east to 15,651 in one of the largest western states. Significantly, he said, the charge of driving while intoxicated accounted for 35 percent of all license suspensions and revocations in the nation during 1952, which begins to indicate how many drunken drivers are abroad on streets and highways—and these were only the ones who were arrested and convicted, he added.

"Driving while drunk is the unforgivable sin of the motorist," declared Mr. Boate. "Many thousands of drinking drivers kill themselves or innocent people in accidents every year, or they are severely injured or cripple blameless persons, simply because they are willing to take the risk that an accident will not occur after they have had one or more drinks before taking the wheel.

"In some states nearly all of the license suspensions or revocations strike at drinking drivers because they are considered the most dangerous operators of vehicles. Only this kind of unrelenting treatment, which removes the opportunity of a driver to go out on the streets and highways and kill and cripple himself, his passengers, other travelers and pedestrains, can have a real effect in diminishing the grave problem of drinking-and-driving accidents.

"When the police, the courts and licensing authorities act together in concert to apprehend and punish all drinking drivers and take away their licenses before they kill and maim others, rather than after accidents occur, the drivers who drink become less and less willing to risk being caught and suffering the consequences of their rash act, incluidng a stiff fine or a jail sentence. This has been demonstrated in community after community and state after state.

"Leniency for drinking drivers is almost as much of a crime as the act of drinking-and-driving itself. No city or state should ever tolerate it."

Thursday, November 5th, is circus day in Clanton.

King Bros. & Cristiani Combined Shows, one of the world's largest, will exhibit here under the auspices of the Jr. Chamber of Commerce.

This colossus of modern day amusements is now in its 34th season. There are 600 people with the show, 150 arenic stars, 250 wild animals including 15 elephants and a blood sweating hippopotamus of Holy Writ.

Acres of ground are used to house the 22 tents, the largest—the huge arena, provides comfortable seats for over 5,000 people. The daily operating expense of the circus is $7,400.

Girls and girls, clowns and clowns, elephants and elephants!

Without them there would be no circus. There are 20 clowns and 80 girls with King Bros. & Cristiani this season.

Circuses of the better class look after the welfare of their women performers with a surprising regard to detail. They are provided with special sleeping cars in which they live while on the road. Conversation with strangers is prohibited.

Looking after the ballet girls or other unmarried feminine members of the circus is the "mother." She is one of the most interesting characters of the circus. In short she is the chaperon.

Mrs. Claudia White, the chaperon with the King Bros. & Cristiani Circus, through her long experience with life under the "big top," has made her familiar with every detail of the business and she knows what to do when an emergency arises. Men and women alike come to her with the petty troubles that are bound to occur in the uncertain and strenuous existence they lead.

Two of the talented girls with the big show this season are the El Rey Sisters. They are "high flyers in the big top and their daring aerial exploits on the trapeze are astounding. The girls are members of the Piccadily troupe imported from England, recently.

EL REY SISTERS

An immense and spectacular street parade will be seen on the downtown streets at 11:30 a.m. Doors to the big show will open at 1 and 7 p.m. The performances on account of the length, will start at 2 and 8 p.m.

Get ready for the big holiday! Circus will show on the Airport Show Grounds.

ADVENTIST CHURCH

Last week this pastor, while in Birmingham, was browsing over some books in the Baptist Book Store and ran into the following information about Seventh-day Adventists:

"In North America the average per capita gifts for 1948 was 135.72. Of this amount 2.70 went to foreign missions as compared to 79 cents per capita for Southern Baptists."

It is safe to say that the per capita expense for cigaretts in any large denominational church is more than 29.70 a year. One package of cigaretts a day costs 25 cents. For the year it costs $91.25 a year. Think of 29.70 a year for foreign missions and $91.25 for cigaretts. We wonder if Rev. 18:1-6 comes in here.

The War Against Beverage Alcohol (Temperance).

Lesson for October 25: Isaiah 5: 11-14; Matthew 18: 6; Romans 13: 11-14; James 4: 17.

Golden Text: Romans 12: 2.

There is unqualified condemnation of beverage alcohol in the passage from Isaiah included in the lesson text. The night clubs of the present may be thought of when we read of the carrying on by night in old Jerusalem in the time of the great prophet. He writes that those who indulged in riotous living did not regard Jehovah and the operation of his hands. This suggests the tragedy of strong drink users at the present; they are forgetful of God and do not live according to his laws. And they are forgetful of the fact that they must drain the bitterness of the dregs by and by. Far from bringing happiness, strong drink will bring unhappiness and ruin in the end.

If the great prophet condemned the use of the wines of his day, what would he say, if he were living now, of the distilled drinks of the present?

Jesus warned men of causing little ones to stumble. What a dread responsibility must they bear who invade the homes of the land with their advertisements of liquor?

There is needed much in addition to condemnation of the liquor traffic. Counter measures are needed, some plans to lead men out of the toils of the traffic. In the thought of the apostle Paul, the remedy for taking strong drink and all other evil things is the gospel of Christ. Let us strive to magnify the gospel before men that their thoughts may be turned from liquor and all evils.

District Dairy Maid Represents Chilton At State Fair

Patsy Young, Chilton County 4-H Dairy Maid, who was chosen District Dairy Maid at the contest in Dadeville, September 11th-12th, attended the State Fair, October 6th, through 8th, along with the other District Dairy Maids of the State. Patsy was selected from the Dairy Maids from six or eight counties who were represented in the Dadeville Cattle Show and Dairy Maid Contest.

While the Dairy Maids were in Birmingham they stayed at the Molton Hotel. Miss Ann Barr, Girls' State 4-H Leader, was chaperone. The 4-H'ers were special guests at the Fair and on Wednesday they were entertained at a lunchon by Liberty National Life Insurance Company.

Patsy is the daughter of Mr. and Mrs. E. R. Young of Cane Creek Community. She is a Sr. I at Chilton County High School and is very active in school, church and community activities. As a 4-H member, Patsy is very outstanding. Although she has been in the 4-H Club only two years she has proved to be a very good member and leader. She has served as President and Secretary of her Club and is now first Vice-President of the Chilton County 4-H Council. She attended State 4-H Camp in Auburn during the summer and represented Chilton County in the State Dress Revue. Patsy has as 4-H projects clothing, cooking and gardening.

Keep Them Laying To Get Top Egg Prices

Because egg prices are at their peak in November and December, growers should keep hens laying at a high rate, believes John Weeks, API Extension poultryman.

"Try to maintain the pullet flock at 60 per cent production or better during this period," says the poultry expert. "Hens often show signs of slowing up during November, but they can usually be stimulated to higher production by turning morning lights on one hour earlier and by providing one 40-watt bulb for each 50 hens. Increasing the size of the bulb used in all-night lights is also effective."

Sell timber when it needs cutting, when prices are high, or when cash is needed to pay debts.

Nitrogen Side Dressings Help Crops Race Frosts

One pint of nitrate of soda or sulfate of ammonia to each 100 feet of row gives satisfactory results, says API Extension Horticulturist John Bagby. One-half pint of ammonium nitrate or two gallons of chicken manure to each 100 feet of row will also hasten crop growth. Except for chicken manure, which gives best service when dug lightly into the surface, these fertilizers do not have to be mixed with the soil.

"This side-dressing, applied three inches from the rows and followed immediately by irrigation or hose water, is tops in speeding up any greens crop, as well as cabbage, radishes, beets, carrots, tomatoes, and beans," concludes the garden expert.

Folks and Things ABOUT TOWN

—By Ben

Understand we are not making fun of the little boys and girls who made the signs for the Methodist Bazaar, but we do think that some of them are very original and cute. The boys and girls at the Clanton Elementary School made the signs for all the show-windows in town and are to be congratulated for their efforts. In fact if we had our way each would get a big turkey drum-stick for his or her effort. However, what we started to say was that we noticed this sign in a down town window:

Arthur Littlejohn of Baltimore, Md., was guest of his mother and sister and brother-in-law, Judge and Mrs. J. O. Middleton, for a few days last week. Mr. Littlejohn is a successful Baltimore businessman and gets back to his native State every now and then. He complimented us on our newspaper which made us very happy and even though he migrated to the land of the Yam Dankees, we are always glad to have him visit us.

Edwin Steffe is the first of three outstanding artists who will be presented this season by the Community Concert Association. Mrs. W. H. Klinner and Mrs. Raymond Mims, we are told, are most responsible for Mr. Steffe's return which was inspired by popular demand from members of the Association. Chilton County and Clantin are indeed fortunate in having this renowned artist and its youth is fortunate in the opportunity to attend these concerts. Le us give our support to this Association which is making such courageous effort towards its success. The first concert of the season is next Monday evening in the courthouse auditorium.

Anything for another convention. Now they are calling all C.B.I's. We received a letter today from one Mr. W. P. Burke of Route 5, Chillicothe, Ohio. Mr. Burke asks that we publicize the fact that a convention of the C.B.I's. will be held in Washington, D.C., from August 5 through 8, 1954. He states that it will be a fine place to see all your C.B.I. buddies. Now that seems to be making plans a little far ahead but there is nothing like getting in on the ground floor, we always say, so we guess veterans of the C.B.I. just wanted to get their convention in the pot early. By-the-way, Mr. Burke says for further information and application blank to write him. And by-the-way, again. That C.B.I. stands for China-Burma-India in case you had forgotten.

Now the way we heard it Dock Levine and Jimmy Bell were standing on the street down town discussing one thing and another when home life got mixed into the conversation. One of them said to the other, and we ain't saying, which, even if he did say we needed to go home and shave the other morning —"Naturally the wife takes complete charge of the children, the servants, the dog and cat, and the canary, but I can just about say anything I please to the goldfish."

BENEFIT CARD PARTY

The annual Benefit Card Party, which is sponsored by the Garden Club of Clanton, will be held on Tuesday, October 27th, at 2:30 o'clock at the Clanton Country Club. Bridge, Canasta and Bingo tables will be set up. The public is invited. Tickets can be obtained from any Garden Club member. With each ticket goes a chance on a lovely camelia.

Proceeds from this party will go for civic improvements. Refreshments will be served.

Carter To Wrestle Red Terror Here Tuesday Night

Jaycees Will Sponsor Matches At Gragg Field

There will be grunting and groaning in the big hangar at Clanton Airport next Tuesday night, October 27, when the Clanton Junior Chamber of Commerce sponsors a double main event wrestling card.

In the main go Nick Carter, the Oneonta Giant, will meet the rough and ready Red Terror of parts unknown.

Carter, who will weigh in at around 240 pounds, is well-known around these parts. He is one of the very few wrestlers to come back into the business after having his back broken in a match. Nick has wrestled a long list of top-notch wrestlers such as Lew Fez, Baron Michele Leone, Tony Rocca, and Gorgeous George.

The Red Terror, weighing in at around 225 pounds, is well-known in West Coast and Mid-West rings and has just recently fought his way into the Southeastern rings. He too, has fought nearly every big name in the business and is widely known for his rough tactics.

The only pre-fight statement the News was able to obtain was made by the Red Terror, through his booking agent, who says he'll take Carter in two straight falls. If he can it will put him up a notch in wrestling circles since Nick is a top-contender.

This is to be a 2 fall out of 3 match with a 60 minute time limit.

In the second match on the card there is to be beauty as well as brawn. This is to be a mixed tag team match wherein Nick Carter and Jane Goodwin will take on the Red Terror and Jo Ann Zager. This will be a 2 fall out of 3 affair with a ninety minute time limit.

Refereeing both matches will be Johnny Card of Birmingham. Johnny got his start in wrestling on the West Coast and then returned to his home state of Alabama. The referee is licensed by the State Atheletic Commission and his word is final in all decisions and matches.

Fight starts at 8:30 and there will be ample seating for all, plus a booth for refreshments, so come on out.

Community Concerters Open Season

The Chilton County Community Concert Association will open its eighth season at the auditorium of the Courthouse on Monday evening, October 26th, at 8 o'clock, presenting the great American baritone, Edwin Steffe.

Mr. Steffe was born in Washington, D.C., a direct descendant of William Steffe, who, in 1852, wrote the music for what was to become practically a national anthem—The Battle Hymn of the Republic. Steffe equally successful in grand opera and light opera, radio and recital, concert and oratorio, began his career as a boy soprano, winning a singing scholarship at the National Cathedral School at eight, and singing soprano solos in the Washington Cathedral, where he was later to be a baritone soloist. He studied at the Peabody Conservatory in Baltimore under Frank Bibb, and made his recital and operatic debuts in his home city. Immediate encouragement was offered him by Nadia Boulanger, famous French Composer and conductor, who invited him to sing the baritone part in Faure's Requiem.

He then went to New York to become soloist at Radio City Music Hall, and soon broadened his field to include opera. With the New Opera Company Steffe sang performances in English of Pergolesi's La Serva Padrona, and for sixteen weeks on Broadway sang the lead in Offenbach's Helen Goes to Troy. Then he toured with the Columbia Opera Company, singing Escamillo in the "opera comique" version of Carmen in English.

Orchestras with which he has been soloist recently include the Philadelphia orchestra the Toronto Symphony, the Houston Symphony, The Oklahoma City Symphony, the National Symphony in Washington and the Harrisburg Symphony. He was in the cast of the New York premiere of Benjamin Britten's The Rape of Lucretia. In the summer of 1952, Mr. Steffe sang his seventh season as a leading member of the St. Louis Municipal Opera. He has sung sixty major light opera roles, and has also been featured two Rodgers and Hammerstein Festivals in St. Louis.

Oratorio has occupied a prominent place in his career, and he has, for example, seven appearances with the famous Bach Festival of Bethlehem, Penna., to his credit. His oratorio roles, which number more than seventy, include thirty scores of Bach, works of Beethoven, Elgar, Handel, Holst, Mendelssohn, Mozart, Rachmaninoff, Schutz and Verdi.

Mr. Steffe's artistic significance carries great inspiration to his large following of edmirers. A record attendance is expected. The students in the various communities are vying with each other for the "usher honors during the concert season. Old Clown Is Teacher For Circus Children

PROF. TAYLOR AND CLASS OF CIRCUS KIDDIES

There are more than a score of children with the King Bros., and Cristiani Circus. For the most part their parents are performers or officials. Don't think for a minute that the education of these circus kiddies is neglected.

The school bell rings in the morning before the street parade for some classes, others are held in the afternoon between the matinee and the evening exhibition. Their teacher is Edwin H. Taylor, a clown. While Prof. Taylor is one of the few, who can read the Latin names on the animal cages in the menagerie, he is a graduate of Dartmouth College, Hanover, N. H.

Leaving college Taylor was a real teacher and instructor. Ill health caused him to seek the hardy outdoor life of the circus. He organizes his classes at the beginning of each spring when the circus begins its tour. All summer long the children of the white tops attend their classes.

While Prof. Taylor is a clown in the circus, yet, when the school bell rings, he is all business, indeed no monkey business.

When the circus reaches Clanton on Thursday, November 5th, if you are about the show grounds, you are likely to see Prof Taylor's school in action.

Many Alabama farmers have more money invested in workstock than in all other classes of livestock combined.

Boosman recieved a flood of replies to his ad — more than 500 dogs, brought by scores of people. He didn't have to pay even $15, however, because he found Queenie himself.

Tigers Win Over Prattville Lions By Score Of 13-12

(By HAROLD SMYER)

The Chilton County Tigers edged by the Prattville Lions 13 to 12 last Friday night to remain undefeated this season. The game was the best and most exciting game of football for Clanton this year. Clanton journeys to Talladega Friday night to play Talladega High, a strong and fast team.

The Tigers' gridiron record this season is as follows:

Clanton 25	—	Maplesville 7
Clanton 32	—	Montevallo 0
Clanton 7	—	Wetumpka 7
Clanton 27	—	Columbiana 6
Clanton 13	—	Prattville 12
Clanton ?	—	Talladega ?
104		32

All-State Candidate Roy Mims leads the Tiger scoring with 60 points; followed by Wayne Hardy, with 24 points; Richard Caton, with 12; R. W. Duren, with 6; Larry Minor, with 1; and Phil Sims, with 1.

The game Friday night got underway with Hamner of the Lions kicking off to the Tigers. Caton received the kickoff and returned two yards to the Tiger 29. Mims gained 5, then Caton 6, for a first down on the 40. Caton gained 3 and Mims picked up 6, but Clanton was penalized 15 yards back to their 34. Mims picked up 5 yards, then Hardy tumbled and Knight recovered for Prattville on the Tiger 39. Hines lost 5 yards, then gained 9 yards to the Tiger 35. An attempted pass went incomplete and Langley punted over the goal line. From the 20 Mims got 7 yards and 4 yards to the 31. In two plays Hardy gained 8 yards and Mims picked up enough for a first down on the 42. Caton shot through for six yards, then Mims plowed to the mid-field strip. Because of a bad snap from center Caton lost 21 yards on the next play and it forced the Tigers to punt. Mims got off a wobbly 12 yard kick off the side of his foot which gave the Lions possession of the pigskin on the Tiger 41. Hines lost two yards, but the Tigers were penalized 15 yards and the Lions were given a first down on the Tiger 28. Jerry Golson gained 5 yards, then Evans sprinted 23 yards for a touchdown. So the bad punt and penalty proved costly to the Tigers. Curtis Baker broke through and blocked the Lions' attempted place-kick for the extra point and the Lions were out front 6 to 0.

Caton received the Prattville kickoff on his 18 and galloped to his 33. Mims gained 3, then Caton smashed for 13 yards. Mims got one yard, Minor failed to connect with Littlejohn on a pass, then Mims gained 7. Caton made it a first down on the Lions 40. Hardy failed to gain, then Clanton was penalized five yards. Minor attempted another pass, then Mims scatted for 11 yards, but not enough for a first down and he punted into the end zone. Hines sprinted for 11 yards to his 31, then gained 3, then fumbled on his 34 yard line and Obra Wilson recovered the pigskin for the Tigers. Hardy gained 4, another pass went incomplete, Minor ran for 9 yards and a first down on the Lions' 21. Mims got 3; Caton 4; then Mims got enough for a first down on the Lions' 11 yard line. Mims got loose for 7 more yards, Caton for 2 and Duren made it another first down on the Lions' one yard line. On the next play Mims crashed through to score and tie up the ball game. Tiger supporters went wild for a few seconds, but became quiet enough to hear a pin dropped when Mims place-kicked for the extra point. His kick went through the goal posts for the score and Clanton was ahead 7 to 6.

Littlejohn's kickoff went over the goal line for a touchback and Prattville started marching from their 20. Jimmy Golson ran for two yards, then Hamner cruised for sixteen yards. Sides bucked for 3, Mulligan passed to Evans for 5, and Evans went to the Tiger 40 yard line before being tackled. Prattville was penalized 5 yards on the next play because of backfield in motion; Evans failed to gain; Hines' pass went incomplete; and Mulligan threw a long pass which was intercepted by Minor on the Tiger 20 yard line. Minor ran back the interception to his 30 yard line, then one of his passes went incomplete and Mims galloped for 16 yards to his 46 yard line. Mims attempted a pass which went incomplete as the first half ended in which Prattville scored after a bad punt and penalty; and Clanton scored after a Prattville fumble on the Lions' 36 yard line.

Hines received Littlejohn's second half kickoff on his 8 yard line and sprinted to his 28 before being brought down. Sides crashed through for 3 yards; Prattville was penalized 5 yards; Hamner gained 4; Hines 2 and Langley got off a nice 56 yard punt which went out of bounds on the Tiger 22. Duren gained 3; Baker got 5 more on an end-around reverse; Mims got loose for 11; Caton failed to gain, then gained 4 yards. Mims lost 5 yards and was forced to punt from his own 40. He got off a 49 yard punt to the Lions' 11, but Sides made a good return of 23 yards. Hines failed to gain on the next play but got around left end on his next carry and nearly got away for a TD. Mims caught Hines and threw him out of bounds on the Tiger 25 yard line. Prattville received another 5 yard penalty for back field in motion and started losing ground. Hines lost 3 yards,

COLD WEATHER AHEAD?

Miss Eunice Merton, of West Richfield, Ohio, says the coming winter will be one of the hardest on record. Miss Merton predicts the wearther by watching bugs, bushes, animals and other natural phenomena.

Relying on the indications and clues, given by these various phenomena, she comes to a conclusion which she feels is as accurate as those of trained weather observers.

Recently there have been many signs to indicate a cold winter ahead, she says. Among them are the heavy coats grown by animals, the high level at which hornets have hung their nests—to keep them free from high snow drifts. Another sign, according to Miss Merton is a great hole in the Milky Way, which is letting cold air in from outer space. As a result, this weather prognosticator says the coming winter will be very severe, and you can make your plans accordingly.

NEEDED: MORE PRESIDENTIAL PRIMARIES

The Brookings Institution announced recently it was conducting a scientific study into political procedures involving the nomination of candidates for President. Heading the study group is Paul T. David, senior staff member of the institution, who calls the present method of selecting delegates to nominating conventions "intolerably confused."

The study focuses attention on the efforts of several senators and representatives, who, for several years, have been pushing a constitutional amendment to provide for presidential nominations through nationwide primaries. Legislatures have gradually begun to pass laws requiring state primaries, and advocates of this system point out that this gives the people of the state a chance to express their wishes on the party nominees, rather than allow delegates to be selected by a party committee or one executive officer.

The situation then arises, at the convention, in which the will of the people is not necessarily expressed. The delegates to the national nominating conventions should represent the views of the majority in the party which is holding the convention. However, that is not always the case in the two-party system now operating in this country.

We believe the voters of each party in every state should have an opportunity to vote, in some way, on delegates to the two parties' conventions. The candidate for nomination, who has the support of a majority in his party, should be the nominee and will enjoy the best chance of winning a victory for his party. This system will also reduce the pressure politics and the back-stage deals which have long been a familiar scene at party conventions in the United States.

R. W. Stremming Attended Plywood Convention In Tennessee Recently

Raymond W. Stremming, owner of the Stremming Veneer Company in Maplesville has recently returned from a convention of the Hardwood Plywood Association held in Memphis, Tenn. A brief sumary of the convention and its aims and problems is given below in a news clipping furnished to Chilton County News By Mr. Stremming.

IMPORTED PLYWOOD ALARMING INDUSTRY

(Taken from The Commercial Appeal, Memphis, Tenn.)

Fearing that the imports of foreign-made hardwood plywoods—plywoods made largely by machinery bought with Marshall Plan funds—poses a grave threat to the hardwood plywood industry in this country, representatives of nearly seventy per cent of America's output met yesterday at the Peabody to plan a course of action. They voted to call upon the Government for protection.

They were members of the Hardwood Plywood Institute which has headquarters in Chicago and of which S. F. Kuhns of the Southern Laminating Co. of Memphis is president.

Most From Japan—

The rapidly accelerating importation of hardwood plywoods, principally from Japan, which the plywood men said are being dumped on the American consuming market at far less than the producing cost here, was the cause of principal concern.

For the first six months of this year Japan exported 54,342,000 sq. feet of plywood to the United States. It was sold at an average price of $63 per thousand feet.

Canada exported 30,806,000 feet to this country. But the average price was $153 per thousand square feet.

Finland sent 18,584,000 square feet at an average cost of $79 per thousand square feet. Finland, in addition, sent many low-price doors.

A spokesman for the institute said that it is either a case of putting the foreign exporting nations on a quota basis or of lowering the standards of American living to meet the competition.

Up 50 Per Cent—

Imports of foreign-made plywoods has increased 50 per cent since January of this year, John A. McIver of Mellen, Wis., chairman of the institute's trade promotion committee, said.

Robert N. Hawes of Washington, counsel for the institute, said Canadian production is not considered foreign "because costs and prices are in most cases comparatible to those of United States producers."

The plywood manufacturers were especially alarmed about the importation of "Japanese plywoods which are being made under the direction of American specialists paid by America's Economic Co-Operation Administration and with American-made machinery bought with taxpayers' dollars."

GEM CACHE SEIZED

New York— Robert Edmund Deppe, 39, a native of Brussels, Belgium, and Samuel Lieberman, 46 of Brooklyn, were recently arrested in which customs officials called one of the biggest diamond smuggling hauls on record. Officials said they seized gems totaling 1,430 carats and valued at $233,230 when Deppe arrived in this country, piloting a Sabena (Belgian airlines) plane.

To control skippers and retard mold, store cured meat in cellophane bags, seal with a hot iron, and place on a slatted shelf.

From The Chickasha Star, Chickasha, Oklahoma: Did you know that your telephone is a luxury item?

It doesn't matter if you depend on it for fire and police protection, for shopping, for medical aid, to maintain a social life, in fact for the very operation of the business you depend upon to make a living.

Uncle Sam, for purposes of a big tax bite, classifies it as a luxury item.

This nonsensical definition has taken on fresh interest because of testimony before the House Ways and Means Committee, which is now studying tax revision.

From the Page News and Courier, Luray, Virginia: Did you ever wonder how the famous old law of supply and demand works? You saw a good example of the operation of that lately, this past summer just as you do every summer, in the trend of pork prices.

More than half of all pigs are born in the spring, and it takes six months for them to reach marketable size. Thus, less pork is available during the summer months. And as the supply goes down, while demand remains more or less constant, the price rises, reaching an annual high along about the latter part of August.

Come fall, the trend is reversed. Pigs are marketed in greater quantities. Supply is plentiful — and the inevitable result is that prices start to drop. The annual low is usually touched early in December.

In other words, natural law decrees that when a commodity is in abundance the price declines—and when it is comparatively scarce the price goes up. That has been true since men began bartering goods. It will remain true as long as the free market exists.

From The Iron Ore And Reflector, Isbpeming, Michigan: For their own good and the good of the nation, the 3,000,000 teen-agers who worked during the summer should think twice before deciding to quit school.

Last year one-fifth of the 16 and 17-year-olds failed to return to school after taking summer jobs. As a general thing, the failure to get more education dims their future, because statistics show that a boy who finishes high school will earn during the next 40 years $14,700 more than his fellow student who quits after junior year. For girls, the differential is nearly $20,000.

But more important—the nation needs educated men and women to operate our complex economic machine. We can't match the Communist hordes in manpower. Only through brain power can we keep ahead of them. We must look to the school.

CONGRESSIONAL Quiz

Q—Will House seats have to be reapportioned if Hawaii is admitted to the Union?

A—No. The House-approved statehood measure provides that Hawaii's representation in the House (one or two seats, depending on the final form of the bill) be added to the 435 total membership until after the reapportionment due as a result of the 1960 census. House membership has been stabilized at 435 ever since 1910. It was 65 in 1787. By 1900, it had increased to 391.

Q—I've noticed that Chairman Harold H. Velde (R. Ill.), of the House Un-American Activities Committee, is a former FBI agent. Are there any other Members who are former agents?

A—According to the Society of Former Agents of the FBI, there are four others: Reps. Omar Burleson (D Tex.), Thomas J. Dodd (D Conn.), Ed Edmondson (D Okla.) and Allan Oakley Hunter (R Calif.). No present member of the Senate has had FBI experience, but two governors have. They are Govs. Frank Clement (D Tenn.) and Edwin Mechem (R N.M.).

Q—I've heard a lot about lobbying by organized pressure groups. How can an ordinary citizen have his views on legislation considered by Congress?

A—In at least two ways. He can testify, in person, or submit a statement to Congressional committees. Also, a Member of either chamber may file a petition from an individual asking that Congress act or refrain from action on legislation. Petitions are referred to the appropriate committee for consideration, and are printed in a special section of the Congressional Record.

Q—Why is the building in which Congress meets spelled "Capitol" while the District of Columbia is called the "Capital?"

A—"Capital" is from the Latin capitalis, derived from caput, meaning head. From this primary meaning, it came to denote chief, or principal city. "Capitol," although also derived from caput, originally meant the temple of Jupiter, on the Mons Capitolinus in Rome, where the Senate met.

A sleuth with his two assistants and a patrol watched a convict enter a blind alley that was flanked by walls anywhere from twenty to thirty feet high. When he reached the end of th street there was no one there! Imagine his despair and fury! Mystery fans—can you solve this?

ARE YOU WISHING?

Are you wishing for a copy of The Robe so that you can read the book so many are talking about? Wishes come true when you visit the County Library. There you will find a copy of The Robe, presented by the Pilot Club, and ready for you to read and enjoy.

A Minister Told A Story—

The Robe, by Lloyd C. Douglas, provides the story for the first motion picture in cinemascope. Douglas, a congregational minister, found that his Sunday evening congregations stayed awake if he told them stories. You will stay awake if you start reading this account of Marcellus who crucified Jesus and who later became a Christian. Marcellus knew what happened to the robe of Jesus for which the soldiers cast lots at His crucifixion. If you also want to know, read The Robe. You may get it at the County Library, a gift of The Pilot Club.

"I REMEMBER"

BY THE OLD TIMERS

From Mrs. W. H. Hilbert, Corning, Kansas: Recently we purchased flour in a paper sack. The first paper flour sack I had seen since I left Pennsylvania years ago. It recalled to my mind the flour mills operated by water power and the millers coming to the stores with their products in white covered wagons.

I also remember when the cook stove had a "stove plate" with a deep place underneath where the ashes from the fire were stored. The plate would be removed and the ashes lifted out with a shovel. I recall my mother would chide us and say "if we didn't soon lift the ashes we would have to hang up the stove plate."

From Mrs. D. H. Hallenan, Belleville, N. J.: I remember my mother making soft soap for the year. She filled a barrel half full with hemlock branches. On top of that she put sand and ashes. The barrel was put on a bench with a hole at the bottom. She poured water into the barrel. It seeped through and came out of the hole at the bottom. This was lye. When she had enough lye collected, set up an iron kettle on a crossbar. The lye was up in the kettle with fat collected from the kitchen and some water. This was cooked until the mixture thickened. This soft soap was stored in the cellar in a big barrel. It was used to wash dishes, clothes and scrub floors. I have washed many dishes with this kind of soap.

Until Nov. 15th To Buy New Car Tags

Montgomery, Ala. — Alabama car owners now have until November 15th to purchase new 1954 license plates without penalty.

For the first time this year also pickup owners can use $3 tags on the truck, if that is their only means of transportation.

The 1953 Alabama Legislature changed the law to cover pickup trucks. Motorists will get two tags this year. Because of the Korean conflict and the danger of a steel shortage, the 1951 legislature had authorized single tags.

To prevent unsightly finger marks on window shade hems, put several strips of cellulose tape on the bottom of the shades.

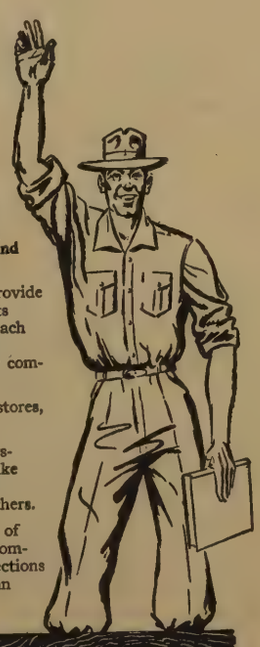
Another Message from the Friendly Forester



Our early settlers knew too well the power of roots—roots so strong they cracked great stones.

Today the roots we planted here to build Coosa River Newsprint Company have a different kind of power. A power of doing good.

The roots planted as we built our mill now provide jobs for 868 of your neighbors. These roots bring an income of millions of dollars each year—to the men and women who work for the Company, and indirectly to your community, your county, our state.

This results in help for building homes, stores, businesses, streets and roads.

And the Coosa roots go further. The newsprint we supply to newspapers helps make jobs for other people who, in turn, can buy the goods and services to help still others.

Yes, these Alabama roots of Coosa River Newsprint Company "stretch" in all directions—doing far more good than we realize.

Leader Advises Farmers To Watch For Milk Fever

Auburn, Ala. — Around calving time watch for sows that lie down and turn their heads to one side. This is a sure sign of milk fever, says Pete Turnham, API Extension assistant dairyman.

Milk fever, which is caused by a sudden drop in the calcium content of the blood, can be cured by inflating the udder or by injecting calcium intravenously, he explains. And in many cases repeated doses of calcium injected under the skin just before calving will prevent milk fever. "It's a good idea to call the veterinarian for treatment and for any abnormal symptoms," says Turnham.

After the cow freshens, let the calf nurse. Then milk just enough to relieve udder distention. For the next 36 hours, milk the cow partially, allowing most of the milk to remain in the udder. After this, concludes the dairyman, the cow can be completely milked.

Cotton And Corn Stalks Will Improve The Soil

Cotton and corn stalks should be cut as soon as possible after harvest, says API Extension Agronomist J. C. Lowery.

"This is one of the easiest and most effective soil improvement practices," he explains. "Stalks left on the ground will slow down washing. And while they're rotting during winter months, they'll return nitrogen, phosphate, and organic matter to the soil.

"Don't burn stalks, grass, or weeds on your fields," concludes Lowery. "Cut them and let them lie so they'll work for you."

Modern Art Takes a Licking!

Did you know we had a real artist in town? Yes sir! Handy Jackson was a contributor to the Sculpture Exhibition at the Fair last week.

His work was streaky pink and curved all around — sort of streamlined. Caused quite a stir. Nobody was sure what it was supposed to represent, but some liked it and thought it was good art. Handy gave me the lowdown:

"Why, it was nothing but a piece of cattle salt our cows have been lickin' at for months. I just had it mounted. Fooled a lot of folks—one fellow even wanted to buy it!"

From where I sit, Handy, "modern art" just shows how some people can be led astray. Some even get to be "experts"—especially about the other fellow's business. Whether it's art or music, or a simple thing like choosing, say, beer or milk with a snack, we should live and let live. There's no call for either of us to set ourselves up as a "model" for the other!

TIGERS WIN OVER

Mulligan's pass to Hines lost 6 yards for the Lions. Mulligan threw an incomplete pass and Langley punted over the goal line from the Tiger 39. Mims, Caton, Duren and Minor gained yardage from their 20 to their 41 yard line, where they missed making a first down by inches and Mims punted out of bounds on the Lions' 30 yard line. Hines, as slippery as a greased pig, limbered up his legs on runs of 7, 8 and 11 yards, and with Hamner and Golson, carried the pigskin to the Tiger 39 yard line. Harold Connell played heads-up football on the next play and intercepted a pitchout from Mulligan on the Tiger 48 yard line and stopped any Lion threat. Mims lost 3 yards; Duren gained one yard; then Clanton opened a new can of passes and the "aerial circus" bewildered Prattville with a touchdown in five plays from their own 44 yard line—Minor passed to Mims for 24 yards, then to Baker for 12 yards, then lost 5 yards, then passed to Baker on the goal line where Baker and a Lion halfback knocked the ball back to the five yard line where Caton caught the ball and went into pay dirt without being touched for the Tigers' second touchdown. Mims' place-kick for the extra point went wide of the uprights and the score was Clanton 13, Prattville 6.

Littlejohn kicked off for the Tigers and Golson received for the Lions on their 20 yard line and made a return of 12 yards. Mulligan passed to Langley for 28 yards and the Lions were clawing for another touchdown. Hines sprinted for 18 yards; Sides gained 1; and Hines took off again, this time for 15 yards to the Tiger six yard line. Hines "lost his candy" on the next play as he fumbled back on the 19 yard line and Wilson pounced on the ball for the Tigers. Caton ran for 6 yards, Mims for 3 and the Tigers were penalized 5 yards. Mims lost a yard then punted 46 yards to Lion territory.

Golson threw an incomplete pass, then passed to Langley for one yard. Next Mulligan passed to Langley down on the Tiger 45 yard line and as he was being tackled he latteraled to—yes, Robert Hines and he went the remaining 45 yards for a touchdown. Score, Clanton 13, Prattville 12. The tense crowd watched the teams line up for the try for the extra point which would tie the score if scored. The ball was snapped and put in place for a place-kick, the kicker stepped forward and kicked the ball, but—Curtis Baker had broken through the Lion forward wall and blocked the place-kick in flight to keep the Tiger one point lead in scoring—War Eagle!

Hamner pulled an "on sides" kickoff for Prattville, the ball traveled over 10 yards and Prattville recovered the ball and gained possession. Mulligan attempted a pass which failed. Hamner faded to pass and was tackled for a ten yard loss. Mulligan threw a long pass in the dying seconds of the game and Roy Mims intercepted it on the Tiger 14 yard line and sprinted 16 yards before being tackled on the 30 yard line as the thrilling game ended.

Things we SEE and Hear

by "Tuck"

Harold's Smyer's mother, Mrs. Mary H. Smyer, died last week. The Smyers, Harold and Doris, have been in Chilton County only a short time, but have made themselves very popular and count their friends by the hundreds. You know Harold wrote the football news for the Chilton County News and of course the death in his family explains its absence in this issue. We sincerely grieve with the Smyers in their great loss and we know that he has many, many friends here who join with us in extending sympathy to these fine folks.

What we need around Clanton and vicinity is one of these "good day for ducks" days. I think maybe the humans would appreciate it as much, if not much more, than the ducks.

I'm sure that folks around town, especially those who benefitted directly from it, will join us in commending the road department for the fine work they have done on some of our local roads. They've paved two or three sections of town that have needed it badly for years. We are sure that the people of these neighborhoods appreciate this improvement and will do all they can to help preserve their new roads.

One of my best pals (about 3 years) learned the other day that he had a baby sister. We questioned him, naturally, and discovered that she's pretty much the ordinary baby sister except that her middle name's Nothing. We asked him how big she was and he said, "She ain't big, she's little." That was fine so we asked him what her name was and he said, Donna. Donna, what? Nothing. I found out later that it wasn't really Donna Nothing, it was Sharon Nothing.

Sign in one of our down town establishments reads: "Record For Sale." Not sure whether the proprietor has just one record for sale or whether he's got gobs of 'em. If it's just one he's in the wrong business because he's had the sign up for months. Then again, if it's gobs of 'em he's using the old bean; human nature might think he has only one left and being human nature will scramble for it. In which case he aught'a leave his sign where and how it is.

Had a beef from the local trash man about putting all the scrap paper from the "News" plant into a container in back of the shop, said the stuff was getting scattered. Well, trying to be model citizens we put together a couple of good wooden boxes, thinking the problem solved. One or two ragged edges left so we thought we'd bring the saw back tomorrow and trim it up. Tomorrow when we got back to work we found our "sturdy" box upside down and the ragged edges neatly(?) trimmed by the fall from the truck. Please, fellas, our box is strong, but not entirely undemolishable.

Been readin' a bit of this "How To Win Friends" lately and it seems to have some very good ideas in it for every day living. Some people in our town gained a new outlook by practicing these ideas. So can you. Smile! If you're like I am and can't smile, then be interested in the other fellow. Also admit your faults openly, that's probably the hardest. My dad once told me, "A man's worst fault is not admitting his faults." I think that goes in making friends too.

Alabama Baptists Sponsor Sunday School Clinic

Alabama Baptists are in the midst of an intensive and extensive campaign to increase their Sunday School enrollment by 82,000 during the year that began October 1, 1953.

Their campaign is a part of the campaign of the entire Southern Baptist Convention which is working under the slogan, "A Million More in '55."

At the present time there are about four hundred thousand Alabamians enrolled in Baptist Sunday Schools.

Ellis B. Evans of Montgomery is State Sunday School Secretary. He has associated with him Henry D. Strickland, R. Willard Warfield, and Mary Ellen Caver.

Mr. Evans and his associates are planning, as a part of the campaign, to hold a Sunday School Clinic in the First Baptist Church of Clanton beginning Sunday afternoon, November 1st, and closing Thursday evening, November 5th.

In preparation for the clinic, a religious census was taken of Clanton on Sunday afternoon, October 18th.

It is expected that during the week of November 1-5 more than six hundred Sunday School teachers and officers, pastors and associational officers will enroll in the clinic. These workers will come from churches in the Chilton and Unity Associations, the Autauga Association, the Shelby Association, in the Bibb County Association, in the Central Association, and in the Elmore Association.

On Sunday afternoon, November 1, and each evening, November 2-5 every phase of Sunday School work will be presented in clinical studies.

The Extension Department Clinic will be directed by Mrs. Carr Buchanan of Montgomery. The Cradle Roll Department clinic will be directed by Mrs. Meyer Saunders of Montgomery. The Nursery Department Clinic will be directed by Mrs. C. C. Buckalew of Birmingham. The Beginner Department Clinic will be directed by Mrs. E. M. Strickland of Birmingham. The Primary Department Clinic wil lbe directed by Mrs. H. E. Willis of Birmingham. The Intermediate Department Clinic will be directed by Miss Aleen Wimpee of Birmingham. The Young People's Department Clinic will be directed by Mrs. Don Pinson, Jr., of Birmingham. The Adult Department Clinic will be directed by Henry D. Strickland, associate in the State Sunday School Department of Montgomery. The Clinic in Sunday School administration which will cover operational problems for pastors and superintendents will be directed by R. Willard Warfield, associate in the State Sunday School Department.

The clinic program will be under the direction of the State Sunday School Secretary, Ellis B. Evans. Mr. Evans will speak to the entire group on Sunday afternoon, November 1, and each evening, Monday through Thursday.

The clinic program will begin on Sunday afternoon at 2:15 p.m. in the auditorium of the First Baptist Church in Clanton. The evening sessions, Monday through Thursday, will begin at 7:00 p.m. and will adjourn at 9:15 p.m.

BIRTH DATE ISSUANCE OF DRIVERS' LICENSES

The 1953 General Session of the Alabama Legislature passed a law providing for the issuance of driver's licenses on the birthdate of the licensee based on the even and odd-year plan.

The 1954-55 drivers' licenses are now being mailed out and on the face of these licenses it will show the expiration date which will coincide with the birth date of the applicant based on whether he was born in a year ending in an even number or one ending in an odd number.

In order to activate this law, it will necessitate some slight inequalities. In other words, a person whose birth date occurs in January of an odd year will have to renew his license within 15 months, while a person whose birth date occurs in December of a year ending with an even number will not have to renew his license until 38 months have passed. After the first issuance all licenses will automatically run two years from the date of birth of the applicant.

This memorandum is being sent to you in order that you might be in a position to answer questions asked you by the public who are receiving their licenses with the expiration date shown on the face thereof.

MOTION PICTURE FILMS ON MOTOR VEHICLE SAFETY

Motion picture films on motor vehicle safety, telephone courtesy, fire hazards in the home, and many other subjects are available for loan to local civic, social and educational groups from Southern Bell Telephone Company.

J. W. Mitchell, local manager of the company, said a complete listing of films and information on how to borrow them may be obtained at the telephone company's business office.

Since the company's film library is maintained as a public service, no charge is made for use of the films, the Southern Bell manager said.

The popularity of the film library is indicated by the number of people who view films borrowed from it. During a typical month approximately 20,000 Alabama adults and children attended showings held at 343 group meetings.

Typical of the fifty titles available are "Mr. Bell," a dramatic presentation condensing the 75 years of the great inventor's life; "The Telephone Hour," a real musical treat provided by the distinguished pianist Josef Hofman and the Bell Telephone Orchestra.

All films in the library are 16mm, and range in length of showing time from 10 to 20 minutes.

Dearing, Young People's Leader, Mrs. Parks Redwine, Secretary-treasurer, Mrs. V. H. Muse, all of Birmingham, Ala.

The purpose of the meeting is to present annual reports, make plans for the new year, elect new officers and to receive fresh information from missionaries who will tour the state with Miss Marjorie Stith, young people's secretary, and Mrs. R. S. Marshall, executive secretary of Alabama Woman's Missionary Union. Among the speakers will be: Rev. Robert Sherrer of Jasper who has served as a missionary in Japan for one term. REGISTRARS ARE IN SESSION AT COURTHOUSE

Extra Attraction Added To Tonight's Wrestling Card

As an added attraction to an already top-notch wrestling card, the Clanton Junior Chamber of Commerce has lined up a third match for tonight.

Buck Buxton will meet one of the nation's roughest wrestlers, Bobby "Red" Lane, in this added bout.

Buck, a six-foot-two, two-hundred and twelve pounder from Selma, is eager for this chance at the rough and ready Lane.

Lane's rugged tactics in a recent fight in Texas caused him to be barred from wrestling in that state and also put him in the hospital there for six weeks. Since his release from the hospital he has been making a tour of Southeastern rings using his aggressive tactics.

Buxton, although a relatively newcomer to the business, has the neccessary toughness to take on a rough-house fighter like "Red."

As announced last week, Nick Carter will meet the Red Terror in the top bout and in the secondary match Nick Carter and Jane Goodwin will meet the Red Terror and Jo Ann Zager in a mixed tag team match.

Fights begin at 8:30 in the big hangar at the Clanton Airport. There will be plenty of seating for all. The Jaycees are planning to hold wrestling matches every other Tuesday here.

Advance tickets are now on sale at Calloway Drug Co.

NOTICE FROM ALABAMA POWER COMPANY

In response to an inquiry from a news reporter T. W. Martin, chairman of the Board of Alabama Power Company, said that the Power Company had given no thought whatever to the purchase of all or any part of the T.V.A. property.

Mr. Martin further said that Alabama Power Company and T.V.A. had cooperated in many ways in recent years in power emergencies and in the purchase and sale of small amounts of power.

Mrs. Hitch has had varied experience on both chapter and national staffs with the American National Red Cross. She made a wonderful talk and added much to the anual meeting of our local Red Cross.

Board of Directors were appointed for the incoming year, some old and some new members. Mr. G. C. Powell was reappointed as chairman of the local chapter and Mr. Ben Studdard, reappointed as vice-chairman.

Probate Judge Dave Tingle was appointed 1954 Fund Campaign Chairman of Chilton County Chapter, American Red Cross, by an overwhelming majority. Judge Tingle made everyone very happy by accepting this position. An advisory committee was appointed to assist Judge Tingle with plans for the 1954 fund drive.

We were very glad to have also with us at the Annual Board Meeting Miss Susie Edgerton, Field Representative, who resides in Montgomery, Alabama.

Other visitors attending the meeting were given a cordial welcome by our Chapter Chairman. There were seventeen people present at this annual meeting.

D. Windham, Mrs. R. M. Tucker, Mrs. Miiton Diefenderfer, Mrs. C. D. Messer, Mrs. W. E. White, Rev. and Mrs. M. K. Vickers, Mrs. Campbell White, Mrs. J. E. Edgar, Mrs. G. H. Tucker, Mrs. John Studdard, Mrs. Clara Mullins, Mrs. Ervin Dailey, all from the Methodist Church; Mrs. Napoleon Johnson and Mrs. Grady Reynolds, from the Presbyterian Church.

Members of the Health Department, the Welfare Department, Board of Education and local clubs, visited the clinic during the day.

The next clinic will be held at the Clanton First Baptist Church and Mrs. Harold Lawrence, W.M.U. President, and Mrs. Joe Moore, vice-president, visited the clinic to observe the procedure, that they might understand what their duties would be in working with Mrs. Reynolds.

If you are really interested visit the clinic and see for yourself, what a job these workers are doing, gratis.

HOMEMAKERS S. S. CLASS MET

The co-hostesses, Mrs. Referee Lineberry, Mrs. Dewey Crew and Mrs. D. A. Teel served delicious refreshments to the group during the social hour.

OUR PILGRIM CHILDREN WAITED FOR BOOKS

The youngest baby Pilgrim was an old man before it occurred to any one to write a child's book.

A book worth waiting for—that serious, little school book called the New England Primer—for it contained the beloved little prayer:

"Now I lay me down to take my sleep,
I pray the Lord my soul to keep;
If I should die before I wake,
I pray the Lord my soul to take."

How said, that the youngest baby Pilgrim was an old man before anyone thought about how much children love and need books.

Do our Chilton County children wait for books?

Are you growing up waiting for books to read? There are some books for children in the County Library. Come, get a book, a book that you will enjoy. Come Saturday afternoon.

MABLE WOODWARD WILLIAMS CIRCLE MET

The W.M.U. Watchword and the W.M.U. Watchword for 1953-54 were given as the Scripture message.

Plans were made to contribute sandwiches to be served at the Crippled Children's Clinic October 22, 1953.

This being the first meeting of the year, the new officers' duties were explained, and the Year Book reviewed.

Two new members, Mrs. M. L. Ware and Mrs. Raymond Hamilton, were welcomed.

Mrs. McGee served refreshments to the following: Mesdames Charles Easterling, Lester Connell, M. L. Ware, Luther Williams, Lewis Headley, Royal Coggins, Jr., C. B. Weldon, Jack Meek, Raymond Hamilton and Durward Minor.

NEVER TOO OLD

Earle Sande, the great jockey of the 1920's, is attempting a racing comeback at a ripe old age. Readers will remember Sande as one of the all-time greats in the history of jockeys So consistent was he in bringing in winners that the writers of that day wrote poems about his talent

Now, years after his fame had been recorded in the record books, the jockey is attempting a return to an active, and physically strenuous, profession. As this is written, Sande had not piloted a winner across the wire, but, in his first races, he had made several creditable showings.

The reappearance of Sande, in the sporting picture of 1953, is somewhat nostalgic, since he was the king-pin in one sport at the time when several other great champions, like Bill Tilden, Jack Dempsey, and the Yankees, were familiar names on the tongue of every sports fan. Now, at a ripe old age, one of these former greats comes back for another effort. Naturally, every sportsman hopes the comeback is a successful one.

Thirty-five teen-age "junior envoys" from Argentina, Bolivia, Chile, Peru, Ecuador, Columbia and Panama are currently touring the United States. The boys are enjoying an air tour of this country, which includes stops in most of the major cities and a call at the White House in Washington.

The tour was organized by Pan American-Grace Airways as a goodwill effort, and marks that airline's twenty-fifth anniversary. The idea of the tour has been received enthusiastically in all of the countries concerned. One of the boys on the tour is Manuel Odoria—the son of the President of Peru.

We are of the opinion that uninhibited youngsters given an advantage of travelling and seeing and meeting the peoples of foreign lands, will do much toward promoting better understanding in the years to come. These boys will one day be leaders in their countries and if they begin life with an initial good impression of the United States, or any other country, the value of this youthful impression could almost be measureless.

The idea should be followed up, as far as is practicable, in the interest of better international understanding between the United States and other nations of the world.

MONEY AND BUSH PILOTS

What should be some kind of record for earnings on an aerial flight might have been set by two bush pilots from Quebec, recently Paul LaPointe and Bill Attwater were flying from Goose Bay, Labrador, to Mont Joli, Quebec, and noted that their plane's compass behaved in a highly agitated fashion.

Because the compass reacted vigorously, the two pilots some time later rented a seaplane and flew out to the spot to investigate. The seaplane allowed them to land at a spot about 400 miles east of Quebec City, and they picked up some samples of what they hoped would be valuable ore.

After the sample was investigated, and the two pilots had obtained rights, they found that the area contained a heavy concentration of iron ore. The Iron Ore Company of Canada became interested and finally offered the two men more than $1,000,000 for their claims. The pilots accepted and will get their money over a period of years.

All of which seems to prove that the problem of making money involves a considerable amount of luck. To bush pilots the lesson is obvious and we assume that those who have heard about the experience of LaPointe and Attwater will be watching their compasses fairly consistently in the future.

Around OUR HOUSE

by Kathryn Tucker Windham

The four-year-old has learned formal prayers at Sunday School and at home, but when bedtime comes, he prefers to talk informally to God, asking His blessings on a variety of things including "little bugs that crawl" and "those pretty leaves by my window" and "the good teacher my sister has at school."

God must have been pleased the other night to hear an earnest four-year-old pray:

"Let the world have flowers growing everywhere. And let the world be filled with babies. Help all the babies to grow up to be big people. And help all the colored babies to grow up to be big colored people. And You can be my helper, too. Amen."

The next door neighbor called us over the other day to admire the new wall paper in her living room and bedroom. The rooms were fresh and beautiful, rather different from the walls with the three sets of fingerprints and smudges around our house.

Because of a miscalculation, she had some paper left over from both the bedroom and the living room, but, of course, she didn't waste it. While we were there, she showed us how to make pictures out of this leftover paper.

She was working with the paper from the bedroom, a pattern with large clusters of blue forget-me-nots on it. Using a frame she already had on hand, she moved it about on the paper until she found a composition that pleased her. Then she cut it out and slipped it under the glass. It made a charming picture.

There was too much left-over paper to make pictures out of all of it, so this thrifty neighbor cut the rest of the paper into place mats with scalloped edges to use the next time she has some friends in for a meal.

* * *

The next time this neighbor has her walls papered, there won't be any paper left over. She has carefully written down exactly how many rolls of paper and border and how much paste it took for each room, putting her figures on the wall under the edge of a picture.

Our neighbor down the street, the one with the big family, made the wallpaper in her children's rooms washable by going over it first with sizing and then giving it a coat of clear shellac. She gave the paper this treatment months ago, and it still looks fresh and clean.

This neighbor says that some day she is going to persuade a manufacturer to make wallpaper for children's rooms with small fingerprints and handprints scattered all about over the pattern!

* * *

One more wallpaper item: Our neighbor around the corner lined the walls of her child's room with blackboards four feet high. Now the youngster can draw and scribble on his walls without doing any damage. The blackboard surface was painted onto the walls with a special coating recommended by her paint dealer.

YOUR Health

"Your Health" is presented by your physician as a health service of The Medical Association of the State of Alabama.

The Common Cold

Unlike many other conditions, the common cold strikes at almost everyone at least once a year. A cold is not a seasonal disease, although it is more prevalent in certain months such as January, March, April and October and November. Its cause is not known, although it is generally agreed that a virus is responsible. A virus is a living agent so small that it is not visible with the ordinary microscope but requires special equipment to bring it into the range of visibility and special techniques for recognition and study.

The cold is an insidius condition. Since it spreads from person to person, the exact manner of transmission is not known, for it may be the droplets in the air produced by a sneeze or a cough. It may be the friendly handshake of a victim who has neglected to wash his hands after using his handkerchief.

There is no known cure for the common cold. Present treatment by the physician is essentially to relieve symptoms and prevent possible complications.

Since prevention of the cold is the primary requirement, wise is the person who maintains his body resistance at a good peak. Sufficient sleep, rest, and a well-balanced diet are factors that contribute to a high degree of resistance.

If a cold develops, the victim should go to bed. Isolation will not only prevent the spread of the condition to others but will also retard the development of possible complication. It is the complicated cold that, if not promptly treated, may result in serious illness and even death.

Until the research laboratory finds the cause and cure of the common cold, go to bed and stay there is the best advice if you have the symptoms of a cold.

Whites of eggs are more easily separated from yolks when the eggs are cold.

Every home should have a handy first aid kit supplied with adhesive tape, sterilized gauze, burn ointment, iodine, scissors, sterile cotton, and a good first aid handbook.

Are You A Band Booster?

Has anyone contacted you about becoming a member of the Band Boosters? The Band Booster Club is being organized to help the band purchase new uniforms, and to give future aid to the band.

Individual memberships are being sold by two separate teams. These teams are the Red and Blue. Up to this time three hundred memberships have been sold. If you have joined the Booster Club, help the band by enlisting more Band Boosters. We have set a goal of 2,000 members. The contest of the two teams will last until November 23rd. By this time we hope to have enough money to buy around 60 new uniforms.

If you haven't joined the Band Boosters and wish to, contact any band member or band patron. They will explain the full purpose of the campaign.

You can help your band grow. Be a Band Booster.

There are sixteen more old band uniforms out. This is a plea from the band, if you have a uniform, please contact Mr. Eddie Waters or LaMar DeLoach, or send it to the Clanton Laundry and Cleaning Company. The band wants to march for the last four games, but cannot do so until these uniforms are turned in. Please help us. Check closets if your child was ever in the band.

DALE CARNEGIE

CARNEGIE

BRUCE HARLEY, 409 West Murray Street, Macomb, Illinois, graduated from High School and almost immediately began to worry about something which had been on his mind for weeks. It seemed to be economically impossible for him to attend college. He did not have a job and could not secure one because in those depression days only adults were hired in the few places available. His father was unable to help since his salary was hardly adequate for living expenses and he had borrowed on his life insurance to the hilt. His previous savings evaporated in the collapse of the Samuel Insull utilities empire, and to top it off the place where he worked burned down.

There was plenty of work to do on his father's acreage, but of course Bruce wasn't paid for that, so he worried day after day and kept his fingernails bitten back as he wondered how he could go to the local college—since an out-of-town school was out of the question. He could not get a scholarship because his grades weren't quite high enough; he was not a football player, and he could not obtain employment at the college for the next year because he would be only an incoming student, and a town student at that.

One day his mother, noticing his nervous condition, told him to try living from day to day, rather than looking forward fruitlessly to September. He tried it, and the last week in June a college representative offered him a Summer job at the school for tuition credit. He felt so encouraged by this experience that he once again made the rounds of the downtown stores and secured a Saturday clerking job in a grocery firm. By Labor Day he had accumulated enough work credit to pay a year's tuition, and he had enough cash to buy clothes and books; thus he was able to keep pace academically with his high school classmates.

THE BETTER SPEECH CLUB VISITS TURNAROUND

The idea of a trip to Turnaround originated when we were studying rock in our science class. We had spent a few minutes each day for a week or more examining the various kinds to be found on the playground and about our homes. When we learned of the unusual rock formations at Turnaround we were eager to visit that site.

Such an opportunity presented itself last Tuesday when six of our mothers offered to help Mrs. Thomas carry the entire class, forty-two, down there. How thrilled we were that such a privilege was ours!

After registering as is required of all visitors to this place, we grouped in squads and strolled along the rock-lined walls around the supervisor's home. We found amber, smoky, rose, milky, and clear quartz, as well as mica schist and granite. There were sedimentary, medamorphic, and conglomerate.

We entered the park in squads accompanied by one or more mothers. How happy we were to share the pleasure of this experience with them.

Our first side trip was to Lookout Rock. How majestically it towers over the rippling waters below, and we were filled with awe as we gazed down the steep incline!

We were astonished at Picture Frame Rock, and are still wondering when nature performed that masterpiece. Mrs. Wade snapped our pictures as we stood in the opening. Marlon Deason has drawn a remarkable likeness of it.

We felt compelled to try a taste of Alum Rock, and we wish we could know how it happened to be formed. After we ascended the steep hill from Alum Rock, Mrs. Wade made another picture of the entire class seated on the stone steps of the mountains.

When we reached the top, we rested before going down to the creek bank and following the course of the water. The lofty height of the opposite bank stood in majestic silence, dressed in multi-colored autumn leaves. Such inspiration made us reluctant to make the ascent back to the mountain top.

We continued examining the rock specimen along the path, and, in about two full hours, were right back at the gate entrance. How delicious that picnic lunch did look! But we controlled ourselves and listened with appreciation to the well-expressed thanks offered by Kathie Wade to our Great Creator for His goodness to His children.

How hard it was to wait for those Cokes to be opened and served! A thirsty, tired group were we! It is our sincere desire to be taken out for other experiences as informative and inspirational as this one proved to be. — Better Speech Club.

Run-Off Water Carries Away Soil, Plant Food

Farmers were reminded here this by S. R. Doughty, API Extension soil conservationist, that uncontrolled rain water steals valuable soil and plant food from the land.

"Bare and, row crops not on a contour, overgrazed pastures, and burned woodlands all invite rainfall to escape and rob the land," he said. "However, farmers have valuable allies in the fight to protect their fields—if they will but use them.

"Sod crops act like a blotter to absorb and hold water needed to produce crops," continued Doughty. "And well-terraced lands farmed on a contour and supported by crop rotations including plenty of thick-growing legumes and grasses also help the land absorb and store water."

Notre Dame is again the big dog in football and come what may during the remainder of the season it looks like the Irish are in to stay, perhaps for two or three years . . . A number of Southeastern Conference schools are unhappy about the Orange Bowl committee's talk of a yearly tie-up with the new Atlantic Coast and Big Seven conferences. It would mean that Southeastern Conference schools would be automatically eliminated from that New Year's contest. As things look now, if the agreement is reached, it may be Duke and Oklahoma in the Orange Bowl on Jan. 1, 1954 . . . Earl Sande, the grand old man of racing, is making a valiant attempt at a comeback as a rider. But it is an uphill climb, even for a young man . . . Welterweight Champion Kid Gavilan of Cuba will defend his crown against Johnny Bratton of Chicago November 6. The site has not been announced as yet . . . Dauntless Florence Chadwick has added another star to her swimming crown—the current-strong Bosphorus from Europe to Asia and back.

Suede Shoes Can Be Kept Neat And Free Of Spots

Auburn, Ala. — Suedes continue to set the style in footwear this fall, and Kathleen Thompson, API Extension clothing specialist, offers homemakers these hints on keeping them neat.

"Brush suede shoes carefully and frequently with a suede brush to remove dust and lint," she explains. "Stubbon shiny spots can be removed with fine sandpaper. To remove mud, simply let it dry; then shake the mud off and brush the spots briskly to remove excess dust."

Grease spots are often a problem, continues Miss Thimpson. Dust a little powder on the spot to absorb the grease, and then brush carefully to remove the powder. Use suede cleaner to give your shoes a new look when they begin to appear worn. And when cleaning, don't forget to black the soles for a finished, new look.

Proper Planning Saves Time In Making Salads

With proper preparation methods colorful green salads can be attractive, tempting, and quick and easy to make, says API Extension nutritionist Mary Hulsey.

She suggests cutting down on lost-minute fuss and bother by preparing salad greens ahead of time. Wash and drain them carefully before storing in the refrigerator so they'll be clean, crisp, and ready to use.

Sharp knives make your job easier, adds Miss Hulsey. And keep utensils and supplies near your working area. A cutting board is handy for cutting and chopping celery, onions, etc., and a vegetable grater or shredder with different-sized cutting edges is another time saver.

If ample year-around grazing is provided, no other feed is necessary for the ewe flock.

A dairy cow should have access to good quality legume hay at all times; provide at least one ton of hay per cow when good year-around grazing is available, three tons when grazing is limited.

THE WOLF COMES BACK

By Lew Phillips

OLD Pop Wilkins lifted his huge hulk from the chair beside the big pot-bellied stove to wait on the stranger. If it had been someone from the village, he would have stayed put, and told him to help himself. A well dressed, slick-looking stranger, however, commanded better manners.

"Good morning, Sir," Pop said, with his big open smile. "What can I do for you?"

The stranger answered Pop's cheeriness with a smile in his voice. "Good morning. Let me have some cigars, please."

Pop walked behind the cigar case while the stranger looked over the assortment of open boxes behind the glass.

"What'll it be?" Pop asked, opening the back of the case.

"Those fifteen cent Panatellas, I guess."

Pop brought out the box and set it on the counter. While the stranger picked out four cigars Pop narrowed his sharp grey eyes and sized him up from head to foot. An old habit from his days as sheriff in these parts. He never liked to open up with a stranger till he felt his hunch 'click'.

The man handed Pop a dollar bill, accepted his change, and said, "Nice weather we're having."

"Yes, it is," Pop answered laconically.

"Had much rain this year?" He was feeling through his pockets when Pop handed him a packet of matches. The man said, "Thank you," and lighted one of the matches.

Pop's great weight made his feet sore, and he wanted to go back to his chair beside the stove. The stranger hadn't 'clicked' so far, and Pop wasn't encouraging conversation. However, the man, between puffs, asked about the crops, the market prices, and how was business in general. He leaned an elbow on the case watching the smoke drift from his cigar. A lean, dark man with half-hidden eyes, he seemed to look at you and right on through. His nostrils dilated slowly as he sniffed the tangy aroma of the smoke.

"It's been a good growing season," Pop answered indifferently, "and the farmers have a little money, now."

"Speaking of money," the stranger said, looking quizzically at Pop, "did you ever catch the burglar that held you up three years ago, and cleaned out your cash register?"

A slow flush spread over Pop's round face. Then a little-boy grin wrinkled his eyes, as he raised a hand to scratch the fringe of hair that hung like a gray curtain around his bald dome.

"No, we never caught him. Funny thing about that . . . Just a minute, and I'll tell you what happened."

Pop stepped a little to his right and slipped his hand under the counter. His actions were hidden by the cigar case. His hand came out holding a gun, and in a split second he was aiming it straight at the stranger's heart.

There was sudden fear in the man's face. He gulped, then blurted, "What's the idea, old man?"

Pop's gray eyes glinted dangerously. "Just stay the way you are, stranger, and this gun won't go off. You see, I was so ashamed of bein' robbed I never told nobody. Me, a former sheriff. I couldn't stand the laughs. So, that robber and me were the only two that ever knew it . . . We have a sayin' in these hills that a wolf always comes back to his kill. Stranger, you came back!"

Destroy Cotton Stalks To Retard 1954 Enemies

Auburn, Ala. — Cotton growers should destroy stalks as soon as they finish harvesting to help control next year's insects and diseases.

"You can get the jump now on 1954 cotton pests by promtly destroying stalks, either by turning them under or cutting them down at least 30 days before killing frosts," says W. A. Ruffin, API Extension entomologist. "Stalk destruction removes the food supply of boll weevils and other insects, sending them into winter quarters in a weakened condition, with less chance of survival."

Early stalk destruction, he continues, will also help control several cotton diseases, such as ascochyta blight, anthracnose disease, and angular leaf spot. For effective control of the fungus diseases, crop residue must be thoroughly rotted before planting time.

DOUBLE DOUBLES

Goshen, N.Y. — This town, which already could boast of possessing a double to President Eisenbower in the person of Harry Strong, has another double. Associates of former City Judge Edmund C. Faulkner, of Middletow, have remarked frequently of late about his remarkable resemblance to Secretary of State John Foster Dulles.

A card table under the ironing board will keep long pieces from falling to the floor.

The best way to control peach tree borers on trees four years old and older is to apply paradichlorobenzene around tree trunks in October.

Use Cottonseed Hulls With Quality Roughage

Dairymen trying to escape today's tight feed situation may find part of their answer in cottonseed hulls as a supplement to high quality roughage.

Farmers with available hay and silage who need additional roughage can feed cottonseed hulls mixed with molasses, advises Pete Turnham, API Extension assistant dairyman. However, he warns, don't keep sacked hulls and molasses for more than two or three weeks in warm weather because they'll sour.

"This feed mixture can be bought in sacks for around $26 per ton," says Turnham. "Total digestible nutrients in the mixture cost only about three cents, as compared with five cents in good mixed hay at $ a ton or in grain costing $70 per ton."

ACP Approvals Must Be Completed By December 31

Auburn, Ala. — Farmers have little over two months to complete conservation practices approved for their farms under the 1954 Agricultural Conservation Program.

"These practices must be completed by December 31 in order for producers to qualify for ACP assistance," says API Extension Agronomist J. C. Lowery. And he lists several reasons why farmers should take full advantage of their 1954 approvals.

"Fertilizer supplies are larger than usual," he explains. "Most grass and legume seed are cheaper, which means the farmer's ACP dollars will go further. Then, too, with a smaller amount of money available for 1954, chances are that assistance will not be of ered next year for some of the practices included in the 1953 program."

A bale of cotton is about 27 inches thick, 54 inches long, and usually about 45 inches wide, with a density of 12 pounds per cubic foot; it weighs an average of 500 pounds and not less than 400 pounds.

Iodine stains can usually be removed by soaking the fabric in milk and rubbing the stained area occasionally.

Think you've got troubles?

Now this "Gizmo" really has troubles. Moreover, he actually spends hours looking for a special kind of trouble—electrical leaks that might interrupt service on telephone lines.

Developed by Bell System engineers, this robot-like line insulation test machine operates automatically to spot line troubles before they happen. He tests line after line at the rate of three thousand an hour. Whenever a tiny electrical leak is spotted, "Gizmo" stops, flashes a signal and indicates the telephone number affected. Then repairs are quickly made, usually before service is interrupted.

"Gizmo" is another one of many advances along the road toward more and better telephone service. To bring these new advances, and to keep service good and growing, your Telephone Company must have enough earnings to stay financially healthy.

Folks and Things ABOUT TOWN

—By Ben

The other night Mrs. Hughey Carroll made some candy for the "Fun Fair" that was held at the High School. When Hughey arrived home after a long day's work he slipped a sample off one of the plates and liked what he sampled. When he got done sampling he told Mrs. Carroll to just give them cash for the candy it was much too good to sell.

Received a letter from the Tax Assessor's Office the other day. In fact, it was the day after we wrote the article regarding the church signs. Here 'tis:

Dear Folks & Things
About Town
By Ben:

In regards to your remarks regarding signs printed by Clanton Elementary girls and boys for Clanton Methodist Church—These children, I am sure, deserve to be congratulated. After reading your column, I glanced at the address of this paper and noticed the words "Tax Accessor" City. Who needs correction? Well, that one isn't hard to answer, is it?

We do not know whether wrestling is going to be good for the local citizens or not. We are told that several got so excited at the bout Tuesday night that they fell out of their seats.

Looks like Ira Crowe will be a candidate for Sheriff in the election next spring. Ira is cutting meat now at the City Super Market, but in a recent conversation with him he gave us to understand that he would be a candidate. From here it looks like it will be several candidates for that office come greenup time.

Did you hear about the fellow from our town who tried to make conversation with the elevator operator. "You have your ups and downs don't you?" he said. Well, having heard the same thing many times the elevator operator answered: "Yes, I've had my ups and downs, but it's the Jerks that bother me."

Our very good friend, Mrs. J. P. Hayes, needs help. Someone brought her a big bunch of "mums." She doesn't know who brought them and would like very much to thank who ever was responsible for her getting them, but can't because she lacks the person's name. Now if you would just call Mrs. Hayes, whoever you are, and let her thank you and tell you how much she enjoyed them, all will be well.

P.S.—We used the word "mums" because we can't spell chrysanthemums.

W. B. (Will) Cox called us this morning. He wanted us to extend a cordial invitation to his friends to visit him. He said he had visitors on Wednesday afternoon and last Sunday afternoon and he was blessed all day because of a friend's thoughtfulness. Mr. Cox says if you want to make a blind man happy, please come to see him.

Looks like friend Sleepy Miller will win the annual prize given by the Miller 5c & Dime Store for catching the biggest big mouth bass this year. Sleepy won the prize last year which consisted of a rod and reel and a fishing box, but on his first trip fishing after he won the prize he lost the whole works. This year he plans to take extra precautions if he is fortunate enough to win again. Oh yeah, his catch this year weighed 6 lbs. and 7 ounces.

Gordon Robertson, local manager of the Alabama Power Company is really plugging the Cooking School to be held next Tuesday night. Many prizes will be given away during the event, so if you haven't bought your ticket, you can get one from any member of the Methodist Men's Club of which there are more than a hundred. Mrs. Hutto, the demonstrator, will probably give out samples so you will find us sitting close to the stove.

Judge and Mrs. J. O. Middleton rode in the big Peanut Festival Parade at Dothan last week. The whole thing came about as an accident, according to Judge Middleton. They had been at Dothan holding court and were leaving for Clanton about the time that the parade started. After getting on their bus the driver, Robert Johnson, couldn't get out of the Bus Station, but after waiting for some time he was finally let into the stream of traffic—or we should say parade, as that is what it was—and made his way out of town. It took him 45 minutes to get out of Dothan and all the while the passengers were enjoying the cheers of the crowds as they wended their way down the main streets of the Peanut Capitol of the World. Too, come to think of it, the Judge and his wife got to ride in a parade with the movie star, Johnnie Mack Brown, and with the present "Miss America."

Freak Accident Takes Life Of George Beasley

George Beasley of Wilton was killed last week when a chimney fell on him while he was tearing down an old house. He was a cousin of the Lewis McGees who attended the funeral which was held there.

SEVENTH-DAY ADVENTIST PASTOR SAYS MORE MONEY SPENT FOR WHISKEY

Americans are spending twice as much for alcoholic beverages as for gasoline and oil for automobiles, says the pastor of the Seventh-Day Adventist Church, Allen Walker.

Another comparison, the pastor said, shows that Americans are spending three times as much for intoxicating beverages as for all the religious life of the nation.

These statistics are appalling. We had better wake up and curb this menace which threatens to destroy America. — Mrs. Ruby D. Pickens.

SCANNING THE NEWS

WASHINGTON observers are still talking about the surprising victory of the Democratic candidate in Wisconsin's ninth district. It was the first time in history that a Democrat has been elected to congress from that district.

Much of the comment is centered on the fact that the winner, Lester R. Johnson, denounced the administration's farm policy during his campaign. The district is predominantly rural.

It would seem these Washington sages are saying that the farmers are disappointed in the administration's farm program and have expressed themselves at the ballot box. They add that the administration must change its policy, and possibly fire Secretary of Agriculture Benson, or find more displeasure registered at the polls next year.

Even Republican National Chairman Leonard W. Hall admitted that the Wisconsin defeat was "not good." However, he discounted any national trend toward the Democrats. He said the administration still has the "support" of the country.

On the other hand, Democratic leaders were happy over the outcome and saw it as a national trend. Some went so far as to say it indicated a Democratic victory in the 1954 congressional elections.

Senator Kefauver of Tennessee, who campaigned for the winner, said the election showed "a general dissatisfaction with the farm, power, and money policies of the administration."

Another prominent Democrat said that unless the President changed his farm policy it was evident that he and his administration would sink with the present one.

The farm question was further highlighted by Secretary Benson's announcement that he is reorganizing the Agriculture Department. The plan would consolidate some branches of the agency and shift duties of others.

"This reorganization streamlines the department for better service to farm families and for simplification of internal organization," Benson said.

"The Department of Agriculture reorganized is designed to meet present day conditions particularly in its emphasis on marketing. With this reorganization we are ready to administer the farm programs which our current day agriculture requires."

Benson's plan immediately drew the ire of a number of Democratic senators. In particular, Senator Johnson of South Carolina, a member of the Senate Agricultural Committee, charged that under the plan the Farm Credit Administration and the Farmers Home Administration, the department's principal lending agencies, would be "smothered".

Other senators asked Benson to withhold the plan until congress can review it.

It would appear that the farm situation and the administration's farm policy is headed for a climax that may cause the greatest explosion that Washington has seen for a number of years.

There are many things in life more important than getting rich, but many learn what they are too late.

The children of our community deserve good schools and adequate recreational facilities. The absence of either is the fault of the parents. What are we going to do about our educational program?

SECURITY IN BONDS

Cotton growers, in observing the severe drought of last summer in the Southwest, probably noticed one thing: Droughts haven't slackened in intensity since the dust bowl days. They are still devastating. And they can hit almost any section of the country.

Many farmers who felt they were on pretty safe ground as far as their crop was concerned saw it vanish in a matter of days. Many picked up and left. No doubt it will be some time, if ever, that they go back to farming.

Treacherous as they may be, these disasters bring one important fact to the front. The farmer who weathers them must be a very substantial citizen. In addition, he must be on a good financial foundation. It takes money to pay the bills, crop or no crop. It takes money to continue, to tide the farm over until the next crop is in.

A farm reserve fund, set up in a good safe investment, is one way of making sure the financial foundation of the farm is in good shape. Many farmers have such funds to offset depreciation on farm machinery, to protect themselves against disasters such as sudden illness, crop failures, insect damage, floods and other farm emergencies. Others, while holding the funds in reserve for disaster, sincerely hope that eventually they will be used to pay for further education for the children, retirement or farm and home improvement. Whatever the purpose, the farm reserve fund is a handy friend in time of need.

By putting part of each year's earnings into U. S. Savings Bonds, any farmer can grow a reserve fund to serve his purposes. For every $75 the farmer saves this year, he'll get back $100 in less than 10 years. . .$134.68 in less than twenty. First time you are in your local bank ask your banker about the many features of the new, improved U. S. Savings Bonds.

STATES' TAX REVENUE UP

The Census Bureau reported recently that the several State governments collected $10,542,000,000 in taxes in 1952. This amounts to an average of more than $65 from each American.

The Bureau reported that local government taxes, such as city and county taxes, had amounted to an almost-equal figure, which means that the average American plunked out another $65 for local taxes. This more than $20,000,000,000 in state and local taxes, added to the Federal government's tax take, puts the total taxes collected per year well over the $80,000,000,000 mark.

Figured on the basis of an average tax for every adult American, the total breaks down into a figure of many hundreds of dollars for each taxpayer. This is well to keep in mind when the desirability of new taxes are considered. Of course, some new taxes must be added and as long as earnings continue to set records, tax receipts will also.

SCANNING THE NEWS

IT takes a lot of money to win elections. This fact is borne out by campaign finance figures political groups recently reported to congress. According to Congressional Quarterly tabulation $33 million was spent in efforts to swing last year's house, senate and Presidential elections.

This apparently made the 1952 race the most costly in U. S. history.

In reports required by federal law, Republican groups and candidates say they spent $13.8 million. Democratic groups and candidates spent $6.2 million. The remaining $3 million was spent by labor groups, minor parties and unaffiliated political groups.

The $33 million spending figure broke down, roughly into $17.8 million, primarily for the Presidential contest, and $5.2 million, covering the bulk of congressional spending.

● In a speech which most of Washington believes was designed to clarify a number of conflicting statements by administration officials concerning Russian atomic bomb and hydrogen-bomb developments, President Eisenhower succeeded in throwing a good scare in much of the nation.

"The Soviets now have the capability of atomic attack on us and such capability will increase with the passage of time," he stated flatly.

He said he had ordered all government officials to keep quiet on Russian developments unless they first check their statements with the Atomic Energy Commission.

"The Soviets now possess a stockpile of atomic weapons of conventional types and we must furthermore conclude that the powerful explosion of August 12 last was produced by a weapon, or the forerunner of a weapon, of power far in excess of the conventional types," the President said.

God's Plan for the Home.
Lesson for November 1: Deuteronomy 6: 4-9; Ephesians 5: 21—6: 4.
Golden Text: Psalms 68: 6.

The impressive passage from Deuteronomy shows that more than three thousand years ago the children of Israel were taught to love God and to teach his commandments to their sons and daughters. The words of the Lord were to be in the hearts of parents and were to be constantly brought to the attention of children.

God's plan for the home therefore includes proper care that all the relationships of the home shall be right. The husband and father is rightly to be regarded as the head of the home, but he is to be worthy of the place. The place he has is not to be that of a selfish tyrant. He is to be loving and kind toward his wife, and wise and affectionate and considerate toward his children.

Children are admonished to obey their parents, for that is right in the eyes of God. But the injunctions to parents, already noticed, indicate that parents should be worthy of obedience and should exemplify in their own living the high things they require of their children.

The Old Testament and the New unite in giving us a comprehensive plan of the Heavenly Father for the earthly home, and the members of every family should carefully consider their several places and the responsibilities involved.

DALE CARNEGIE

SEVERAL YEARS AGO Tom L. Williams, 1225 So. Park, San Angelo, Texas, developed serious heart trouble. The case was rather unusual because the trouble was not in his heart but in his head.

One evening after a busy day at the office, he rushed home, ate a hurried meal and dropped down in a chair to read a paper. He developed indigestion but the thought occurred to him that it was probably a heart attack. That thought grew until he could scarcely breathe and he thought he was living his last few moments. Eventually he felt better but the experience left him pretty well shaken. He didn't want to go to a doctor fearing confirmation of his fears. On the other hand he was afraid not to go. Eventually he did go and the doctor gave him a clean bill of health. But the problem wasn't licked yet. He reasoned that if he continued to worry about the situation he would bring on a real heart attack.

CARNEGIE

By analyzing his problem he convinced himself that if he had a good sound heart no amount of fright would bring on a fatal heart attack. In other words he replaced his fears and worries with positive, objective thoughts. He also reasoned that if he ever developed a heart condition, there was nothing he could do about the situation except live by good rules of health which was what he was doing anyway. Those objective thoughts did not replace the worry in one single moment. But by concentrating on them over a long period of time he was able to eliminate the fear and worry of heart attacks.

We have two books which will add to our knowledge of communist-threatened lands: Thomas Dewey's Journey to the Far Pacific, and Douglas' Strange Lands and Friendly People. Dewey's opinions of Japan, Korea, Okinawa, Formosa, Philippines, Hong Kong, Indo-China, Angkor, Malaya, Indonesia and the Pacific anchors seem too far away to be useful reading, but don't forget the communist. The second book came out two years ago, but is still valuable reading. William O. Douglas and his son traveled through countries south of the Soviet border. He found people friendly because he was friendly. It is very easy reading.

LOANS AVAILABLE TO INCREASE FARM STORAGE FACILITIES

There is an acute need for increased farm storage facilities in practically all the grain producing areas of the country. This need is particularly acute in Alabama, where there is very limited commercial storage space available for either grain or seeds

It is the farmer's responsibility to help solve this problem. To assist farmers in meeting this need, Commodity Credit Corporation will make loans available to farmers for constructing or acquiring farm storage facilities. Farm storage facility loans are available to producers having an interest in the production and storage of corn, soybeans, grain sorghum, peanuts, cottonseed, winter cover crop seed, and hay and pasture grass seeds. Loans will not be available to increase storage facilities for commodities purchased or for which the borrower had no interest in the production. Loans which will meet the requirements for eligible storage under the Commodity Credit Corporation Loan Program provided that it is needed and is of a suitable capacity to meet the needs of the individual farmer for the storage of his production. Loans will not be made for repairs, remodeling, maintenance of present facilities, or for the purchase of second-hand facilities.

Loans will be made for a maximum term of approximately four years, payable in equal annual principal payments, with interest at 4 percent on the unpaid balance. There is a provision in the program whereby the loan may be extended for one year in emergency cases; such as loss of crops due to drouth, or other conditions beyond the control of the borrower. The maximum amount that can be loaned is 42 cents per bushel of the rated capacity, or 80 percent of the cost, not including permanent foundation —whichever is the smaller.

In the case of moveable facilities, Commodity Credit Corporation will take as security a chattel mortgage; however, on immoveable facilities; that is, buildings which could not be moved without being demolished, a mortgage is required in the land on which the facility is constructed, in addition to a mortgage on the facility itself. These are recourse loans, and the borrower is required to carry insurance on the facility for the duration of the loan.

Complete details of the 1953 farm storage facility loan program may be obtained at the County PMA Office in Clanton, Ala.

SOIL CONSERVATION NEWS

Sericea seed harvest is now getting underway. B. F. Raspberry and his son, Coy, have their two machines in Hoyt Freeman's field and will move to their own field as soon as they finish with Hoyt's. The yield is fair considering the dry weather.

* * *

C. R. Childress has also started combining his sericea seed, and yields are about like the Raspberries are getting.

* * *

Coastal Bermuda on Charlie Patterson's farm, Bahia Grass on Sam Johnson's, Claude Harper's and others, Kudzu on Dewey Collins' farm all have the appearance of midspring grazing and the cows are looking fine in spite of the dry weather.

* * *

W. A. Williams has taken toll seed he got from combining Rescue Grass seed off his brother, R. O. Williams', farm and is planting on his Sericea sod. This will give a longer grazing season and more ground cover.

* * *

Coy Raspberry has just bought 70 acres of land on six-mile creek and is in the process of clearing up the old pasture and clearing new pasture to be seeded, fertilized and limed for a summer pasture.

Joe Smith, Jemison Route 1, is still doing an excellent job of conserving his soil, and growing enough cash crops and feed crops to balance out to be an outstanding example of conservation farming.

WHEN you're seasoning meat balls and want them to have distinctive flavor, try soaking some herbs in milk before adding them to the meat mixture.

Steak and onions go together, but usually the onions are fried. Why not try some baked ones for a delightful change? The large Spanish onions can be baked with cream, or they can be filled with sauteed or creamed mushrooms, before baking, to make them especially elegant.

Bits of pastry can be used to make turnovers for snacks or lunch boxes. Fill with a good combination of apricot marmalade mixed with cranberry jelly.

Baking powder biscuits take on new flavor if you add orange juice to replace the milk and some grated orange rind for flavor.

A lovely salad garnish which the men folk will like especially uses paper-thin slices of onion marinated in French dressing. Sprinkle the top of the salad with chopped parsley.

Mix flaked tuna fish with mustard sauce before spreading it on toast or crackers. Broil and you have an appetizing sandwich or snack.

Methodist M.Y.F. Has Hay Ride

The Methodist Youth Fellowship of the Clanton Methodist Church were given a trip to the ball game at Talladega last Friday in the way of a hay ride.

Mr. Clifford Traywick was gracious enough to furnish his truck and drive this group of young people on this outing. Rev. M. K. Vickers, Mrs. Clifford Traywick and Mr. and Mrs. "Chick" Fiquette were also along to chaperon. They stopped on the way for a picnic supper and just had a wonderful time going and coming.

The parents of this group of young people should encourage them to attend these services of their church and help the pastor and counselors to build up the attendance and interest.

This is wonderful training for your boy or girl!

After repeating the vows, four new members were presented the Fraternity Pin and were congratulated by members of the faculty.

Phi Alpha Mu is an organization of music majors, who have shown outstanding work in quality of performance, ability in composition and academic studies.

Miss Gray is secretary-treasurer of Calkins Music Club. She is the daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Zebbie Gray.

First Community Concert Of Season

The Chilton County Community Concert Association, which began as an interesting experiment in 1946, opened its doors in its eighth season to a capacity audience on Monday evening with the celebrated baritone, Edwin Steffe, was presented, in what perhaps was the most successful of any previous performance.

Its achievement can be counted in terms of glowing satisfaction, both to the delight of its members over the County, whose supreme efforts gave to this concert evening, its deeply appreciative audience, and, to those present, whose rapt attention bespoke the old-fashioned edification of "families together," parents and the large number of young people present enjoying this high type of amusement, defining the usefulness of music, with its fine emotional appeal as an irreplaceable necessity in their lives, was most gratifying.

Mr. Steffe's programme, which brought resoundnig applause, varied from operatic aria to French-art songs, German lieder and other groups. The magnificience of the lower range of his deep rich baritone was warmly felt in the Monologue from Andrea Chenier, as well as the pure beauty of tone clearly given in the German lieder group. The deafening applause was heart warming both to the artist, and his accompanist, Mr. Smith, for whom the middle portion of the programme was arranged, as they were brought back to the stage again and again.

Entering into the spirit of the nation whose songs he interpreted, the voice of the artist was eloquent with emotion in his closing group of folk songs, bringing to lovely tenderness the final surge of tone, in the beautiful finale; may the good Lord bless and keep you.

All in all the audience showed broad culture and good sportsmanship in accepting the unavoidable situation of the bad acoustical problem of the gynasium. This resulted from the difficulty of placing the exceptionally fine piano, sent from Birmingham. Upon arrival it was discovered that no entrance at the court house auditorium was large enough to admit it. Nothing daunted, the committee in charge, deftly and capably wrought this hasty change of scene to the Gymnasium of the High School.

The large number of young people present and their splendid morale is of special note.

Chilton County High F.H.A. Meeting

The C.C.H.S. F.H.A. met October 20, 1953, in the school library.

President Janice Young called the meeting to order. Martha Bell, secretary, called roll and read the minutes of the last meeting. The president then asked for the reports from the following committees:

Finance, Scrapbook, Publicity and Program.

The president asked for the old and new business. The new business the club took up was about our sending U.N. boxes to some foreign country. The club members voted on several countries but couldn't seem to decide on Korea or Japan. A suggestion was made that we send the boxes on to New York and let them decide where it was needed the most. We all agreed to send our boxes in that way.

For our U.N. Day program, Mrs. Edna Williams, our local director, gave a talk on Mrs. Pandit, the first woman in the U.N.

The meeting then adjourned until the next meeting. — Reporter, Beverly DeLoach.

NO SUPERMAN

Columbus, Ohio — Little Larry King, 8, learned the hard way that he was no "Superman." Poised on his second-floor fire escape, Larry adjusted the silk scarf around his head and spread the towels which hung, capelike, down his back. He took off and landed—in a hospital bed, with broken wrists.

'MAIL' BOX ALARMS

San Diego, Cal. — A Mexican woman walked up to a red "letter" box and pulled the hook. Instead of finding the letter slot, she soon heard screaming sirens and fire trucks. She explained her mistake to a policeman, who asked to see her passport. She had none and was booked on suspicion of illegal entry into this country. Her letter was mailed, though, in a green box.

ACROSS the DESK

Ideas from other editors

From The Italy News-Herald, Italy, Texas: The current furore over prisoners of war who do not wish to return to their homes reminds us of the old nursery rhyme about Little Bo-Peep's sheep, and to some extent the recommended solution to her predicament is applicable in the case of the POWs—"Leave them alone and they'll come home, wagging their tales behind them."

No American—be he a member of the armed forces, a government employee in Washington, a movie star, or just plain ordinary John Doe—has not had ample opportunity to know and understand the philosophy behind communism and democracy. In our opinion the only reason anyone accepts the communistic line is because he thinks he will be a "big shot" come the revolution. We believe the so-called brain washing to be largely "hog wash" and the American who is taken in by it is deserving of a full measure of communism.

Why become alarmed because 23 soldiers out of several thousand fall for the communist line? Hasn't it been shown that right here in the United States some of most prominent people have succumbed to the wiles of the communists? If these 23 men want to be communists, then let them be, but let them be communists in a communist country. It is too bad that there isn't some way we could send those here at home who espouse the false doctrine to China or Russia where they can get all of it they desire.

Families of the men who have succumbed to communism are suffering from the shock of the thing, to be sure, and they have our sympathy, but if there was a weakness in the character of their son that made him an easy victim of communist propaganda the chances are that that weakness is the family's fault . . .

We're not too worried about 23 American soldiers who want to be communists. We think the best "brain washing" they can get is a little real life under communism. Then they'll come home—probably dragging their tails behind them—but they'll have much more appreciation for the things that are American and should make much better citizens.

CONGRESSIONAL Glimpse

Q—I noticed recently that House Speaker Martin appointed a new Sergeant-at-Arms. What are his duties?

A—He is the chief disciplinary officer, empowered to enforce order on the floor, and, through direction of the presiding officer, can compel the attendance of absent members. In the House, he is also the disbursing officer, and has a symbol of office, the mace. Both House and Senate Sergeants-at-Arms offices derive from similar positions in both houses of the British Parliament. Speaker Martin named William R. Bonsell of Pennsylvania for the House post.

Q—I know that Sen. McCarthy and his investigating subcommittee have probed Executive departments. Has McCarthy ever investigated any Legislative agency?

A—Yes. The Government Printing Office, which is an agency of the Congress, was recently probed for alleged laxity of security procedures.

Q—Are there agencies other than the Government Printing Office which are directly under authority of the Legislative Branch?

A—Three. The General Accounting Office, the Library of Congress and the Botanic Garden. All other government agencies are either Executive or "independent" offices.

Q—President Eisenhower is the 33rd man to serve as President of the U. S. How many of his 32 predecessors also had military experience?

A—Twenty, from Washington to Truman, inclusive, had some military training or experience. Twelve, or more than one-third of the Presidents, including Eisenhower, were generals. The others: Washington, Jackson, William H. Harrison, Taylor, Pierce, Johnson, Grant, Hayes, Garfield, Arthur, and Benjamin Harrison.

My PET PEEVE
By W. Scott Boyd

THE wife loves to go into the woods in the fall and gather cattails, bittersweet, thistles, etc., which she dyes many colors for fall bouquets. Last Sunday afternoon we made our annual pilgrimage.

Everything goes along fine until we are in the woods. Then the wife sees a vine clinging to a tree which has a strange little cluster of berries on it.

She reached for it and I shouted: "Not that! That's poison ivy."

"Who ever heard of poison ivy having berries?" says she, and plucks a branch.

"Please," says I, "you know how poison ivy hurts you. I know what it is."

"Silence," says she, and proceeds to pluck a great arm load.

We finish our expedition and bring the stuff home. She deposits the poison ivy in a big blue water pitcher and puts it beside the fireplace.

That evening we have guests and they comment on how beautiful her pitcher of "stuff" is on the hearth. I notice, however, they all stay clear of it.

Shortly after they depart the [illegible] begins to scratch. Soon her arms and arms are broken out in a rash. Late that night I had to take her to the hospital.

The next afternoon when I visited her she looked anything but well.

"Well, how to you feel, dear?"

"Much better," says she.

"Good," says I, "poison ivy can be very painful sometimes."

She is silent a moment then says emphatically: "It was not poison ivy. And I don't care what the doctor says."

I did not pursue the subject for obvious reasons.

"I REMEMBER"
BY THE OLD TIMERS

From Mrs. Emma Cumback, Hinsdale, Illinois: I remember 83 years ago when we tapped maple trees on our farm and made syrup. The maple sap was put in long pans and boiled for a long time. The cooking was always done in the yard.

Also we made sorghum molasses. We raised the sugarcane and ran it through our own mill. At the end of the season we always gave a party which we called a "candy pull". Young folks came from all around.

In the blackberry season we would fill a wagon with tubs and buckets, take our lunch, and stay all day picking berries. We always came home with them filled.

Those were the good old days.

From Mrs. Davis Hill, Jamesport, Mo.: I remember walking over a mile to an old log school when a child. My father and grandfather attended school in the same log cabin. Many of the pupils and the teacher rode ponies to school. They were tied to a trough that had been made from a large oak tree.

I also remember we had a rope swing in our yard when I was a child. But it did not rate with me like the grapevine swing that we had on the creek. We could swing across the water and land on a sandbar on the other side. That swing will live in my memories always.

Day Of Big Circus Draws Near

More than 150 performers representing the best talent obtainable from the five continents of the world are to be seen with the big show this season.

As a prelude to the circus performance, a gloriously enchanting and stupendous spectacle entitled "La Persia," a gorgeous fiesta, is unfolded. To those who love fairy lore, it far exceeds in magnificence, brilliancy, gorgeousness and beauty the glories of any spectacle yet staged by this circus. There will be dancing girls; great companies of trained singers, orchestras of vast size, grand golden-toned organs and the crash of symbals. Yet this colossal production which daily amazes thousands, is but one feature of the King Bros. and Cristiani Combined Circus.

The internationally famous Cristiani family of riders with Lucio, the celebrated comedian, come from Europe to thrill and amaze you, along with the Jordon Chamberty Troupe, aerialist, and Hugo Zacchinni, shot from the mouth of a cannon 220 feet and Cannestrelli, the juggling marvel. Clowns headed by Jo Jo Lewis, Brownie Gudath, Frank Slivers, Fred Yale, will furnish fun for the little folks. King Bros. and Cristiani troupe of dancing horses, ridden by feminine riders will be seen.

There are 600 people with the big show which recently returned to America after a tour of South America. The 150 performers represent eight foreign countries. Twenty-two tents covering 12 acres of ground are used to house the transient city which at night is transported from town to town upon two special convoys.

The clean business methods and the magnitude of this great traveling enterprise have always made the King Bros. and Cristiani Circus welcome visitors to this community. This marvel, super show of 1,000 wonders, represents an immense investment.

The performances will be given at 2 and 8 p.m. The doors will open an hour earlier to permit an inspection of the immense zoo or to enjoy a concert of popular and operatic music by Prof. Lee Hinckley's military band.

LUCIO CRISTIANI AND SIS TERS CORKY AND HORTANS

A spectacular street parade with trumpeting bands, tooting calliopes, cumbersome elephants and humping camels will take possession of the downtown streets at 11:30 a.m. It will be the first old time circus parade staged here in 20 years. Children of all ages are promised something new in the way of thrills.

Williams-Partridge Vows Are Said

Marriage vows were exchanged at a candlelight service Saturday, October 10th, at 7:30 o'clock at Collins Chapel Baptist Church by Miss Bernice Williams, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. R. O. Williams, Route 1, Clanton, Ala., and Pfc. Donald S. Partridge, son of Mr. and Mrs. Harry M. Partridge, of Danvers, Massachusetts. Rev. Frank Hill officiated at the double ring ceremony.

The bridal party stood before a setting of southern smilax, palms and tiered candelabra holding luminous white tapers which provided light for the ceremony and reflected the elegant beauty of the wedding white gladioli.

The forty-eight tapers before the altar and on the pews at the center aisle were lighted by Miss Carolyn Lawley, from Tuscaloosa, Alabama, cousin of the bride and Miss Ruth Partridge of Danvers, Massachusetts, sister of the groom.

Mrs. B. V. Ray, Jr., played prenuptial music and the traditional wedding marches. Mr. Charles Williams, brother of the bride sang, "Always" and "The Lord's Prayer."

The bride, given in marriage by her father, wore a gown of white slipper satin with a stand-up collar and fastened at the back with self-covered buttons. The sleeves also fastened with covered buttons tapered to a petal point over the wrists. A peplum, also of white satin swept into a long train. Miss Edwina Williams, the bride's only sister, attended her as maid of honor. Her dress was of nile green tulle with a long pleated bodice and floor-length skirt. She wore a matching demi hat, a draped stole to match outlined her shoulders and she carried a bouquet of bronze chrysanthemums outlined and showered with nile green satin ribbon.

At the reception which was held at the home of the bride's parents, the bride's table was covered with a cloth of imported linen cut-work, with two burning tapers in crystal holders at each end of the three-tiered wedding cake. After the traditional cutting of the cake by the bride and groom it was served by Mrs. C. H. Lawley, from Tuscaloosa, Ala., aunt of the bride. BURIED WRONG MAN

Texarkana, Texas — Relatives, who just three weeks before had "buried" Van Iber Sellman, 46, were shocked to find that they had buried a man, who looked exactly like Sellman, who had been killed by a freight train. Sellman was in Long- view, Texas, when told of his "death" and although hale and hear- ty at the time, he collapsed from shock. Who the man was who had been buried is still a mystery.

Things we -SEE- and Hear

by "Tuck"

You've heard the old saying "They're going to the dogs." Well such is not the case with the traffic cops, but they are getting some much needed help from one of our canine friends. Through a small town the other day and observed an old hound dog standing in the middle of a fairly busy intersection appearing to be directing traffic. He almost had me convinced, but I noticed he was out of uniform and didn't have a whistle. Without it he didn't seem to have much authority, but he was slowing down traffic by the curiosity he was causing.

A certain banker friend of mind seems to be rather money-crazy. He always appreciates the little you bring in, but you get an odd feeling that he wishing it had been a larger sum. Very disheartening when you tell him how much you want to pay and he looks so unfriendly. He probably looks that way to you because you're behind a coupla' payments, or maybe he wishes you had a bigger note. Naw, he couldn't be that heartless.

Boy, have we got influence. Told the trashmen that our container wasn't completely "undemolishable" and darned if they didn't come back the next day and prove our point. Completely "demolished" it. I'm afraid we underestimated their ability to demolish things. Believe it or not, fellas, we do have other things to do besides put trash boxes that you tear up back together.

Like all uncle's and relatives, we love to brag on the little fellows. Have a nephew who's every bit of a year and a half and has a somewhat wild imagination. He sends us letters all the time with unique drawings on them that are quite impossible to figure out, but he's a very inspired artist. His latest is the breathtaking replica of a "wiggle worm carrying two sticks." Just what inspired this masterpiece I don't know, but I'm afraid he's been seeing too many men from Mars pictures on television. Confidentially, I don't think it was a wiggle worm at all, but a disguised picture of Eisenhower fishing in a crooked stream.

Speaking of Eisenhower, I heard a White House employee say the other day that he could truthfully say that he had heard no adverse criticism on the wanderings of the President. Boy, they really keep that fella' locked up, don't they? I don't imagine he will hear much around the White House steps, but as for the rest of the country it seems there are not as many "I Like Ike For President" fans as there were a year or so ago.

Football game's at home this week, folks, so be sure and turn out to see the game. Mr. Waters says you can get a ticket to the game at any of the drug stores. Reserved tickets so you'll have a place to sit if you're late. The end of the season is coming around, so if you haven't seen the Tigers in action yet, it should be an interesting game. The Tigers really have a spirited team this year and have been defeated only once. This was by a team that out-classed them and they won't be scheduling them again if rumors are of any weight. This is for more reasons than just being out-classed.

BIG INCREASE IN AUTOMOBILE TAGS SOLD

Montgomery, Ala. — State Revenue Commissioner Joe Edwards says Alabama car and truck owners purchased 814,477 license tags during the 1952-53 fiscal year.

However, revenues were $5,000,000 lower than they were the previous year when 728,487 license plates had been registered.

The income loss came about because the price of passenger car tags was cut to $3, starting last year.

Edwards said nearly all of the increase came in passenger car tags, which jumped from 538,813 in the 1951-52 year to 17,301 last year.

VETERANS EXEMPT FROM MILK LICENSE FEE

Montgomery, Ala.—Veterans who meet all the requirements of veterans business or occupational license exemption statutes may also claim exemption from payment of a retail milk license fee.

This is the ruling of the Alabama attorney general's office.

The retail milk license fee is imposed in areas of the state under the jurisdiction of the Milk Control Board. The fee is $2.50 per year.

In the opinion, the attorney general held that veterans who have at least 25 per cent disability, and meet the other requirements of the veterans exemption statutes, should be exempt from paying the milk license fee.

Auto Accident Injures People Sunday Night

Sunday night at 7:15 two cars were involved in a wreck at 4th Avenue and 9th Street.

Little Randy Connell, son of Mr. and Mrs. Tony Connell, was injured about the face, but was released after medical attention at Central Alabama Hospital, it is reported.

Harry Corley, driver of the second car, was jailed for drunk driving without a driver's license, Chief of Police C. E. Tucker stated. He was later released on bond.

Mrs. Tony Connell was a patient at Central Alabama Hospital where Connell and son, Randy, had been visiting. They were driving to town for some ice cream for Mrs. Connell when the accident occurred.

Also injured in the accident was Frank R. McMath, who is still in the hospital, extent of his injuries unknown. Hospital records show that he is from Alex City, Ala. He was a passenger in the Corley automobile, it is reported.

ADVENTIST CHURCH

1. What kind of "times" did Paul prophesy would come "in the last days?"

Ans. "This know also that in the last days perilous times shall come." II Tim. 3:1.

Note: The dictionary says the word "perilous" means "exposed to the danger of destruction." Our military men and atom bomb makers are constantly warning this nation that we are "exposed to the danger of destruction"; that overnight our great industrial cities could be destroyed and millions killed. The President said, "We live under an umbrella of fear." Such was not the case before the discovery of the atom and hydrogen bombs. It must be that we are "in the last days now."

These Are The Facts—

AGE OF MANY BUILDINGS ONE OF MANY SCHOOL PROBLEMS IN COUNTY

One of the chief worries of Chilton County school authorities in their long range planning is the age of school buildings, and the many maintenance problems that come of aged buildings. The following table will give us a general idea of the age problem:

37 classrooms are 30 or more years of age.
32 classrooms are between 25 and 30 years of age.
11 classrooms are between 20 and 25 years of age.
42 classrooms are between 15 and 20 years of age.
62 classrooms are between 10 and 15 years of age.
30 classrooms are less than 10 years of age.

Average age per classroom is 19.5 years.

An important point to keep in mind in considering the age of buildings is that all of the older buildings are of frame construction. In most cases they are built of good material. However, they have become difficult to maintain. The chief difficulties with buildings of this nature are:

1. They are expensive to maintain.
2. They are difficult and expensive to heat.
3. Lighting is poor.
4. They are difficult to adjust to a changing curriculum.
5. They are especially susceptible to fire.
6. Insurance rates are high.

The Board of Education is using masonry and concrete in its most recent construction, generally. This type of construction is more expensive but is more practical.

Many of the buildings in the older groups must be replaced in the not-too-distant future. With the tremendous increase in the cost of construction, this poses as a real problem. But, who has an answer?

Take a week or 10 days to get a sow on full feed after farrowing.

Thursday, for the first time in twenty years, the streets of Clanton will ring with the wonderful sounds of a circus parade.

This spectacular procession of trumpeting bands, tooting calliopes, cumbersome elephants, humping camels and many other exciting circus creatures will start their parade on Lay Dam Road at 11:30. They'll come from Lay Dam Road straight up Second Avenue (Main Street) and turn the corner at Jones Furniture Company, going north to the Clanton Motors on Highway 31. From there they will turn right again on Third Avenue and straight down in front of the City Park back to the Lay Dam Road and on out to the Airport.

The great King Bros. and Christiani Combined Circus graciously gives this gigantic parade as a prelude to their wonderful performances under the big-top.

The matinee will begin at 2 p.m. and the night's performance will begin at 8:00 p.m. The gates will open an hour earlier so the people will have a chance to view the many animals and enjoy the circus music that will start earlier for their benefit.

This circus, one of the world's largest is being brought to Clanton under the auspices of the Clanton Junior Chamber of Commerce.

Don't miss it. It's been a long time since Chilton County had a really big big-top.

SAFETY COUNCIL COMMENDS MOVING OF RURAL MAIL BOXES

Sylacauga, Ala. — A step by Postmaster General Arthur Summerfield to eliminate a severe rural traffic hazard today was commended by Alabama's citizen safety leader.

The hazard is created by rural mail carriers who must drive across oncoming traffic lanes to serve mail boxes on the left shoulder of highways. Summerfield instructed: "Where boxes are so located that they cannot be served by the carrier from his vehicle in the approved course of travel without violating traffic laws or regulations, the postmaster shall immediately contact the owner and request that the box be properly located."

He added that similar action was to be taken where the practice was not specifically illegal, but was nonetheless dangerous.

President Hugh Comer of the Alabama Safety Council said the plan "is extremely wise, and deserves the full support of every rural boxholder in Alabama, in the interest of saving lives. Rural postmen now hazard the life of every motorist in their area by having to cut across the highway to serve a mail box.

"The Post Office Department is naturally concerned for the safety of its carriers as well as all other motorists," the Sylacauga industrialist declared. "We're certain our rural residents will gladly help in this effort to remove dangers of traffic accidents."

Sheriff Gets Burglar Of Yeilding's Store

Billy Robinson, 19 years old, of Thorsby, was arrested by Sheriff J. Luther Kendrick Saturday and charged with the burglary of Yeilding's Monday, October 26th, at noon. He was lodged in the county jail charged with "burglary and grand larceny."

It was learned last week that young Robinson had purchased a car at Thorsby, although without work of any kind. He was questioned and later, it is reported by Sheriff Kendrick, admitted to taking the money.

Sheriff Kendrick also stated that Robinson had admitted to other robberies in his neighborhood and had sold some watches to Duke Gun & Watch Company here. Duke was charged with "receiving stolen property" and made bond of $500.

Cliff Klie, manager of Yeilding's, praised the Sheriff's Office for their work in the case and for their quick solution of the crime.

Pack Hatching Eggs In A Cool, Moist Container

Cases, fillers, and flats in which hatching eggs are to be packed should be held for several hours in refrigerated storage or in underground cellars.

Unless this is done, explains John Weeks, API Extension poultryman, these packages will rapidly absorb moisture from the eggs and increase storage temperature. "If cellars are used," he continues, "eggs gathered from the nest should be held overnight in wire baskets so they will lose their initial body heat."

Weeks advises poultrymen to deliver eggs to the hatchery in the early part of the day and to protect them from the sun during the trip.

Beef cattle fed grain while on winter grazing will be fatter and will bring a higher price per pound than those carried through the winter on grazing crops alone.

Four gallons of milk daily per 100 hens, plus grain and green feed free-choice, provide a good laying ration.
